No Land on Which the Sun Shines Possesses greater natural advantages than our ywn, but there are portions of the great grainbearing West and fertile South where atmossheric influences prejudicial to health militate gainst thom, in some degree, as places of resilence. Heavy rainfalls and the overflow of reat rivers, which upon their subsidence leave lank vegetation exposed to the rays of the sun, here beget mainrial fevers, and there also the nhabitants are periodically obliged to use some medicinal safeguard against the scourage.
The most popular is Hostetter's Stomach Sitters, a preventive that has for over a third of a century afforded reliable protection to those whom experience in the fullity of ordinary emedicine so frever and agare, has taught to subtitute for them. Whether intermittent or renittent, miasmatic fevers are conquered and verted by the superb anti-periodic and fortifyng medicine as they are by no other preparaion in use. Use it, and abandon impure local

WOMANLY WISDOM.

What a Bright Little New York Lady Has to Say About Lodice During Hot Weather.

New York, in conversation with a circle of friends in her drawing-room the other evening, said:

"A woman has a hard time during the heated weather. Household duties are hard enough at any time, but specially trying during the Summer, still they cannot be neglected and yet they are extremely debilitating. The heat that comes into the house is sometimes followed by dangerous draughts, thus causing audden chills, possibly colds. A woman's strength is less in the Summer, and she is thus obliged to take frequent reats and as a consequence is often completely exhausted at the end of a day. All the troubles peculiar to women are increased during the heated term. This can easily be seen in the flushed faces and difficulty in breathing. All the weaknesses and pains are greater in the Summer than at any other time. I have found that a woman's system needs a stimulant to fortify it at such time. I am a believer in temperance and I am an equal believer in health, and I have observed that the best physicians in the country recommend pure whiskey taken with water. Of course I know that it is difficult to procure pure whickey, but I have found that Duffy's Pure Malt agrees with me and has been of the greatest benefit. I believe there are thousands of women who have hitherto accepted pain, that faint feeling and the frequent sensation of weakness with resignation, as necessary evils incident to their sex, and I believe they might find fresh pleasure in life were they to use this Duffy's Pure Malt as I have done. These troubles need not be endured but can be removed, and I believe innumerable women in the strong, healthy and more attractive every day by a careful use of this pure malt."
