HAVANA IN FAVOR.

MORE OF IT AND LESS SEED LEAF TO BE PLANTED THIS YEAR.

The Acreage to About Equal That of 1889—Packing Houses to Close This Week—Cased Leaf Business Good.

The crop of 1889 is coming into favor with buyers, and the past week there were numerous dickerings for large packings. Among the sales of this crop reported are packings of 350 cases by Diller & Rutter, of Intercourse, and 300 cases by M. M. Fry & Bro. There will be several sales of large lots consummated during the week.

The sale of old goods foot up 600 cases, sold principally by Lancaster packers to manufacturers in small lots.

The weather has been unfavorable for the planting of tobacco and very little has been set out by farmers. With good weather for a week or ten days the greater part of the crop of 1890 would be in the ground. Indications, from reports received from several sections, are that the acreage will be about the same as in 1889, with more Havana planted and less seed leaf.

Stray crops of the 1889 yield are still being picked up. About all that can be had is secured and in the warehouses of the packers, several dealers concluded their packing on Saturday and others will finish this week.

New York Market.

From the U. S. Tobacco Journal.

Wall street in its palmiest days could not have presented a more exciting picture than Water street does to-day. And the excitement and turmoil of the street are all about the Sumatra. Our importers who were in the habit of keeping only banking hours can now be met with in their offices at 7 o'clock in the morning and as late as 8 and 9 in the evening, toiling and sweating all day long in their shirt sleeves and disregarding the outside world as if it were existing only in imagination. To such an extent are their mental and physical powers absorbed in the sale of Sumatra. Brokers and buyers are crowding their offices constantly, fighting almost for the acquisition of any lot of Sumatra the importer may be disposed to let them have. Price and quality have become secondary considerations. When but a short time ago an importer thought himself lucky to be permitted to send a couple of sample bales representing a lot he is to-day importuned to reserve entire lots even without any sample whatever. To our own knowledge a lot of a hundred and seventy odd bales were ordered last week within 24 hours by three different parties and in our presence a lot of three hundred and eighty odd bales was sold which was expected to land only to-day. Quantities seem to have become of no object. Where a man bought formerly 25 bales he buys now 100 and more. Even the small manufacturers are making arrangements for supplies to last them from one to two years. The old stock has been nearly cleared off the market entirely. If the present excitement should continue, and the prospects are that it will rather grow than decrease, every bale even of the new importation will have left the importers' hands before the new duty will go into effect. For thus far the principal buyers have come from the West, where they understand much better the drift of political opinion than they do in New York. Transactions for the week amounted to 1,800 bales, prices going as high as $2.25 for old and $2.35 for new Sumatra. The next inscription will be in Bremen on the 30th inst. of 6,000 bales, and in Amsterdam on June 3 of 14,000. Of these inscriptions at least 5,000 bales will be secured for the American market.

In domestic and Havana leaf the market is comparatively quiet.

From the Leaf.

The amount of domestic leaf selling this week was of fair size, but no doubt considerable more would have been placed had not the boom in Sumatra leaf taken place, which tobacco occupied the attention of buyers to the greatest extent. The tariff question has made things very quiet in the growing sections.

The Philadelphia Market.

From the Tobacco Leaf.

Handling of domestic cigar leaf seems for the present to be laid on the shelf. The great desire to obtain Sumatra has overshadowed all other kinds of cigar leaf. The leaf that has been sold is that which is suitable for binders, and if light in body and the proper burn, a very satisfactory price is obtainable. The leaf trade cannot be called dull, but the sales are confined to limited margins.

Sumatra is booming splendidly at the present time. It has the call first and last.

Havana sells fairly and always agreeably, for it is the leaf tobacco of quality.

Receipts for the week—52 cases Connecticut, 287 cases Pennsylvania, 24 cases Ohio, 36 cases Little Dutch, 332 cases Wisconsin, 84 cases York state, 254 bales Sumatra, 283 bales Havana and 202 hhds Virginia and Western leaf tobacco.

