nt boss of the job has evi-intention of attempting the of any less grand a monument insanity. This list of questions this well enough; and the nees with which his men getting through with this work ows how the unnecessary census ork is clogging the speed and he accuracy of the necessary portion of it. To be accurate the enumeration of the population should be completed within one day. It is to be taken within two weeks, we believe, and probably it will be as many months before all the figures are in.

To secure entire accuracy it is essential that the co-operation of the people shall be freely given to the work. it there is no such universal disposition, for the very good reason that the tions to be answered, which are cer-tainly annoying and which some people think are impertinent. To be sure it is now said that some of them need not be answered. But if so, they certainly should have been withdrawn. It is silly to ask questions to which only partial response will be had, when the purpose is to prepare a report upon the con-dition of the whole population. The effect of these questions certainly has been to make the work of the census takers more difficult and to make imperfeet their report upon the essential census features, that might have been obtained speedily and fully if the inquiry had been confined to them.

The inquiry as to the physical and mental condition of the population may be a valuable one, but the information is certainly not to be reliably had by questioning the afflicted people and their friends; it is probable that few of those who answer at all will answer truly.

Dr. Billings, of the army, suggested the only practical method of getting e facts when he asked the physicians of the country to contribute them. A very foolish objection has been made by some physicians to giving this information, that it would be a violation of professional confidence. As the information as to any particular person is not to be published, but to simply appear in the tabulated result, it seems that a consideration of professional propriety rather commands than forbids the physician to lend his aid to securing the completeness and accuracy of the report.

If physicians would be more conscientiouslycareful to guard their professional confidences in private conversation, they would receive more consideration for their pretended delicacy about making the census returns asked of them ; but as they report freely their peculiar cases in the medical journals, and talk about them to their associates, we may assume that it will not harrow their conscience, in fact, to tell the census people in confidence how many of their patients have chronic diseases and mental malady.

Rich Stewards.

So it seems that the stewards on the seems that the stewards on the smuggling, and that the business is so safe and profitable that their places on the boats are sought for the smuggling facilities they offer, and that the stew ards speedily become capitalists. Clothing seems to be a favorite importayoung men who affect the London tailor. It seems very strange that the customs ad-ministration should be such as to enablesuch a business to become established. It can only have happened through the counivance of the chief officers of the boats, and the gross negligence if not the corruption of the customs officers.

Newspaper Reading.

The wild career of Eugene Cowles, as detailed in the news columns, is packed full of morals for those who enjoy finding them ; but, unfortunately, the great majority of paper reading mankind care only for the interest and surprise of the daily news, and give very little time to thought on the ways of the world and the teachings of other peoples' experi-ence. Newspapers should make people a great deal better by recording daily the experiences of others who have come to grief or good fortune. Experience is the greatest, if the sternest, of schoolmasters, and the press should have marked effect in bringing vividly before readers the daily teachings of experience in thousands of cases. In spite of much narrow, and some just, criticism of "newspaper English," it cannot be denied that events of the day are often presented with a graphic skill and force that command sympathetic attention, and the reader should learn almost as much from so following the experience of others as he would learn if he were taking the bitter lesson in person, with all its misery of mind or body, or its solemn doom. This should be the effect of the better class of papers if properly read, but thousands read without reflection with them reading is nothing but a ricious habit. They are often people who would be greatly scandalized by the outline that they delighted in sensa-loual literature. They speak with con-ment of the dime novel and are cautious from a hanging to the wedding of some heiress, or the financial wreck of an honored firm, and the effect of it all is about the same as would be the reading of wildest fiction. It is this abuse of the newspaper that leads many thoughtful ervers to question whether it is a blessing or a curse, but the familiar answer that all good things may be abused sways the verdict in favor of the papers as on the whole a blessing, and one of the greatest of the age. People are learning to reflect as they read. Stories like that of Cowles' carry their moral home to many a reader, and it need not be pointed in Sunday school fashion.

