In a Heap of Trouble.

The Republican party is evidently codooed. Its day of misfortune has ar. rived. Its plans, however well laid, perist in miscarrying. Its leaders have their sails set in different ways in the effort to catch the strong breeze, and the trouble that comes from such divided council is proverbial. The hoodoe of the party is plainly its speaker. When it put a man at the helm whose own notion is his only impulse, it fell into trouble, for it was a new man who came up to displace old men and who had all the will but yet all the capacity for the task.

The old man of the party, after gazing upon the apparition in silent patience or months seeking to understand it, has pulled down his vizor and ridden into the lists, richly clothed with a most enticing armor and bearing a lance of great strength and point. Mr. Blaine makes his campaign upon the doctrine that the sugar of South America should not enter free into our ports without the free admission of our products into South American ports It is a position of manifest popularity, and its good sense is not open to successful denial. In truth, the chief argument used against it is the improbability of the South American nations yielding free passage to our goods in return for free entrance to their sugar which is no argument at all ; since it is clea: enough that some consideration can be had from these nations for so great concession ; and even if it be true that nothing can be had, wherefore should they be given so much for nothing? If the Republican proposition was to make sugar free, without putting the cost of the release upon the treasury, their policy might be defended on the ground of its relief to the sugar connumers of the country ; but when the home sugar raiser is paid out of the national treasury a bounty for his sugar raising, it is so clearly a case of robbing Peter to pay Paul as to lose all the flavor of its justice.

Mr. Blaine is an old campaigner, and this time he has not been caught asleep. His Rip Van Winkleism of the past year has had a lively awaking. will put our money on the Blaine horse in this race; with a lively realization, of course, that the conflict means loss of oats to the whole concern. The McKinley tariff, bill, with its free sugar and bounty to sugar growers and no compensation to the country ings of unnecessary protection, they will stop forever this unprofitable way from the foreign sugar growing states, must nauseate the country and cause it to throw off the Republican rule.

Raising Rogs. Most of our readers doubtless rememway by Henry Ward Beecher of the profits of his farm at Peckskill. When asked what was the most profitable thing he raised, he answered "Hogs. Raising hogs is the most profitable thing that can be done on a farm "; and his proof was this : "In the spring," said he, "I bought twenty pigs at $3 each and in the following winter I sold them at $12 each, thus showing a clear profit of $180, and I don't think there was as much profit from all the rest of the farm as from the pig-pen." "But," said the inquirer, "you fed them with corn and meal and you have not considered this expense." "O yes," said Mr. Beecher, "xpense." " O yes," said Mr. Beecher, I have considered it, I gave them corn and meal that was worth $300, and my books show that I lost that amount on corn but they show a profit on hogs."

Mr. George Brickett, in the Boston Transcript, attempts to show that this is paraphrase of the argument of the modern protectionist. The farmers of the United States are compelled to pay more than $300 every year for every $180 of profit made by the protected hogs, the manufacturers. They are compelled to pay a greatly enhanced price for every manufactured article they purchase, and at the same time to sell their products at prices fixed in Europe by the competition of the naked Hindoo who labors for a few cents a day, and of the half barbarous Hun and Slav. Thus, as a nation we lose on the corn and wheat, but our protected hogs make a profit. Though this is a very fallacious statement and easily consumed in the fire of common sense, which shows that though the tariff duty is a tax it may be beneficent in its working if it is wisely laid, there is enough of the flavor of truth about this story of the hogs to make it interesting to our farmers, whose industry is certainly not protected and who pay a good share of the tariff tax that sustains manufacturing industry. It is to their interest to see that this tax is not excessive and that it be reduced when and wherever possible; and to reject the McKinley tariff, which proposes such unnecessary burthens from their backs.

Let our farmers consider the deserted depreciated and mortgaged farms for which this system of " raising hogs" is responsible. Let them consider that farms of moderate size are decreasing in number, while those of a larger size are increasing ; that one-fourth of our farmers are already tenants ; and, that if the improved farm lands of the country were put under the sheriff's hammer to-day, they would not sell for two-thirds of their value a quarter of a century ago. In no state in the Union are producer and consumer brought more closely together than in New York, and yet the state agent reported less than two years ago that thirty per cent. of her farms are mortgaged on an average of eighty-six and two-thirds per cent. of their estimated value, and that they had depreciated in value an average of thirty-three per cent. in ten years ; while the Western mortgage business is estimated to have reached the vast sum of one hundred and fifty millions of dollars annually. When the honest farmers of this country have once fairly considered these and many similar facts which are among the chief bless LORO BOYLE'S VICISSITUDES A High Boller in New York, a Cowboy, Hunter, Banker and Legislator in the West, and Chased by Creditors. From the New York Berald.