Sales have been 44 cases Connecticut, 260 cases Pennsylvania, 21 cases Ohio, 26 cases Little Dutch, 419 cases Wisconsin, 72 cases York state, 184 bales Sumatra, 159 bales Havana.

J. S. Gans' Son's Report.

Sales of seed leaf tobacco reported by J. S. Gans' son, tobacco' broker, No. 131 Water street, New York, for the week ending May 26, 1890:

380 cases 1887-88 state Havana, 12½ to 14½; 260 cases 1888 New England Havana, 15½ to 37½; 300 cases 1888 Wisconsin Havana, 10 to 13; 168 cases 1888 Pennsylvania seed leaf, 12½ to 14; 280 cases 1888 Pennsylvania Havana, 13 to 14; 250 cases sundries 6½ to 35. Total, 1,638 cases.

A Novel Cause of a Bad Boy's Death.

Freddie McQuade is a 12 year-old school boy of Lowell, Mass., whose pernicious practice of indulging in profane language so tried the patience of his teacher, Miss Georgia A. Herndon, that she decided to discipline the lad, in a way that was novel to say the least. She called Freddie to her in the presence of the older boys and girls, and scoured his mouth with a cloth wet with soap. Freddie screamed and made all sorts of wry faces, and through the soap suds in his teeth there were emitted some swear-words even more profane than any in his ordinary vocabulary.

That night he was taken sick. He vomited continually and tossed on his bed with a fever. Later the doctor found he had diphtheria, from which he died after a long illness. Now the boy's parents have decided to enter suit against Miss Herndon for the loss of the child's services. They claim that the application of soap was the original cause of death.

Miss Herndon, for her part, says that the parents of many of her scholars had complained of the McQuade boy's profanity, and she rubbed his mouth with soap, as it appeared to be the most effective curative at hand, and she noticed no ill effects from its use. Her counsel advises her not to pay damages without contesting the suit.

Man and Watch Missing.

Chief of Police Borger received a dispatch last evening from W. K. Lutz, of Reinhold Station, on the Reading & Columbia railroad, asking him to be on the lookout for a man 5 feet feet seven inches high, having a crooked nose, light pants, dark cutaway coat and a black derby hat. He is wanted at that place for stealing a gold watch. It was probably the supposition that the man came to Lancaster on the evening train, which arrives at 8 o'clock. The dispatch was not received, however, until almost nine o'clock, when it was too late for an officer to meet the train.

At the Mœnnerchor Theatre.

Notwithstanding the bad weather last evening an entertainment was given at the Mœnnerchor theatre. The canvas would not keep out the rain and as the people did not care to sit in the damp there was not a great audience present. The performers, including Taylor, the Dutch comedian, and Morton, Reno and Mack, a trio of grotesque dancers, were very clever.

A Train Load of Emigrants.

This morning at seven o'clock an extra train passed through this city consisting of eleven cars. All of them were loaded with emigrants, who were bound for different places in the West. None of them will stop east of Pittsburg.

HE PULLED A REVOLVER.

Threatened to Kill Constable Crawford. Discharged Upon Payment of Costs.

Peter Steinhower is a farm hand employed near Parkesburg. He could not work yesterday on account of the weather and came to Lancaster to have a good time. He turned up at the Lion brewery saloon late in the night very much under the influence of liquor. He wanted to be treated and when told that he had enough he pulled a large revolver from his pocket and flourished it, to the great danger of those in the barroom. Constables Crawford and Merringer happened along and they feared that Steinhower would shoot somebody. Crawford took hold of him to remove him from the barroom, Steinhower resisted and pulled out his revolver, threatening to shoot the officer. Constable Merringer went to Crawford's assistance and took the revolver from him. Steinhower was finally ejected and taken to Alderman Barr's office. There he became very noisy and abusive. He was finally removed to the station house, where he spent the night.

