THE NUN'S ROSE. Over the convent wall
Clambers a rose-vine sweet,
Letting its fragrant bloseoms fall
Into the dusty street.

Hither the weary guest, Drawn by the fresh perfume, Pauses awhile to dream and rest Under the spray of bloom:

Lingers to dream of those Who, in their idle hours,
Dwelling within the garden-close,
Wander among the flowers.

What of their holy deeds, Musses the dreamer there? Is it the reserves of beads Counted in quiet prayer? Is it the chants they sing? Is it the fasts they keep? Is it the words of comforting Spoken to those who weep

Nay: 'tis of her whose love Moved her to train this vine Over the convent wall above, Breathing a scent like wine.

Tokens these blossoms seem Speaking of her pure life: Petals that fall, like dream on dream, Into the world of strife! -Frank Dempster Thoman, in N. Y. Ledger.

A THRILLING ADVENTURE.

How a Monster Snake Was Bagged In South America.

A writer in the New York Ledger says:
While travelling in South America I experienced many adventures, one of which was particularly hazardous.

The sun had just passed the meridian in a cloudless sky; there was scarcely a bird to be seen, for the winged inhabitants of the forest, overcome by heat, had retired to the thickest shades: all would have been like midnight silence were it not that the shrill voice of the pipi-yo every now and then resounded from a distant tree. I was sitting with a "Horace" in my hand, when a negro with his little dog came down the hill in haste, and informed me that a snake had been discovered, and that it was a young one called the bushmaster, a rare and poisonous breed. I instantly rose up, and laying hold of an eight-foot lance which was close by me, started to have a look at the monster. I was barefoot, with an old hat and check shirt and trousers on, and a pair of braces to keep them up. The negro had his cutlass, and we ascended the hill; another negro, armed with a cutlass, joined us, judging from our pace that there was something to do. The little dog came along with us, and when we got about halfa mile in the forest, the negro stopped, and pointed to a fallen tree; all was still and silent. I told the negros not to stir from the place where they were, and to keep the little dog in the forest, the negro stopped, and pointed to a fallen tree; all was still and silent. I told the negros not to stir from the place where they were, and to keep the little degin, and that I would go on and reconnoiter. I advanced up to the place slowly and cautiously. At last I made the snake out; it was not poisonous, but large enough to have crushed any of us to death.

On ascertaining the size of the serpent, I retired slowly the way I came, and promised four dollars to the negro who had shown it to me, and one to the other who had joined us. Aware that the day was on the decline, and that the approach of night would be detrimental to the dissection, I thought that I would take it alive. I imagined, if I could strike it with the lance behind the head, and pin him to the ground, I might succeed in capturing him. When I told this to the negroes, they begged and entreated me to let them go for a gun and bring more force, as they were sure the snake would kill some of us; but I had been in search of a large serpent. but I had been in search of a large serpe out I had been in search of a large serpent for years, and now having come up with one, it did not become me to turn soft. So, taking a cutlass from one of the negroes, and then ranging both the sable slaves behind me, I told them to follow me and that I would cut them down if they offered to fiv.

When we got up to the place, the serpent had not stirred. I could see nothing of its head, and I judged by the folds of its body that it must be at the furthest side of his den. A species of woodbine had formed a complete mantel over the branches of the complete inantel over the branches of the failen tree, almost impervious to the rain or the rays of the sun. Probably the snake had resorted to this sequestered place for a length of time, as it bore the marks of an ancient settlement. I now took my knife, determining to cut away the woodbine, and break the twigs in the gentlest manner possible, till I could get a view of his head. One negro stood guard close behind me with the lance and near him the other with a cutlass. The cutlass which I had taken from the first negro was on the ground close by me in case of

After working in dead silence for a quar-After working in dead silence for a quarter of an hour, with one knee all the time on the ground, I had cleared away enough to see his head. It appeared coming out between the first and second coil of his body, and was flat on the ground. This was the very position I wished it to be in. I rose in silence, and retreated very slowly, making a sign to the negroes to do the same. We were at this time about twenty yards from the snake's den. I now ranged yards from the snake's den. I now ranged the negroes behind me, and told him who stood next to me to lay hold of the lance the moment I struck the snake, and that the moment I struck the snake, and that the other must attend my movements. It now only remained to take their cutlasses from them, for I was sure if I did not disarm them, they would be tempted to strike the snake in time of danger, and thus forever spoil his skin. On taking their cutlasses from them, if I might judge from their physiognomy, they seemed to consider it as a most intolerable act of tyranny on my part. Probably nothing kept them from bolting but the consolation that I was to be between them and the snake.