Among the names on the passenger list of the White Star steamship Teutonic, which sailed from this part on Wednes-day, appeared that of Mr. 16. Boyle. This plain Mr. R. Boyle was the missing Rich-ard Henry Viscount Boyle, now (because of the death of the old Earl) Earl of Shannov, of Castle Martyr, county of Cork, Ire non, of Castle Martyr, county of Cork, Ire-iand. Lord Boyle, or Earl Shannon, as he is now called, is an eccentric young man, with a decidedly interesting history. At the age of twenty two, just seven years ago, the young Viscount left his home to seek his fortune in the great Northwest. He is a young man of a decidedly roving disposition, democratic in his tastes, fond of outdoor sports and hunting and fishing, and equally fond, as it would appear, of indulging in what is known in this coun-try as "high rolling." The young heir to the earldom of Shan-non chafed and fretted under the restraints and restrictions of the paternal roof, and longed for the more liberal freedom which a new and undeveloped country promised to afford.

a new and undeveloped country promised to afford. His lordship landed on these shores about seven years ago, with unbounded ambition, a pocketful at money and a gen-oral desite to have a good time so far as circumstances would permit. After thor-oughly "doing" this metropolis in com-pany with other kindred spirits, his lord-ship wont to a ranch in Manitoba and en-gaged in the delectable pursuit of "punch-ing" cattle and waging a sportsmanlike warfare upon the wild denizens of the great Northwestern forest and streams. The walls of his mountain home were adorned in time with giant antlers, and spread upon his cabin floor were the pelts spread upon his cabin floor were the pelts of many specimens of the wild animals that had fallen victims to his unerring rifle. Nor was the pursuit of politics forgotten in the land of his adoption. A real live Irish lord who could put an artistic brand on the wild cattle of the great Western foothills and beard the savage grizzly in his lair without flinching was a person to command respect, and Milford Hoyle was therefore elected a member of the Macleod Legislature. He served a term with great credit to himself and to the unbounded satisfiction of his constituents credit to himself and to the unbounded satisfaction of his constituents. His lordship next embarked in the bank-ing business at Winnipeg, Man., becoming one of the firm of McArthur, Boyle & Campbell. The junior partner of the firm is the youngest son of the Duke of Argyle and brother of the Marquis of Lorne. With the collapse of the Winnipeg boom, how-ever, came the dissolution of the firm and again his erratic lordship struck out for the again his erratic lordship struck out for the frontier. Lord Boyle was next heard of in Victoria, B. C. There, according to accounts published in the papers at the time, he ap-pears to have led a rather fast life.

Then his lordship suddenly disappeared and from that time, over two years ago, until within the past week, when the Herald located him in this city, his whereabouts has ever been veiled in misty un certainty. As his lordship had not written home since his departure, over seven years ago, it is not to be wondered at that his relatives were worried by his erratic and ago, it is not to be wondered at that his relatives were worried by his erratic and wayward conduct. This auxiety was in no degree lessened by the numerous reports of unpaid bilis and angry creditors who seemed to follow npon his lordship's trail up to the time of his disappearance. That he was a young man of great promise appears to have been an accepted fact among certain hotel proprietors and other business people of the Northwest with whom his lordship had come in contact prior to his departure for parts unknown. Then came all sorts of conflicting reports as to where Lord Boyle had hidden himself. One gentleman, who claimed to know, located Lord Boyle in the diamond fields of South Africa. Others had met his lordship olgging for golden nuggets in the mines of Alaska, while not a few were positive that he had gone to the Bengal jungles to wrestle with the tiger and the Jungles to wrestle with the tiger and the buge cared elephants. After speculating upon his lordship's whereabouts until the four quarters of the globe had become well exhausted it was determined to declare the young man dead, as the best and only means of disposing of the matter. Like Stanley, therefore, Lord Boyle was killed in various ways. From this time on his lordship died, at intervals, all man-ner of deaths. He was, according to various newspaper accounts, frequently scalped by the Indians, was frozen to death several times, and, on the authority of a newspaper published in this city on Wed-newspaper the whitehalt in this city on WedTHE BONANZA KING.