This morning he was very penitent. He did not remember anything that had taken place. He pleaded with the officers not to press the suit against him of attempting to shoot and carrying concealed deadly weapons and promised to leave town at once. It was finally agreed that if he paid the costs he would be discharged. He paid the bill, $10, and as he did so remarked that it was an expensive drunk and that Lancaster saw him for the last time.

Died an Innocent Convict.

The board of pardons has just been telegraphed from Pittsburg that one of the applicants for its intervention died of typhoid fever at the Western penitentiary. He was young Herman Fitzgerald, an Irishman, who had been sentenced last autumn to ten years and six months confinement for the burning of a barn in Juniata county, having falsely confessed that he did it in order to get six months in jail and escape the persecutions of tormentors in Perry county who had kept taunting him about a little love affair over which he was very bashful. The board expected to grant his pardon at its next sitting.

Trying to Purchase Valley Forge.

Ex-Mayor Kenney, of Reading, and District Attorney Koch, of Pottsville, have returned from their mission to Washington, whither they went for the purpose of securing an appropriation for the purchase of additional grounds to the "Washington's Headquarters" tract at Valley Forge for the Patriotic Order Sons of America.

They received assurances of aid from Congressmen Brunner, Reilly, Mutchler, O'Neil and others, as well as from Senators Cameron, Voorhees and a number of others. The amount asked for is $25,000. The committee made an effort to secure the promise of the presence of President Harrison at the one-hundred-and-twelfth anniversary of the Valley Forge celebration, and it is probable that he will accompany Senator Voorhees, who will deliver an oration on the occasion.

He Is All Right.

From the Grand Army News.

Lancaster's Democratic mayor has not forgotten the old soldier in making his appointments. The chief of police, a number of the policemen and the lockup keeper wore the government blue. Neither is our chief magistrate going to allow unsightly obstacles to obstruct the view or mar the beauty of our soldiers' monument, as evinced by his prompt and decisive action concerning the electric railway pole.

A Constable Prosecuted.

Andrew Boddy has made a complaint against Constable Price for felonious assault, in pointing a pistol at him. Boddy claims that he was taking a brother-in-law of Price to his home, when Price met him, and without provocation pulled out a pistol and pointed it at him. The other side of the story is that Boddy was drunk and insulting people, and Price was about arresting Boddy when he started to run away. He then pulled out his revolver to scare him, but not with the intention of shooting. Bail has been entered.

Bound For Europe.

Arnold Haas and wife left Lancaster on this morning's early train for New York. They sail to-morrow on the steamer Friesland for Europe. They will visit their old homes in Switzerland. This is Mr. Haas' first trip home since he came to America twenty-four years ago.

The Reading Railroad company has made arrangements to run a special train from Lancaster to Penryn on Friday afternoon, leaving King street at 2 o'clock. This will enable people of this city to spend the day in the park and see Capt. Paul Boyton's exhibition without any charge in addition to railroad fare.

STRUCK THE COLLECTOR.

THOMAS CONLIN DECLINES TO PAY THE SCHOOL TAX DEMANDED FROM HIM.

Charles Lippold In Attempting to Enforce the Provisions of His Warrant Is Assaulted—Conlin Is Arrested.

Thomas Conlin, clerk at the Stevens house, has gotten himself into trouble. To-day Charles Lippold, collector of delinquent school tax, called on Conlin for $1.05 school tax. Conlin refused to pay it. The collector then read the warrant issued to him in accordance to law by the president of the school board. This warrant directs the collector to levy on the goods and chattels of the delinquent, and if there be no goods and chattels to take the body of the delinquent and lodge him in the county jail, there to remain until the tax is paid or he be discharged by due process of law.

After reading the warrant demand was was again made and again Conlin refused to pay. The collector said he proposed to carry out the directions issued and took hold of Conlin. About the time that Mr. Lippold took hold of him he was struck by Conlin. The blow obliged him to release his hold, and, not caring to have any rough and tumble fight, the collector left and consulted the judiciary committee of the board. He was advised to make a criminal complaint and he went before Alderman Barr. There a charge was preferred against Conlin for "knowingly, willfully and forcibly obstructing, resisting and assaulting an officer in the execution of legal process." A warrant was placed in the hands of Constable Crawford and when served Conlin will give bail.