A CITIZEN of Hanover, Mr. Henry Wirt, has made a present to the borough a block of thirteen lots of ground centrally located to be used as a public pleasure ground or park. The Hanover Spectator says: "This liberal act of Mr. Wirt will give to Hanover a splendidly located park, and places our town far ahead of many others in this respect in the state, and should forever embalm the generosity and public spiritedness of the donor in the memory of the present and all coming generations of Hanovers and all coming generations of Hanoverset and coming generations of the description of the company of the company and company generations of the description of the company of the company of the company and company of the compa A CITIZEN of Hanover, Mr. Henry Wirt, present and all coming generations of Hanoverians. Other of our wealthy citizens should now promptly come forward and by liberal donations of money aid the borough authorities in properly embellishing and adorning the grounds for the purpose to which they are to be devoted. A b some fountain, pavillon, band stand, statuary, vases, flower plats, shrubbery and trees, are essential features of a public

If some public-spirited citizen would make a gift of the kind to Lancaster the eagerness with which it would be accepted and its improvement undertaken would startle some of the sleepy Pennsylvania towns which have received parks and libraries without showing due appreciation of them. Only give Lancaster a chance and see how wide awake she is.

FROM Montana to New Mexico there are reports of suffering for want of rain, for while the East has been so thoroughly soaked for a year or more there has been a very light rainfall in parts of the West lying along the eastern slope of the Rocky mountains. Northern Montana is badly dried up and grass in miserable condition where it is usually most luxuriant at this season. Stockmen of the southern part of New Mexico are losing cattle daily by hundreds. A dispatch says: "Few cattle die out on the ranges. The grass has been eaten down close to the ground near water courses and herds go miles into the footin by thirst, when they drink their fill and lie down never to get up." The stockmen of of the northern part of the territory had their share of misery in the fatal November blizzards, and altogether the stockman's life this year is not a happy one.

TOO MUCH REVOLVER

Made a Scoundrel's Neck Stiff A Miserable Domestic Tragedy. Eugene F. Cowies, the notorious son of Edwin Cowies, the well known editor of the Cleveland Plain Dealer, was shot through the neck in the streets of Montreal on Sunday. Ten years ago he married Alice M. Hale, daughter of a Cleveland banker. Five years after it was discovered Allso M. Hale, daughter of a Cleveland banker. Five years after it was discovered that on his many supposed business trips to Europe and elsewhere he was accompanied by a Clara Lienenschard, who passed as his wife. He was taken very sick in London and cabled for his wife, who went over and forgave him and took care of him, but when he got well he resumed his old manner of life, traveling in California and then in the East. He again professed repentence and was reconciled, returning to live with his wife in Buffale last fall. On the second day after this compact he returned suddenly and informed his wife that he must leave immediately for New York. A telegram fell out of his pocket, which his wife picked up and read. It was from the Lienenschard woman, and was to the effect that a letter of his had been received, and asking where and when she could communicate with him. Mrs. Cowles did not speak of this discovery, but managed to persuade him not to go to New York. On the next day Cowles York. On the next day Cowles New York. On the next day Cowles started, and was shadowed by a detective, who reported to Mrs. Cowles. The injured wife at once placed the facts in possession of her husband's father. The old man, almost broken-hearted, wrote to Mrs. Cowles that under all laws of heaven and earth she was absolved from allegiance to her husthat under all laws of heaven and earth she was absolved from allegiance to her husband, and concluded as follows: "Don't stay with him any longer. Come to me and I will take care of you." Old Mr. Cowles never recovered from the shock, and he died a few weeks later. The estate, which would have fallen to Eugene, was divided in two parts, one being left to the wife and child and the other to the son for use during his lifetime, but to go to the wife and daughter after his death.