Earth-How He Made Ris Fortune. From the Chicago Journal. It is conceded that John W. Mackay is one of the richest man in the world. In appearance he has slightly changed since he was painted by Alexander Cabanel. His musiache has been colored. "Bit," says he, "it will grow to full length in a few days." There are some lines of age struggling for space on his typical Irish face, but his native constitution is quite stufborn and resents such attempted inno-vations. He was born with a prospective gold nugget in his mouth. The parturi-tion took place on the 29th day of Novem-ber , 1831, in Dublin, where he was edu-cated. He arrived in the United States during 1850, and secured employment in a commercial house. He has never quite discarded his bergue, notwithstanding his forty years' residence at home and abroad, but his bearing represents the pollsh of the several metropoles of the world. The gold fever, which lured so many either to dazzling fortune or destruction, ensured him within two years after his arrival at Boaton. His career of promises hear Downleville, in Storra county, Cal. He was that a handsome youngster, of fine form and apt repartee. Although his early efforts at mining were not brilliant, his energetic advances for the heart of beauty soon won for him the hand of the daughter of Mr. Daniel C. Mungerford. viable innancial positions in the world. The Comstock lode was his magnet. He hastened to Washoe on the announcement of its richness, and there worked in the capacity of a miner until he had saved sufficient money for an investment. His first venture was the Kentucky mine at Gold Hill, where, during several years' hard work, he acquired valuable knowl-edge of lodes. It was during 1860-70, that he first attracted the attention of the world. Combining with James G. Fair, he contrac-ted to develop the Hale and Norcross mine which had lapsed from a dividend to an as-sessment producer. He and his partner, ed-ucated in the intricacies of metallurgy and formations, believed in the property, combined with Messers. Flood and O'Brien and purchased it, or at least a control, for the sum of $80,000. It is well to note the point in this sentence, that the Hale and Norcross was an assessment mine when he took hold of it. Popular error has credited him with depressing the value of this property while foreman of it until its own-ers were glad to dispose of it at any price. ers were glad to dispose of it at any price. On the contrary, its owners had practically abandoned it, refused to believe in its po-tential wealth and had failed in part to subscribe for its maintenance. It was then that the tide of his affairs came in. He had faith in the mine, based on his knowledge of lodes. He took the tide at its seeming ebb and was swept on to fortune. The mines in which he has been interested He took the tide at its seeming have produced $150,000,000, of which he got the lion's share.

got the hon's share. His family seem to have preferred Paris for residence since the birth of his great wealth, and occupy a palace at 9 Rue de Tilsitt. In London they possess another palatial establishment at 7 Buckingham Gate. His greatest enterprise is the Com-mercial cables, in which he is associated with Mr. James Gordon Bennett. Next in importance is the Nevada bank. Bosides these, he is still one of the largest of minese, he is still one of the largest of mineowners, and is heavily interested in the Southern Pacific railroad. The Mackays have long been noted for their large charitable investments.

GUATEMALA'S QUEER HOFEL.

It is Earthquake Proof and Insects Are Used to Call the Guests. From the Chicago Tribune.

" The queerest hotel in the world is in Guatemala City," said an English tourist who is stopping at the Richelieu. "While who is stopping at the Richelieu. "While there a few weeks ago I stopped a day at the biggest hostelry, and met with more surprises than I have previously encoun-tered in my trip around the world. The house is built only one-story high on ac-count of the earthquakes. It is constructed in the form of a hollow square, and the in-terior courts made beautiful with trees and flowers. The exterior presents the appear-ance of a prison.

"After pounding a high knocker on the outer door you are usbered into a scene of verdant beauty. The hotel was formerly the private residence of one of the richest families of Central America, but the owner was banished by President Barrios for an illowed commission and the averagement alleged conspiracy against the government. Around the interior were balconies overlooking a garden filled with oran ge and peach trees, paims and beautiful flowers. The fare was good, and we had our choice of pancakes, with honey, fish, poultry, fruits and coffee and chocolate. You can't eat there if you are in a burry, though only one thing is served at a time, and you can get a cup of coffee until everything else has been served. The hotel furnishes can-dies, but matches are extra. "Then there is a system of calling the guests which entitles the hotel to the name of the queerest one on earth. You are of the queerest one on earth. You are called by flies. The flies down there are nearly as large as an English sparrow, and they sting like a hornet, though the bite is not poisonous. They never kill them, but brush them away. The halls of the hotel are filled with these pests in the morning. Over each door is a transom, Now, if you have a call for seven o'clock, your transom is opened at seven, and the flies go in. Do they wake you? I should say so. The sensation is like that of being sandbagged. In five minutes from the time your transom is opened you are down stairs' looking for the proprietor. It doesn't do any good to kick, though, for that system has been the custom for years."