Conlin went on the presumption that the collector could not arrest him. In that he is mistaken. The collector's warrant is broad and sweeping, and under it he clearly has the right to arrest and imprison for failure to pay school tax, when the demand is made for the same in accordance with law.

The board of directors will probably make a test case of the present arrest, and if the law is as it is construed by the board's legal members, it will be an expensive case for Mr. Conlin.

A MUDDY PICNIC.

How An Afternoon and Evening Was Spent at Tell's Hain.

At Tell's Hain yesterday afternoon the "Jolly Bachelors," a social organization composed of young men who have headquarters in Locher's hall, Centre Square, gave a picnic. Although the rain poured down hard all afternoon it interfered very little with the attendance, as people who make up their minds to attend affairs of this kind don't allow a little thing like rain to keep them away. There was quite a large crowd present and the cars of the East End line did a good business. A great many women and girls were on the grounds. The bills stated that no improper characters would be allowed on the grounds, but there was no discrimination. Everybody that had "the price" was admitted and many besides. The result was that the people were pretty well mixed. The rain made the ground very muddy and the women, many of whom wore summer suits, paraded around in the soft earth together with the men. The dancing floor was covered with a thick coating of mud, yet those who slid around upon it thought they were enjoying themselves.

During the afternoon a fight was started and a number of young men, including the Witch boys, from the eastern part of the town, pounced upon Charles Breckenridge. The latter made it very warm for the whole of them until he slipped in the mud, when several fellows jumped him, striking and kicking him in the face and about the body. Men rolled about in the mud until they looked like turtles, and the fight was finally brought to a close by Constable Billy Price, who had not gone to the grounds to keep the peace but to have some fun. He pulled a blackjack but made no attempt whatever to arrest any of the fighters, although he knew all. The managers of the affair claim that they did all in their power to prevent disorder, yet they did not have an officer of any kind on the grounds to keep order nor will they prosecute any of the offending people. Breckenridge has sued the Witchs at Alderman Halbach's for assault and battery.

As a mud picnic it was a great success, and the managers are said to have made some money. As it was gotten up for that purpose they are perfectly satisfied.

IMPALED BY AN ELEPHANT.

Terrible Death Of a Noted and Wealthy Explorer.

Details of the death of Frank L. James, the well known African explorer and author, have been cabled his brother in New York. He was impaled on the tusk of an enraged elephant, and though he lived for forty minutes after the fatal thrust, the shock had so deadened his senses that he felt no pain. He was born in England, and a graduate of Cambridge, his American father residing there for business reasons. Mr. James first distinguished himself by daring exploration of the country of the Base, a much dreaded and little known tribe on the borders of Abyssinia. He published a book on the wild tribes of the Soudan, and then undertook the exploration of the country of the Somali, which was declared by the president of the geographical society to be one of the most difficult feats of all recent African travel. When killed he was visiting the Gaboon river for a little hunting on his way to South America in his yacht with a small party of friends. He was very wealthy, thirty-nine and unmarried, a member of the Royal Geographical society and the Royal Yacht club, his vessel being a counterpart of the famous Sunbeam of Lord Brassy.

STRUCK A STONE PILE.

A Couple of Young Men Are Thrown From a Wagon.

Last evening Louis Norbeck and Elmer Leeds, two young men of this city, met with an accident on their return trip from the picnic at Tell's Hain. They were driving a horse hitched to a covered wagon and Norbeck had the reins. They were coming along at a very rapid rate and before they knew where they were the wagon struck a pile of stones which are lying near the head of the almshouse lane. The wagon was upset and but slightly broken. Both of the occupants were thrown out and it was first believed that Norbeck was seriously hurt, as he lay unconscious for some time. He finally came around all right, but he was pretty badly bruised up. A number of people who came along the pike assisted the pair to get into the wagon, as the horse did not run far, and they drove to town.

