"FORGETTING IS A VICTORY." R. H. Paliman's Decoration Day Sermon

nuch of the bitterness and strife already forgetten; can strew the graves without the herce excitement which made the obthe fierce excitement which made the ob-servance almost dangerous in former days. Not a generation has passed, and the blue and the gray meet together and scatter flowers on the same grave. It is a great victory-this forgetting: when honor is paid only to the heroic deeds of a some-time enemy, to the noble acts men have performed for conscience' sake. In this beautiful observance the spirit of the hero slain seems to breathe forth from the grave, betcht with flowers strewn by loving bright with flowers strewn by loving hands, and cry out, 'Live honestly, work honestly, vote honestly for this country, for which we gave up our lives, the land of the free, the home of the brave!"

A Black Prince Astray.

From the N. Y. Star.

From the N. Y. Star. I met a tall, lithe, fine-looking African about a week ago who has something of a history. He was quite as black as the typical ace of spades is supposed to be, with a high forehead, high cheek bones, and a clear, intelligent eye. He spoke English with some difficulty, and French rather fluently, but when he used his native dialect the words rolled out with a psculiarly soft, musical sound. In English his name is Francis N. Smith, but his native or real name is Apirapiti Akuun-dayo.

native or real name is Apirapiti Akuun-dayo. "I am a native of the Uryoruba conntry, a district about four hundred miles square, situated north of the Congo, and about a month's journey inland from Lagos, on the west coast of Africa, "he told me. "It is governed by a king named Ondesse, who is my uncle, and my father, Akakie, holds a rank there corresponding to that of the Prince of Wales in England. His tille is Argaraogun. We have a society there something like the Free Masons, and they have a temple called Egbale M' Babalawo. I do not belong to the society, though my father is at the head of it, because I am only twenty-five years of age, and they al-low no person under thirty years of age to enter the temple. Whenever any stranger low no person under thirty years of age to enter the temple. Whenever any stranger comes to our country in distress, whoever he maybe, whether a trader or a missionary, this society helps to feed him till he can get a chance to go to his friends. No, I never saw Stanley, but I heard a great deal about him at Sierra Leone. We have s good many white visitors, missionaries and traders principally. They buy ivory and other things from our people, in ex-change for ornaments and cotton cloth. Since I have been in America I have seen some ornaments in the store windows like those the traders bring out to Africa. I Since I have been in America I have seen some ornaments in the store windows like those the traders bring out to Africa. I saw a funny little negro boy, made of pasteboard and hung on a wire so that he danced in a box, in a store the other day, and I shall take it home with me when I go. That will make everybody laugh there. You must not think that my people are all savages because they live in Central Africa. The missionaries have been among us for a good many years. Our people never have been cannibals. Some of the tribes fight among themselves; but I never heard of cannibals in Uryoruba. I don't think there are so many cannibals in Africa as some people I have talked with seemed to think. I have been to the school at Sierra Leone several times, and the last time I started from my country, about a year ago, and traveled by caravan for a month to Lagos; then I went on board a steamer, the St. from my country, about a year ago, and traveled by caravan for a month to Lagos ; then I went on board a steamer, the St. Anne, for the trip to Sierra Leone. Well, the steamer sunk, and several of us were picked up by a ship sailing to America. I nearly starved, because I thought white people here would help me just as in my country they help the white people who are strangers, but they didn't help me, and finally I met a man whom I had seen in Sierra Leone, and he helped me. I tried to lecture, but couldn't speak English well enough. My country is healthy, but very hot, and the first time I ever saw snow was in Boston. I didn't know any better, so I went out in it to see what it was and I was sick for several weeks afterward." Mr. Apirapiti left for home last Wednes-day. He was sent back by a missionary whom he knew in Sierra Leone. Bull Fighting in Paris. Paris is just now amusing itself with its annual buil-fighting spectacle. A corre-spondent of the Courrier des Etats Unis spondent of the Courter des Laus Ching gives an interesting account of the thing As is already well known, the toreadors are not permitted to kill their bull in the French capital. They must content them selves with going through the form of a selves with going through the form of a fight, and so must the bull, for he has to wear leather pads or boxing gloves on his borns. "The people of Paris," says this correspondent, "have not such a horror of the thing as is generally imagined. They were present in great numbers, the ladies in their gayest spring costumes, and they formed an interesting contrast with the crowds of Spaniards and South Americans, The Spaniards take the thing seriously. crowds of Spaniards and South Americans, The Spaniards take the thing seriously, getting angry sometimes with the buil fighters and sometimes with the buil, and criticising the thrusts given and received; kids the toregdor, blackguards the buil, and suddenly becomes sentimental at the sight of blood. They enjoy the way the picadores are knocked about with the big larges of the anery animal. But the three picadores are knocked about with the big gloves of the angry animal. But the three last fights were exciting, because the animals were more than usually furious. One of them jumped the barrier of the arena, and, while the employes field in consternation, the spectators of the front row chased him back again into the ring with their umbrelias amid the wild langther and applauss of the whole crowd." The with their umbrellas amid the wild langhter and applause of the whole crowd." The only accident was the killing of one horse. He received such a tremendous coup de corne that the glove could not save him. For this the bull was applauded by the Spaniards and hissed by the Parisians, and nome of the latter left the place in disgust. But the bull didn't care.

