Wanted-A Vindication. How did a man whose name stands for no principle of statesmanship, for no line of public policy, who is the champion of no measure of municipal or state reform, who is neither an orator, writer or thinker upon any political, social or economic question, and whose reputa-tion, both public and private, is in the last degree unsavory—how did such a man become the most influential and powerful political leader in the second state of the Union? How did he gain s seat in the highest legislative body of the nation? How did he, when not s candidate for any office, and no more entitled at the present time than his bro ber-senator, J. D. Cameron, to a public endorsement of his career, force himself upon a state convention of his party and compel it to make as the chief declaration of its platform the assertion that as a citizen, an assemblyman, a state secretary, state treasurer and United States senator " he has won and retains our respect and confidence"?

There is but one explanation. Men who attain power in a republic either soar or crawl. There is no middle course, "There are but two creatures" says D'Alembert, "that can reach the top of the pyramid—the eagle and the ser-And Matthew Stanley Quay is not an eagle. Like the serpent he has reached high place through base means.

"Pygmies are pygmies still, though perched on Alps, And pyramids are pyramids in vales,"

And now that he boldly commands the good people of Pennsylvania to assert respect for his character, which they do not feel, and confidence in his integrity, which they do not possess, by electing "a governor whom he can own," they should make good the old Demoeratic aphorism, vox populi est vox dei, and answer him in the very language of delty to another of his kind-the common ancestor of the Quay family of politicians : " upon thy belly shalt thou go and dust shalt thou eat all the days of thy life."

But in the vigorous language of an honest and patriotic Republican, Mr. Henry C. Lea : " A vindication truly is needed at the coming election, but it is not the vindication of tainted politicians who dare not vindicate themselves. You are called upon to vindicate your own manhood, to vindicate the honesty of your own party, to vindicate the honor of your own state. You are called upon to show that you do not wear the collar of Mr. Quay t that your votes are not to be bought and sold by the manipulation of patronage, and that you are not to be driven to the polls like cattle to make good the bargains of your bosses.' And of the Democratic candidate be mys: "In ex-Governor Pattison the Democrats have given you an unexceptionable candidate, whose record shows that the interests of the state will be safe n his hands. If in making that record he earned the hostility of the giant corporations-if the influence of the Pennylvania railroad and of the Standard Oil company is understood to be counted upon by Mr. Delamater-it is only another claim on your suffrages for Mr. Pattison. He represents not only the people against the bosses but the people against the corporatious, and his defeat will be the triumph of all that is most dangerous and most deadly to our institutions."

This, truly, is the vindication wanted by the good people of Pennsylvania-a vindication from the methods and morals of Quayism; or, as Mr. Pow-derly terms it, a new Declaration of Independence from the rule of a worse tyrant than King George III.

Silence Gives Consent.

On Friday evening, April 4, at a public meeting in Bradford, ex-Senator Lewis Emery, jr., made the following charges against Senator George W. Delamater: I charge that he purchased his election to the Senate of this state in 1886; that he directly bribed citizens of Crawford county to vote for him at the general election, and that when a memorial had been contem-plated to prevent him from taking the oath of office he paid large sums of money for the suppression of the said memorial.

I charge that he did take the oath of office, thereby computing office, thereby committing a crime against the good name and statutes of the commonwealth.

I charge, also, that during his service in the Senate he attempted to alter a public record by framing a conference report on a bill before it had been properly considered, contrary to all rules and practice, and signing or having had signed the names of the committee, and in so doing offended the dignity of the Legislature and the law of the commonwealth.

I make these charges without fear of contradiction, and court an action of law tradiction, and court an action of law whereby I may set my proof before the people oath-bound.

On April 14th, the Philadelphia Press, the leading Republican organ in the state, quoted these charges editorially, coupled with an urgent call upon Senator Delamater to answer them. The leading journals of the state, irrespective of party, have published and republished these charges and joined in the appeal made by the Press. Three months have clapsed since the chief organ of Pennsylvania Republicanism declared that "he cannot afford to remain silent under accusations such as these, and coming with the emphasis and from the source that these do. Senator Delamater owes it not merely to himself, but to the Republican party, whose candidate for the great office of governor he expects to be, to meet these charges fully and completely and so strangle them that there shall never again be a chance for anybody either inside or outside the party to use them. This is due the Republican people, who are now in possession of but one side of the story, and who may wrongly construe absolute silence. Delay or failure to make convincing answer cannot but prove unfortu-

"The Press makes this request of Senator Delamater in behalf of the Republicans of the state. It has taken no aides in the canvass for the gubernatorial nomination ; its candidate for governor will be the nominee of the convention. The party requires, however, that the nominee, whoever he may be, shall be one against whose character no charges can be successfully made. Sen-ator Delamater can doubtless refute ex-ought to satisfy the whole Republican party of that fact. They are of too serious a nature to go unanswered."

Yet up to this good day, more than three months after these charges have been publicly made by a Republican of high standing in his party, they remain unanswered. Silence under such charges from such a source is an admission of their truth.

Is such a man worthy of the chief magistracy of Pennsylvania?

By Their Fruits.