Weaver, Frank Fitzgerald, Samuel Greiner and Chas. A. Villee, gathered at his house. They had an elegant supper and a highly enjoyable evening, during which Mr. Villee presented Mr. Hoffmeier with a fine gold-headed cane, Mr. Shenck making the presentation speech. Mr. Kennedy then arose and on behalf of Mr. Villee's friends made that gentleman a similar present.

The automatic fire extinguishor on the third floor of one of the Globe woolen mills in Utica, N. Y., burst on Monday and flooded the floors below. The damage is estimated at over $50,000.

Among the world's fair commissioners at large, appointed by President Harrison on Monday, are Peter A. B. Widener, Philadelphia, and Jno W. Chalfant, Pittsburg.

Michael Sheehan, aged 21 years, attempted to imitate Steve Brodie by jumping from the Mohawk river bridge, at Amsterdam, N. Y., on Sunday. The distance is over 30 feet. Sheehan jumped head first, and after striking the water did not rise again.

William Blaney is in jail at Baltimore, awaiting trial for the murder of his grandmother and aunt in their home in that city. On Monday his brother, George Blaney, was convicted of a burglary committed near the scene of the murder, and was sentenced to the penitentiary for five years.

Henry Little, a pioneer of Kalamazoo county, Michigan, died on Sunday. He was born at Cambridge, New York, in the year 1797, and went to Michigan in 1831. He possessed a wonderful memory. He recently celebrated his 93d birthday, on which occasion he ate to heartily, causing his death.

James Hinds, a policeman in Madison, Indiana, shot and fatally wounded Carlos Aulte on Monday. Aulte had been paying attention to Hinds' daughter for some time, against the wishes of her father. He is said to be an estimable young man, and the shooting, it is reported, has provoked intense indignation against Hinds.

William E. Lockwood, of Philadelphia, addressed the House committee on railroads and canals on Monday in support of the O'Neil bill, appropriating $25,000 to meet the cost of experiments to determine the force of the so-called hammer blow of a locomotive driving wheel. Mr. Lockwood submitted drawings of a locomotive, which will be exhibited to the committee, that embodies a new principle in locomotive building, intended to obviate the dreaded hammer blow, which Mr. Lockwood said had been estimated at nine tons on each side at each revolution.

Prof. Lyte Is Ambidextrous.

From the Philadelphia Inquirer.

Professor Eliphalet Oram Lyte, principal of the Millersville Normal school, loiters at the Lafayette when business brings him to Philadelphia. He is a square-shouldered, athletic, keen-looking man. Fifteen years ago he was a base ball enthusiast. He captained the Normal nine with such success that visiting clubs generally went to grass when they faced Lyte in the pitcher's box. Among his boys on the diamond were T. Frank Penman, now collector of internal revenue for the Scranton-Wilkesbarre district, and William J. Reiff, of the state department at Harrisburg. The professor then had a trick of throwing the ball with either his left hand or his right hand, and now-a-days this ambidextrous quality finds play in the class room when he puts a proposition on the blackboard equally well with either hand. Still more remarkable is Professor's Lyte's ability to write two different sentences, one with each hand, simultaneously. In a general way the habit of ambidexterity is one to which young children can easily be trained. The case of the late Judge Jeremiah Black illustrates one advantage which the ambidextrous man has over his fellow mortals. Only a year or two prior to his death a railroad accident lamed his right arm and compelled him to teach his left hand the chirographic art. This serves to illustrate not only the patience and persistence of Judge Black in his old age but emphasizes one of the manifold advantages of ambidexterity.

Stanley Replies to Lord Salisbury.