per year ; since 1870 they have averaged 6.30 per 100,000 per year, and this average is being yearly reduced. During the past sixteen months we have had only two cases of the disease in New York city. One of these cases occurred in the most thickly populated part of the city, where the num-ber of inhabitants per acre is greater than on any other spot in the world; yet so well was the neighborhood protected that not a s ngis case occurred among many that were exposed.

The Telegraphs of the World. Bronson C. Keller in the June Forum. Sigty-one per cont. of the telegraph lines of the world are owned and operated by the governments. Of the sum total of lines, those in the United States constitute more than 30 per cent. Leaving this country out of consideration, about 85 per cent. of the remainder is under the govern-ments; or leaving the United States and Canada out, fully 35 per cent, is owned by governments. There are at least 2,500,000 miles of wires in use in the world. Thriffs vary greatly. In North America the body of the message only is charged for; in other countries the address, or sig-nature, or both are tollable. In the United States the toil ranges from 25 cents to 81 for 10 words, according to the distance; in the Argentine Republic it is to cents for 10 words; and 20 cents for 10 words, and 21 cents for each additional lowr, in Ecnador, 20 cents for 10 words; in Egypt, 40.6 cents for 10 words; in Germany, 1.4 cents per word, the minimum being H cents per mostage; in the United Kingdom, six-pence for 12 words; in the Cape colonies, one shilling for 10 words, and sixpence for cach additional five words or part thereof; in Guatemain, 25 cents for 10 words, ex-clusive of the address; in Monduras, 25 in Guatemain, 25 cents for 10 words, ex-clusive of the address; in Honduras, 25 cents for 10 Spanish words, and double that amount for English words; in Italy, 20 cents for 15 words, and one cent for each additional word; in Japan, four cents per word, including the address and signature; in Portugal five cents for the first word in Portugal, five cents for the first word, and one cent for each additional word; in Roumania, 1.56 cents per word; in Siam, from 35 cents to $3.65 per word; in Switzerand, one half cent per word ; in Turkey, two to four cents per word; and in Vene-zuela, 20 cents for 12 words. In New Zeazuela, 20 cents for 12 words. In New Zea-hand measages are classified as urgent, ordi-nary, and delayed, the rates being respec-tively two shillings, one shilling, and six-pence for 10 words, with a haltpenny for each additional word. In mileage, relative number of offices, popular use of the telegraph, and cost of sending a measage, we are not in advance of leading countries, and we are even be-hind some of the inferior ones. Within the years 1870-89 the increase in nonulation

the years 1870-89 the increase in population in England has been 18 per cent, the in-crease in the number of letters carried 70 per cent., and the increase in the number of telegrams 445 per cent. In the United States in the same time the increase in population has been 50 per cent., and the increase in the number of messages 380 per cent. In the ratio of increase of messages to increase of population the English have beaten us three to one.

The Young Lady and the Hat.