Eugene Cowles made every effort to break the will but failed. On last Monday he sent word to his wife that he intended to leave the country, give up the fight, and would probably never return, and as a last favor he asked for an interview with his child. The mother, after much entreaty, would probably never return, and as a last favor he asked for an interview with his child. The mother, after much entreaty, consented and her sister went to the station with the little girl. As soon as the train began to move Cowles seized the child and threatening to shoot anyone who interfered with him, jumped on the train with her. The sheriff was at once started on a long chase after him, but he escaped to Canada and announced that he would only surrender the child on condition that his wife would give up half of the estate. Mrs. Cowles, her brother C. C. Halls, Cowles' sister and Judge J.E. Ingersoll went to Canada to secure an interview and found Cowles at Montreal. He inhaisted on an interview with his wife alone and finally they had a very stormy one, during which he again threatened to shoot whoever interfered with him.

At last Cowles consented to allow his wife to see the child. She insisted on being accompanied by her brother and sister-in-law. A cab was taken and for five minutes they drove along St. Catharine street.

law. A cab was taken and for five minutes they drove along St. Catharine street.

When near the convent Cowles reached out and stopped the cab, and, turning to his wife, said: "You are now within sight of where Florrie is; agree immediately to give up half the estate or I will kill you." At this moment he drew his pistol and pointed it at his wife's head. He had not calculated on anybody else being armed in the carriage. Like a flash another pistol was drawn. There was a report, a puff of smoke and a ball from Hall's revolver had passed through Cowles' throat. The streets were crowded with people coming from church at the time. The wounded man fell still clutching his revolver in his hand, and the excited mob thought he had committed suicide. He was at once taken to the hospital and may recover. The child is at the convent.

Every mother should have a copy of the book "The Care and Feeding of Infants" issued by the proprietors of Mellin's Food—the Dollber-Goodal: Co., if Central Wharf, Boston, Mass.; it contains advice of the greatest value and assistance to her in feeding her child. Send for a copy; it will be mailed free to any address.

Symptoms of Catarrh.

Duil, heavy headache, obstruction of the nasal passages, discharges failing from the head into the throat, sometimes profuse, watery and into the throat, sometimes profuse, watery and acrid, at others, thick, tenacious, mucous, purulent, bloody and putrid; the eyes are weak, watery and inflamed; there is ringing in the ears, deafness, hacking or coughing to clear the throat, expectoration of offensive matter, together with scales from ulcers; the voice is changed and has a masal tuang; the breath is offensive; smell and taste are impaired; there is a sensation of dizziness, with mental depression, a hacking cough and general debility. If you have all or any considerable number of these symptoms you are suffering from Nasal Catarrh. The more complicated your disease has become, the greater the number and diversity of symptoms. Thousands of cases annually, without manifesting half of the above symptoms, result in consumption, and end in the grave. No disease is so common, more deceptive and dangerous, or less understood, or more unsuccessfully treated, by physicians. Five hundred dollars reward is offered by the manufacturers of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy, for a case of catarrh which they cannot cure. Remedy sold by druggists, at only 50 cents. 28 & 30 EAST KING ST. FOR THIS SORT OF WEATHER!

FINE CALF AND KANGAROO LEATHERS, WITH LIGHT PLEXIBLE SOLES, FOR MEN'S WEAR.

Something new in Shoes for gentlemen's wear, recently added to the stock here, made to meet the demands for lighter weight flexible soled footwear. A boon for the restless feet of business men. The chief feature of this line of goods is neatness and easy fitting properties. Made over special lasts for positive ease and comfort in wear, requiring no "breaking in." Do not hurt the feet even when new. Gentsel looking, too. Create favorable impression at sight. The uppers are soft and pliable, yet possessing unusual strength for leather so thin and light, and are warranted to give good service. The soles are cut from carefully selected hides—light, fiezible and tough.

These Shoes are not adapted for rough roads, nor the rough usage given coarse grades. They're not made for that purpose. Need only be given the usual care that is bestowed upon good articles of wear to have them prove satisfactory. Then is the money paid for them judiciously spent and no regret follows.

We have them in different lengths and widths. That makes it easy for us to furnish comfortable fits, whether the foot be slim, medium or broad—the one as well as the other.

For that Summer Suit of yours— haven't you thought of Russet Shoes as necessary to complete your outfit. The right makes in the right shades, at the right prices you'll find here. From the assortment we have, picking out is noth-ing if you'll keep your need in mind. Try us.