The London Times on Monday morning printed a long and caustic letter from Mr. Stanley, in reply to the recent utterances of Lord Salisbury. Mr. Stanley declares that he has nothing but a sentimental interest in any part of Africa, but he says that, on finding that many of his friends have embarked their money in an African enterprise on the strength of a charter not worth a counterfeit sixpence, unless the terms of the understanding with Germany are rigidly adhered to, and being every indication of a disposition on the part of the government to help Germans instead of Englishmen, he has urged his friends to discover the exact limits of their territory. He wishes no quarrel with either Germany or England, but says boldly that if the German colonial demands be granted it would be more economical to make Germany a gift of the whole British sphere. Then British investors might obtain so many shillings for the pounds they so credulously have been victimized out of.

In conclusion he declares that the German sphere is the finest in Africa, and adds: "Still their cry is 'Give, give!' If you think they are better adapted than the English to civilize the African, do nothing half-heartedly. Yield all, including Egypt. Never a word of protest shall you hear from me. Excessive amiability may become an infirmity, and the infirmity of negligence, like other diseases, grows till it ends in chronic senility."

Rev. Cort In Town.

Rev. Cyrus Cort, of Greencastle, Pa., is in this city. He is the guest of A. J. Eberly, esq., and came to attend the meeting of the committee appointed by the general synod of the Reformed church to prepare a digest. The committee meets to-day at Franklin and Marshall college.

Rev. Cort is the father of Ambrose Cort, of the sophomore class of F. & M., and also a cousin N. A. Cort, of the same class. Rev. Cort belonged to the class of 1860. During the late Prohibition campaign Rev. Cort opposed the amendment as wrong in principle and impracticable. For this he was denounced by Prohibition preachers and other extremists all over the state. But the people of Franklin county and Cumberland Valley as well as of the state at large endorsed this position. Lately a few Prohibition Lutherans in Chambersburg objected to having Rev. Cort fill their pulpit by appointment of Mercersburg classis. But public sentiment emphatically condemned their proscriptive intolerance.

Dedicated a Fine Hall.

The Sons of America of Lebanon dedicated their fine $60,000 hall on Monday. The building has a brownstone front, has a width of 67 feet and depth of 75 feet in a 200-foot lot. It contains stores, offices and fine meeting rooms for the camps of the order. The rain marred very much of the outside demonstration and spoiled a parade in which 8,000 Sons of America were expected to take part. Nevertheless, the procession was a creditable one. Camps from all over Eastern Pennsylvania were present.

The following officers were present at the dedication: National master of forms and ceremonies, W. J. Stoner, of Philadelphia; state officers: J. R. Kenney, of Reading, state president; Henry S. Bissex, Philadelphia, state vice president; Irvin S. Smith, Reading, state treasurer; Wm. Weand, Philadelphia, state secretary; John R. Mast, Reading, state assistant secretary; H. J. Koch, Pottsville, state marshal; Rev. J. B. May, Birdsboro, state chaplain; Philip S. Hess, state sergeant-at-arms; Furman M. Mayhue, state assistant sergeant-at-arms.

Immediately after the parade Mayor Harbeson, Hon. Thomas H. Capp, ex-Mayor Kenney and others delivered addresses in the hall. The total number of camps in Pennsylvania is now 520; total number of members, 40,000; total value of camps, $492,071.65.

The games of base ball yesterday were: National League—Cincinnati 4, Boston 2; New York 5, Chicago 3; Brooklyn 8, Cleveland 2.

Players' League—Philadelphia 6, Buffalo 0 (5 innings); Chicago 9, Boston 8; Cleveland 6, New York 2; Brooklyn 15, Pittsburg 7.

American Association—Brooklyn 8, Columbus 4.

Both Pittsburg clubs have been losing money, and the National League team will go under.

Ben Myers, catcher of a colored base ball club, while playing at Montgomery, Ala., on Monday, was struck in the mouth by a ball thrown by the pitcher, and instantly killed.

Yesterday Manager Farrington, of Harrisburg, notified Hoverter, Meiklejohn and Deasley that they were to be released. The people of Harrisburg are kicking about the release of Hoverter, as he is a home man and a very gentlemanly player.

We are sorry to see Manager Goodhart has decided to quit. Had he secured the power of the press in his own city things might have been different, but all the Lancaster papers seemed to have a grudge against him.—Altoona Tribune.