From the Philadelphia Press. A stately and handsome example of the well-bred young lady attended a theatrical first night last week and occupied, with her escort, seats in the third row of the orchestra. She was so fair to look upon that a large share of the audience watched duer as she went down the aisle and settled gracefully in her chair. It was then observed, with much interest, that she raised her arms and detached from her head the fashionable hat that became her so well. Her hair was bright golden, and under the radiant lights it fairly flashed in its beauty. The old gentleman sitting behind her settled back comfortably in his chair and contract back comfortably in his chair and contract back such a thoughtful creature, for now could such a thoughtful creature, for a splendid he not only see the stage, but a splendid head of hair as well. Presently, two or AT BURSK'S. three young women in the immediate vicinity quietly removed their hats, hav-ing noted the admiration that the originator of the scheme had excited. From this the movement spread until hatless feminine heads were discovered all over the theater, even to the rear rows of the circle. Between the acts a paper began to circulate about among the people occupying the orchestra. Each gentleman as he received it read something that had been written on it read something that had been written on it, and then smilingly signed his name, after which he passed it to his immediate neighbor. In a few moments the paper came back to the old gentleman that hat started it on its travels. Bending forward he politely addressed the golden-haired girl, handing to her, at the same time, the paper of the same time, the paper. She read it, and as she did so, a deep blush and a smile crept over her face The paper was a vote of thanks, signed by thirty or more of the male speciators. Its text was as follows: "We, the undersigned, desire to express BURSK'S, 17 E. KING ST. our respectful admiration for a most beauti-ful and considerate young lady, name not known, who, by removing her hat from AT REISTS. her bright golden head, has set the fashion for others, thereby rendering it possible for a delighted audience to witness the de-The pretty girl cast a radiant smile over her shoulder at the old gentleman behind, and, folding the paper tucked it into the front of her dress, by the side of a bunch of pansics. Pretty Good for a Man of 56. The following is from Mr. John Hines, manufacturer of enameled dies, who has carried on business in Philadelphia since Oct. 6, 1800, and whose testimonial in favor of Hood's Saraspacilla is certainly worthy of consideration.

consideration. "One year age I was laid up sick with perumonia for 14 weeks. When I got over that, my feet and legs swelled, were very much inflamed, and caused me much suffer-ing. The doctor said I had gout, which I did not believe. I tried a sumber of cures, of no avail. Then some one saked me to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. I did so. I took it three times a day, before meals. Before I had taken one bottle I began to improve. I took in all five bottles, which cured me and made me foel well otherwise. I have had no return of the affection. Can walk ten miles every day.

It has four great river systems; on the west the Congo, second only to the Amazon in the volume of its waters, and the Niger; on the north the Nile; on the east the Zambesi. These rivers once formed vast internal seas, which finally breaking through the moun-tain barriers, have descended by cataracts and canons to the occean, leaving great areas and canons to the ocean, leaving great areas of rich deposits of wonderful fortility.

The Assessed Value of Wives. From the Buffalo Saturday Tidings.

A recent opinion rendered by the Virginia court of appeals shows that the law recog-nizes a graded valuation of wives. The complainant had sued for damages for the loss of his wife, who had been ac-cidentally killed through the negligence of the definition on the trial existence tond. the defendants. On the trial evidence tend-ing to show that the deceased had been a ing to show that the decrased had been a superior wife was offered, and, presumably influenced by this, the jury gave the com-plainant a verdict for $6,000. The defend-ants objected to proof as to the character of the wife, and carried the issue to the highest court of the state. That tribunal holds that such evidence was perfectly proper as means of estimat-ing the damage suffered by the husband. "If the character and conduct of the wife," says the court, "be such that her death will cause but little sorrow, suffering, death will cause but little sorrow, suffering, and mental anguish to the husband, then the fair and just proportion of the damages to be awarded by the jury will be measured accordingly. But if on the contrary, " the sourt adds, " the wife be loving, tender and dutiful to her husband; thrifty, indus-trious, economical and prudent—as the evidence in this case proved Mrs. Mc-Connell to be—then her price is far above rubies, and the loss of such a wife, of such a helpmeet, of such influence, of such a blessed and potent minMry and com-panionship, is a proper element of dam-ages to be considered by the jury in fixing the solatium to be awarded to the husband for tearing her from his heart and home, "