of emancipation. Lincoln's edict, it is true, put an end to that form of chattel slavery which existed originally in all the states, but which had continued profitable only in those of the South Nor did it, as a recognized institution in which men are bought and sold like cattle, fall with the Confederacy, although we saw

"That great black idol of the South Blown hellward from the cannon's mouth, While Freedom cheered behind the smoke,' Although our government be the freest upon the earth, slavery in many other forms and of which white men as well as black are victims, still exists. The world is filled with slaves of habit, custom, precedent and fickle fashion, and with slaves of party and prejudice.

Men and women who cannot or will not control their appetites and passions, who dare not think and act for themselves, who would rather a thousand times break all the tables of the law than break the dry crust of custom, who watch with eager eyes the silly weathercock of fashion and trim their little sails to every changing breeze, who cower like hounds beneath the party lash of a vulgar political "boss," and who await the decision of some body of old fogy theologians in order to learn what is and what is not the religious creed which they believe-all these, and such as these, are slaves. And "They are slaves who dare not be In the right with two or three."

But there is a voluntary slavery far worse than this. It is estimated that one-fifth and sometimes as many as one fourth of our citizens entitled to man hood suffrage are bought and sold every few years. A prominent Republican politician at the last national election proposed the wholesale purchase in "blocks of five" of the white slaves of Indiana. For the man who sells his vote is an infinitely more contemptible slave than any negro the South ever contained. For the negro in most cases could not have become a freeman even if he would ; and when given an opportunity to purchase his liberty, he nearly always embraced it. These white slaves, on the other hand, were born free, but are base enough to sell for a few dollars the glorious birthright, which their fathers fought and suffered, bled and died to purchase for them. Indeed, it is hard to believe that these shameless serfs can be the sons of those "embattled farmers " who, in 1775, " fired the shot heard around the world "; that sons of such men could fall so low as to sell for any price that which even the poor negro, born in slavery, has been known to toil for weary years to gain.

For this utter baseness there is neither palliation nor excuse. " Others do it," says the fellow who sells his vote. "Others pick pockets" would be just as good a ples. "I am poor and need the money," says another. Does not the wretch know that by selling his vote he is placing power in the hands of those who will use it still further to impoverish him 7

The truth is that honest men have not done their duty in this matter. They should everywhere combine to make this kind of slavery as odious in name as it is in fact. They should treat the sorf who sells his vote as the leper is treated in the East. Such slavery is as dangerous as it is criminal; it should most with universal obloquy and be d with scorn forever from the land.

justice of the peace had gained their enmity. This gentlemen, a certain Judge Andrew Sellick, erected some time ago a beautiful residence which, among other embellishments, was adorned by a lifesized statue of Venus in Italian marble which stood upon the lawn fronting the mansion. Imagine the surprise and disgust of the judge when upon arising the other morning he found his queen of beauty painted as black as an Ethiopian slave. He was as mad as our jail physician when he found that the prisoners had exercised their artistic taste by painting his patient old horse like a zebra, their patriotic instincts leading them to choose red, white and blue as th color of the stripes. The judge had the paint scraped off, but lo! the next morning he found it painted a bright red. This too, was scraped off, when a third time the vandals daubed the marble Venus in a still more hideous manner, using blue and a variety of other hues. Rewards and detectives having failed to reveal the judge's tormentors, he struck upon the happy expedient of surrounding the statue with stout wires which at night are charged with electricity. Thus the bolts of Jove protect the beauty of Venus, and the judge at last has

foiled his malicious enemy.