We went slowly on in silence, without

We went slowly on in silence, without moving our arms or heads, in order to prevent alarm as much as possible, lest the snake should glide off or attack us in salfdefense. I carried the lance perpendicu-larly before me, with the point about a foot defense. I carried the lance perpendicularly before me, with the point about a foot from the ground. The snake had not moved; and, on getting up to him, I struck him with the lance on the near side, just behind the neck, and pinned him to the ground. That moment the negro next to me seized the lance and held it firm in its place, while I dashed head foremost into the den to grapple with the snake, and to get hold of its tail before it could do any mischief. On being pinned to the ground with the lance, it gave a tremendous loud hiss, and the little dog ran away, howling.
We had a sharp fray in the den, the rotten sticks flying on all sides, and each party struggling for superiority. The second negro threw himself upon me, as I found I was not heavy enough, and the additional weight was of great service. I had now got a firm hold of the tail, and, after a violent struggle or two, the snake gave in. While a nrm hold of the string like in . While struggle or two, the snake gave in. While the first negro continued to hold the lance firm to the ground, and the other was helping me, I contrived to unloose my braces, and with them tied up the snake's helping me, I contrived to unloose my braces, and with them tied up the snake's mouth.

We contrived to make his snakeship twist round the shaft of the lance, and then prepared to convey it out of the forest. I stood at its head, and held it firmly under my arm, one negro supporting the body, and the other the tail. In this order we began to move slowly toward home, and reached it after resting every ten minutes, for the snake was too heavy for us to support it without stopping to recruit our strength. As we proceeded onward with it, it fought hard for freedom, but it was all in vain. The day was now too far spent to think of dissecting it. Had I killed it, a partial putrefaction would have taken place before morning. I had brought with me into the forest a strong bag, large enough to contain any animal I should want to dissect. I considered this the best mode of keeping alive wild animals when I was pressed for davlight, for the bag, yielding in every direction to their efforts, they would have nothing solid or fixed to work on, and thus would be prevented from making a hole through it. I say fixed, for after the mouth of the bag was closed, the bag itself was not fastened or tied to anything, but moved about wherever the animal inside caused it to roll. After securing afresh the mouth of the monster, it was forced into this bag, and left to its fact till morning.

I cannot say it allowed me to have a quiet night. My hammock was in the loft and left to its fate till morning.

I cannot say it allowed me to have a quiet night. My hammock was in the loft just above him, and the floor between us half gone to decay, so that in parts of it no boards intervened between his lodging and mine. He was very restless and fretful; and had Medusa been my wife, there could not have been more continued and disagreeable hissing in the bed-chamber that night. At daybreak I sent to borrow ten of the negroes who were cutting wood at a distance, as I judged it most prudent to have a good force, in case he should try to escape from the house when we opened the bag. However, nothing serious occurred. We untied the bag, kept him down by main force, and then I cut his throat. He bled like an ox. By six o'clock the same evening he was completely dissected. On measuring him afterward, he was found to be something more than fourteen feet leng. This species of anake is very rare, and much thicker, in proportion to his length, then any other make in the forest; one fourteen feet in length is as thick as a common box of twenty-four. After akin-ning this smake, I could easily get my head into its mouth, as the singular formation of the jaws admits of wonderful extension.

From the Boston Transcript.

A very funny plant in the government botanical garden is the so-called Barber plant, the leaves of which are used in some parts of the East by rubbing on the face to keep the beard from growing. It is not supposed to have any effect on a beard that is already rooted, but merely to act as a preventive, bove employing it to keep the hair from getting a start on their face. It is also employed by some Oriental people who desire to keep parts of their neads free from hair, as a matter of fashion. Also found in the botanical garden is the "cruel plant," which is so designated because it catches butterflies and kills them for sheer sport. Its flowers attract the poor little flutterer by the honey it offers, and when the victim lights upon it it grabe the butterfly by the head and holds it fast until the captive dies. Then the flower drops it on the ground and lies in wait for a fresh unfortunate. A curious looking tree from the Isthmus of Panams bears a round red fruit as big as an apple, which has this remarkable faculty, that its jutce, rubbed on tough beef or chicken, makes the meat tender by the chemical power it possesses to separate the flesh fibre. One is interested to observe in the botanical greenhouse three kinds of plants that have real consumption of the lungs—the leaves, of course, being the lungs of a plant. The disease is manifested by the turning of the leaves from green to white, the affection gradually spreading from one spot until, when a leaf is all white, it is just about to die. Cruelly enough, as it would seem, the gardeners only try to perpetuate the disease for the sake of beauty and curiosity, all plants of those varieties that are too healthy being thrown away.

A Diamond-set Tooth.

From the St. Paul Pioneer-Press.

Some time ago a New York paper told a story that a dentist had inserted a diamond in the tooth of a sprightly actress, with which she dazzled the dudes who nightly preempted the first rows of orchestra chairs. It remained for a St. Paul dentist, Dr. Ellis, to actually accomplish this feat. A short time ago a lady with a badly decayed upper lateral incisor entered his office, and, after examination, the doctor informed her that the only means of saving the tooth would be to substitute a gold crown. In a joking way he referred to the diamond story, and laughingly suggested that there was an excellent opportunity to try the experiment in her case. To his surprise his patient, who proved to be an actress, assented. Dr. Ellis procured a small-sized brilliant, and embedded it in the gold crown which he built on the remains of the natural predecessor.