"By their fruits ye shall know them," said ex-Governor Pattison, speaking of the Republican party in the campaign which resulted in making him the Democratic governor of Pennsylvania. Since his admirable administration, which all parties have commended in the higest terms, the Republican party has again obtained control of the executive offices of the state. "By their fruits ye shall know them." What does the party, which endorses in its platform the entire career of Quay, say of the manner in which its governor has conducted the affairs of the commonwealth? is there a point beyond which even the Republican party dare not go? Truly, it seems not, for in its platform, where we look most naturally for some account of its stewardship, we find after the hearty commendation of Senators Quay and Cameron, and the warm endorsement of Harrison's administration and of the tyrannical career of Speaker Reed, eight cold and perfunctory lines, at the very end of the document, in praise of poor Beaver. Such a cold public endorsement is neither more nor less than a private condemnation. It would have been better to pass by the governor as Dante did Ugolino in bell, "afar off and in silence," than to damn his administration with their faint praise.

Yet in spite of this admission of utter failure, they nominated a still more objectionable candidate, and ask for him the support of the people against a man whose administration even they are compelled to acknowledge was pure, honest, dignified and able. Let the voters of Pennsylvania answer this brazen proceeding by casting their ballots for the Christian gentleman, whose record is the best possible guarantee that their trust will not be betrayed. For, truly, "by their fruits ye shall know them.

A CORRESPONDENT Says, "I am probably one of many graduates of our schools and colleges who would like to undertake a systematic course of reading, for selfimprovement, but the vast number of good books is so bewildering that I scarcely know where to begin. Will you kindly furnish me with a list of books-a list of not more than ten, that you think are the best in the world; or the names of the ten greatest authors, with whose works I ought to be familiar? I am sure that such a list would be a great help to many others as well as to myself."

Have any of our cultivated readers ever attempted to draw up such a list? If not, they will find it much more difficult than, at first glance, it appears. To write the first three or four names is easy enough, but with every additional name the choice widens. This will be seen at once from the list we have written:

6. Dante. 7. Cervantes. 1. The Bible. 2. Shakespeare. 3. Hos. 8. Gothe. 9. Carlyle. 10. Herbert Spencer. 4. Plato.

Thus, many readers would have written Tacitus instead of Cicero, Wordsworth instead of Gothe, Macaulay instead of Carlyle, and Milton instead of Herbert Spencer. De gustibus non est disputandum, But if our young friend will read the best of books, the Bible-skipping Chronicles, the minor prophets and Revelations and the chief works of the great writers whom we have enumerated, he will be hereafter better able to choose for himself than the wisest can possibly be to choose for him.

Following the present tendency among labor organizations, a split has occurred in the Order of Railroad Conductors. The reason for this division is that about two months ago at a convention in Rochester, N. Y., the special clause in the constitution prohibiting strikes was stricken out. This was done by the Western members at the instigation, it is said, of the labor organizations. Mr. C. S. Wheaton, of Elmira, the head of the order, was known to be hostile to the change, and he was supplanted by a man in sympathy with the majority. Mr. Wheaton and his followers thereupon seceded, and organized yesterday, at the Coleman house, in New York city, a new body, called the Independ-ent Order of Railroad Conductors. Mr. Wheaton was elected president of the new order. "This is a fraternal organization," he explained yesterday after the business had been transacted. "It has for its purposes the benefit and protection of its membership. It has no alliance with any of the labor organizations and is in no sense a labor organization." It is charged that the split was fomented by the four Eastern railroads to which these conductors belong, viz.: the Central Vermont, the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western, the New York, New Haven & Hartford, and the Grand Trunk of Canada which wanted to break the power of an organization which had about thirteen thousand men in

Why Harvest Hands Struck.

A strike took place in a harvest field near Emans, Berks county. The trouble was caused by the wife of the farmer, who putting on men's attire mounted the reaper and taking the lines in hand did the work of one of the men, who was compelled to do binding after the machine.

Many women are seen in the harvest fields binding wheat, but when this lady appeared in men's attire, taking the place of a man, they decided to quit instantly, saying they were not going to work like slaves after such a "variety figure." The grain remains uncut and the men positively refuse to go to work unless the farmer keeps his wife off the reaper.

A New Railroad Completed. A New Railroad Completed.

The last spike in the new Lehigh Valley railroad connection between the Lehigh and Schuylkill Valleys was driven on Saturday, at Reniment, Schuylkill county, in the presence of a number of of prominent officials of the Lehigh Valley railroad and invited guests. Two gold spikes were driven smid the cheers of the spectators, one by R. A. Wilder, who projected the road forty years ago, and the other by R. H. Sayre, second vice president of the Lehigh Valley Railroad company. This line will bring Pottsville within four hours' journey of New York.

HIS FINGER NAILS CAME OFF.

"For a year I was afflicted with a horrible case of blood poison, and upwards of five months of that time I was unable to do work of any kind. My finger nails came off and my hair dropped out, leaving my head as clean and smooth as if it had been shaved, I consuited the best local physicians, and spent hundreds of dollars for medicines of different kinds, but without receiving the slightest benefit. I was advised finally to visit Hot Springs. This I did, but becoming disgusted with the treatment I was receiving there, commenced taking Swift's Specific (S. S. S.) The offect that S. S. These goods have sold at 33c to 37%c, and are positively French.