There is not a paper in this city that has a grudge against Manager Goodhart, even if he thinks or says so, and it is not likely that he does. They devoted as much space as they saw fit to base ball, and criticised the playing as they had a perfect right to do. Newspapers cannot compel people to go to games if they don't wish to do so, and it is certain that they should not be expected to put up financial backing for a team. Lancaster has had as fine ball teams as Altoona ever had and the newspapers did not make or break them.

Some of the newspapers in towns that still have Inter-state ball teams are kicking because Lancaster dropped out. The season is long yet, and they won't bet much money that two or more clubs do not go up, or that there will be a league at all by the end of the season.

The Mœnnerchor Ball.

Although the weather was very bad last night, and it affected the attendance at the calico ball of the Mœnnerchor, there was a good crowd present nevertheless. Each lady that attended the ball to dance was attired in a calico dress made for the occasion. She brought with her a necktie of the same material which she deposited as she entered the hall. These ties were placed in a box and as the gentlemen entered each received one. Upon going up stairs each hunted up the lady that wore the dress to match the necktie and the two were partners for the promenade. It was half-past nine o'clock when the promenade took place and after that there was dancing, until a late hour, to Taylor's orchestra. It was altogether a very pleasant affair.

THE SCHUETZEN VEREIN.

They Will Open Their New Range On Next Monday.

The Lancaster Schuetzen Verein are at present one of this city's most flourishing organizations. They have a membership of 250 now and others are constantly joining. On next Monday the society will open their new rifle range on the land of Frederick Engle, at Graeff's Landing. On that day the society will have a gala time, and a number of strangers will be here, including shooters from the North End, Columbia and Quarryville rifle clubs. They will meet at Kircher's hotel, at Lime and East King streets, at 1 o'clock, at which time the gold badge, furnished by James R. Donnelly, of the Shamrock hotel, will be presented to the society. Afterwards the members, with their guests, will form in line and march to Graeff's Landing behind the Iroquois band. It is expected that the society will turn out a large number of men. The mayor of the city and other people of prominence have been invited to be present at the opening of the range.

At Borger's hotel there will be a lunch and plenty of entertainment, and during the remainder of the afternoon there will be shooting. Among the matches there will be one for the Shamrock badge, which will be contested for by members residing in the city only.

Mrs. Rebecca McComsey, an old and well known lady, wife of Samuel McComsey, died late on Monday afternoon at her home, No. 209 North Prince street. When he saw the officer near him he started to run but did not get far until he was captured. This morning Alderman Halbach gave him five days in jail.

Pay Your Revenue Tax.

Delamater Wins in Franklin.

CHAMBERSBURG, Pa., May 27.—The Franklin county Republicans held their convention to-day to elect two state delegates. The convention was a very spirited one, and the anti-Delamater men fought bravely and nobly, but of no avail, as the Delamater men were largely in the majority, and were supported by the county committee, headed by Chairman Seiders. The following delegates were put in nomination: County Chairman John R. Seiders and Ed. S. Snively, Delamater candidates, and Col. George B. Weistling and William Button, Hasting candidates. Seiders and Snively were elected by large majorities. The Montooth and Osborne men voted with the Delamater men, and some of Hastings' champions did likewise. The sentiment of the county is almost a unit for Stone. The results are decidedly a big victory for Delamater.

Reed's Successor Follows Him.

WASHINGTON, May 27.—In the House to-day Mr. McKinley, of Ohio, submitted a conference report upon the customs administrative bill. Mr. McMillin, of Tennessee, (one of the conferees) said that he declined to agree to the report for the reason that he believed that the bill would increase taxation. McKinley said it was a bill not to increase the rates of duty, but to prevent frauds upon the revenue. The conference report was adopted—yeas 127; nays 13—the speaker pro tem. counting a quorum. The Democrats as a rule refrained from voting. The House then went into committee of the whole on the river and harbor appropriation bill.