The actress is delighted with the result, and declares that the next gem inserted shall be a carat in weight. The stone is not conspicuous, and might escape notice altogether, although a ray of artificial light makes it sparkle in a way likely to arouse curiosity. The actress is the nearest actual approach to the little girl in the fairy story from whose mouth gems dropped whenever she spoke. It is hardly probable that any such fashion will become general, although an inspection of the jewelled incleor shows that the effect is far less startling than would be expected.

A Silver Floor. From the New York Star.

From the New York Star.

Silver floors are properly supposed to exist only in the imagination of the authors of "The Arabian Nights," or of poets whose descriptions are somewhat exaggerated. But, going the other day into the office of Handy & Harman, dealers in bullion, in Nassau street, I found the floor of the room neatly paved with some hundreds of slabs of the shining white metal, each of them about the size and shape of an ordinary brick. Mr. Parker Handy of the firm informed me that they were assay bars—that is to say, silver that had passed through the Government stamp testifying to their being of the standard fineness and containing each a certain weight of the precious metal. He tells me that it is no unusual thing for the leading bullion houses here to handle in one day hundreds of thousands of ounces of silver. Just for the sake of the experience, I took a short walk up and down this silver pavement, but I cannot say that, outside of its appearance and the name of the thing, the high-priced material possesses any advantages over the style of ne of the th ing, the high-priced possesses any advantages over the style of pavement patronized by the department of public works.

Epoch.

Epoch.

The transition from long, lingering and painful sickness to robust health marks an epoch in the life of the individual. Such a remarkable event is treasured in the memory and the agency whereby the good health has been attained is gratefully blessed. Hence it is that so much is heard in praise of Electric Bitters. So many feel they owe their restoration to health to the use of the Great Alterative and Tonic. If you are troubled with any disease of Kidneys, Liver or Stomach, of long or short standing, you will surely find relief by use of Electric Bitters. Sold at 50c and $1 per bottle at W. T. Hoch's Drug Store, 137 and 129 North Queen street, Lancaster, Pa.

"Grunt It Out." The above is an old saw as savage as it is senseless. You can't "grunt out" dyspepsia, nor liver complaint, nor rervousness if they once get a good hold. They don't remove themselves in that way. The taking a few doses of Burdock Blood Bitters is better than "grunting it out." What we can cure let's not endure, Sold in Lancaster by W. T. A Big Tumor

Nome time last winter there appeared in the columns of the Bangor Commercial a description of a remarkable cure effected by the use of Brown's Sarsaparilla upon the person of Reuben Severance, a well-known and highly esteemed citizen of Upper Stillwater, Me.

BROWN'S SARSAPARILLA.

With a view to placing the facts in the case of Mr. Severance beyond dispute, and to present them in such a form as to satisfy the doubt of the most incredulous, a party of several gentle men, including Mr. Warren, of the Brown's Barsaparilla Company, and ex-Governor Davis, drove out a few days ago to the pleasant residence of Mr. Severance. His story as taken down from his own tips and sworn to before Gov. Davis, appears below.

time the symptoms grew rapidly more acu. The least exertion or strain upon the affect part would cause intense, tearing pain, like the sticking of needles into the fieth. I finally was obliged to abandon work entirely and took to my bed. I abandoned hope and prayed for death my bed. I abandoned hope and prayed for death to relieve my sufferings. Physicians examined me and said that nothing could relieve me but the cutting out of the tumor, and that the chances were that I would die under the operation. The risk they believed to be too great to justify it. At this time I com-menced taking Brown's Marseparilla as a

II, Reuben Severance, of Upper Stillwater, Me., do make the following statement of facts; About fourteen years ago a tumor came in my groin. It was at first about the size of a pea and did not trouble me much. It gradually increased in size, however, and was accomincreased in size, however, and was accom-panied by severe, darting pains. My whole sys-tem became disordered. My food did not di-get; had attacks of dizziness; roaring sounds in my ears; palpitation of the heart, these passed at times to come up in my throat; passed many sleepless nights. In the summer of 1885, the tumor had grown to such size that it extended nearly the whole distance to the knee, and weighed, I should think, at least six

A NEW AND PERMANENT DEPARTMENT

---AT---

ZAHM'S CORNER.

We have opened a DISTINCT OPTICAL Department in connection with our retail busi-ness, and have FITTED UP AN OFFICE ON THE SECOND FLOOR OF OUR BUILDING

Regular Graduate Optician,

Having had 10 years experience in the best hospitals of the country, and recommended by the best medical authority in the state. We do not propose to simply adjust correctly all cases of defective sight, and fit them with the correct lenses, but to perform all SURGI-CAL OPERATIONS necessary, and to place

ARUNDEL TINTED SPECTACLES,

The best lense for the money in the country.

The best lense for the money in the country, and having the advantages of a proper adjustment at a price within the reach of all, there will be no necessity for any one using glasses that are uncomfortable or unsuited to their eyes. We shall be pleased to have all suffering with any trouble of the eye, in whatever form, call and be properly treated, by in ADJUST-MENT and PRICE.
