"His watchers looked at one another. Could he have the power of second-sight to watch the movements of the train? One of his boys was sent to the dispatcher's office but a few blocks away. Before he returned Boardman had called out a water station and said:

Boardman had called out a water station and said:

"'Four minutes lost. Why couldn't she do without water? Ah, ah! Watch her pound sand now. Isn't she a beauty?"

"The man had returned from the telegraph office, and told the other watchers that he had followed the train correctly. A feeling of awe came over the boys. The sick engineer was in a seeming trance. His breath came slower and more laborious. The boys crowded nearer and were about to raise him in the bed, so that he could catch his breath easier, and the family were called, when he sat erect, looked wildly about him and cried:

"'Tiffin! Red light! Stop for orders! My Ged!' [Hore he held up his hand as if reading an order.] 'Stop No, second five, engine No. 712, Prepare to meet thy God.

"Then he sank back in the bed, dead. The horried boys stood amazed and speechless. It was a presentiment. One rushed forth to the dispatcher's office and cried to the east end man:

"For Glod's sake, Dixy, stop second five."

at Republic.'

"Quick over the wires the call went and was answered, and then this message; Stop second five.' There was a wait of breathless anxiety when the news came back: 'Second five is stopped. Conductor wants to know what for.' Be this time the story was known in the dispatcher's office, and the answer was sent to Republic: 'Had a terrible presentiment. Tell conductor to proceed cautiously to Chicago Junction.'

"Hardly had the answer gone when Attica called up and said:

"Stop second five at Republic. First five ditched a mile west of here; engine and three cars off. Cow on track. Engineer killed by jumping.'

"'And the man who had saved probably five score of lives lay a corpse at his home, with his sorrowing family surrounding him. The opera company made up a purse, which, together with the life insurance he had carried, made the engineer's family independent for the rest of their lives."

WONDERS OF THE DEEP.

Hill and Valley on the Ocean's Bottom The Track of the Cable.

The Track of the Cable.

The sea occupies three-fifths of the surface of the earth, says the Ocean. At the depth of about 3,500 feet waves are not feit. The temperature is the same, varying only a trifle from the ice of the pole to the burning sun of the equator. A mile down the water has a pressure of over a ton to the square inch. If a box six feet wide wers filled with sea water and allowed to evaporate under the sun, there would be two inches of sait left or the bottom. Taking the average depth of the ocean to be three miles, there would be a layer of pure sait 250 feet thick on the bed of the Atlantic. The water is colder at the bottom than at the surface. In the many bays on the coast of Norway the water often freezes at the bottom before it does above. Waves are very deceptive.

deceptive.

To look at them in a storm one would think the water traveled. The water stays in the same place, but the motion goes on. Sometimes in storms these waves are 40 feet high, and travel 50 miles an hour—more than twice as fast as the swiftest steamship. The distance from valley to valley is generally fifteen times the height, hence a wave five feet high will extend over 75 feet of water. The force of the sea dashing on Bell Rock is said to be 17 tons for each square yard. Evaporation is a wonderful power in drawing the water from the sea. Every year a layer of the entire sea, 14 feet thick, is taken up into the clouds. The winds bear their burden into the land, and the water comes down in rain upon the fields, to flow back at last through rivers. The depth of the sea presents an interesting problem. If the Atlantic were lowered from 5,564 feet the distance from shore to shore would be half as great, or 1,500 miles. from 5,564 feet the distance from shore to shore would be half as great, or 1,500 miles. If lowered a little more than three miles, 19,880 feet, there would be a road of dry land from New Foundland to Ireland. This is the plain on which the great Atlantic cables were laid. The Mediterranean is comparatively shallow.

A drying up of 660 feet would leave three different seas, and Africa would be joined with Italy. The British channel is more like a pond, which accounts for its choppy waves. It has been found difficult to get the correct soundings of the Atlantic. A waves. It has been found difficult to get the correct soundings of the Atlantic. A mid-shipman of the navy overcame the difficulty, and shot weighing 30 pounds carries down the line. A hole is bored through the sinkef, through which a rod of iron is passed, moving easily back and forth. In the end of the bar a cup is dug out, and the inside coated with lard. The bar is made fast to the line, and a sling holds the shot on. When the bar, which extends below the ball, touches the earth, the sling unhooks and the shot slides off. The lard in the end of the bar holds some of the sand, or whatever may be on the bottom, and a drop shuts over the cup to keep the water from washing the sand out. When the ground is reached a shock is felt, as if an electric current had passed through the line.

A Gentleman Farmer Defined.

Old Colonel Maynadier, of Anne Arundel Old Colonel Maynadier, of Anne Arundel county, Md., was a large slave owner. The colonel spent a good deal of his time away from home. One time upon his return he took a drive over his property, and on his way met a small colored boy.

"Whom do you belong to, boy?" the colonel asked.

"Why, sah, I—I—longs t—to Colonel Maynadier, sah."

"Who's he?" Inquired the colonel, to see what the chap would say.

"H—h—h's a farmer, sah."

"What sort of a farmer?"

"Ge-gentlemen farmer, sah."

"Gentleman farmer, sah."

man farmer?". "W-well, sah," spoke up the colored boy, "h-he's a farmer dat don't raise no 'bacco, sah, a-and has to buy his co'n, sah!"

The colonel enjoyed the joke, it is said, and afterward told it upon himself with screamer came to the door, and then the boy screamed:

"'Twas a crow, 'twas a crow. Oh! oh! Think of the trouble I might get into for breaking the game law!"

The father says that it took some half hour's argument and the production of the bird's wings and skin to convince him that a crow had really been caten. It was a young bird, just grown, and as fat as butter, and, if the truth be told, in spite of prejudice, it was as good eating as one could ask for.

A WORD OF CAUTION.

A wise man in the dark of night
Will never try to smell a rose,
For just as sure as he lacks sight
He'll get a thorn stuck in his nose.

In order to guard against results utterly sub-reraive of health, it is absolutely essential that the grand thoroughare or avenue of the sys-tem, the bowels, should be re-opened as speed-ly as possible when they become obstructed. If they are not, the bile is misdirected into the blood; the liver becomes torpid; viscid bilious matter get into the stomach, and produces in-ligestion; headaches ensue, and other symp-oms are produced, which a prolongation of the