MR. ANDREW CARNEGIE, the protected Pittsburg steel king, has not only outdone his royal brethren of Europe in the splendor and value of his wedding gift to the hero Stanley's bride, but has also just presented $50,000 to a library in Ayr, Scotland. It will be remembered that this highly protected gentleman, who "makes millions every year when times are good." has already given $1,000,000 to found a public library in Edinburg, and a like amount for a like purpose to the "Smoky City," If Mr. Carnegie believes in helping those who help themselves, he has a splendid opportunity here in Lancaster. The workingmen of this city have by their own efforts established a very creditable free circulating library, and one-tithe the amount he has given the little town of Ayr, in far off Scotland, would suffice to give our city a library worthy of its fame, and of the intelligence and culture of its people.

SCIENTIFIC INVESTIGATIONS have recently been made upon an interesting and somewhat novel subject, the physiognomy of criminals. An induction from an immense number of noted criminals has been rendered not only possible but very easy by photography. The general conclusions from such an induction based upon the observation and study of a scientific gentleman who has devoted years to the investigation, are curious if not practically of much value. They are briefly that "born criminals have large, projecting ears, thick hair, a thin beard, projecting frontal eminences, enormous jaws, a square chin, large cheek-bones and frequent ges-ticulation. Criminals are usually men with big cars. But men with big cars are not always criminals."

Removing a Cinder From the Eye. From Ladies' Home Journal

The proper way to get a cinder out of the eye is to draw the upper lid down over the lower, utilizing the lashes of the lower as a broom, that it may sweep the surface of the former and those of the lower of the former and thus get rid of the intruder. Or gently drawing the lid away from the globe, pass a clean came's hair brush-or fold of a soft silk haudkerchiefbrush—or fold of a soft silk handkerchief— two or three times between them. This procedure will, in nearly all cases, suffice ; when it does not, the services of a physi-cian are necessary. It is a remarkable fact that a very minute body will give rise to intense pain, and even after it has been extracted the sensation remains for an hour or more. After the intruder is out, gently bathe the lids every fifteen minutes in logi-water till the feeling subaides.

of an Alaskan sun. Of course when the old Earl of Shannon, Lord Boyle's father, died some four months ago and the missing lord had himself become the earl, it became a matter of some come the earl, it became a matter of some moment either that this much killed young man should be resurrected, or that proofs of his death should be well established. For this purpose Lord Boyle's brother Henry, came to this country soon after the earl's death. Mr. Henry Boyle (who is the Honorable Heary Boyle at home, scoured the great Northwest on the trail of his missing relative, but finding no trace re-turned disheartened to this city. The brother's search and inquiries, however, were not without their fruits, for a telegram was received two weeks ago from Idaho, from his missing lordship, stating that he was alive and well and would shortly arrive in New York. Closely fol-lowing the telegram came his lordship himself, brouzed and weatherbeaten as a

The new Earl of Shannon." This purchased his the earl of Shannon." The guidt is name as the shannon remained purchased his tick of a few days, when he giving his name as "the Honorable Richard Henry Boyle, Earl of Shannon." This name and title, however, seemed to jar upon the democratic ideas which his lordship had acquired during his " cow punch-ing" experiences in the wilds of the Northwest, so the high sounding name was, at his lordship's request, shorn of its embellishments and made to read " Mr. R. Bayle"

It might also be mentioned that the Hon. Henry, seemingly imbued with the democratic principles of his brother, like wise sailed under the unpretentious title of "Mr. H. Boyle."

It only remained then for the Heraid to break into the secret of this unassuming secretion of identity under which was hidden the personality of his lordship the modest but wayward Earl of Shannon. There appears to be a mystery about Lord Shannon's disappearance that is by no means cleared up by the more fact that his lordship has suddenly materialized in this size

Mr. W. Lewis Boyle, of Boyle & Co., bankers at No. 47 Wall street, is a cousin of Lord Shannon. Mr. Boyle assured me yesterday that Earl Shannon did not go to Alaska, but that he had spent the last two years in Idaha banding and fishing. years in Idaho hunting and fishing. The deputy United States marshal of Juneau, Alaska, and Mr. E. C. Gardner, of that territory, however, assert positively that Lord Boyd was in Alaska for some time engaged in mining on the Yukon Mr. Boyle stated that the income from the estates of the Earl of Shannon had dwindled from $100,000 a year to a paltry sum owing to the Irish land troubles.

ARMOUR AND THE BOOTBLACK.

The Boy Borrows a Dollar to Pay it Back on the installment Plan. From the Chicago Tribune. A bootblack walked into the office of Mr Armour. He had none of his outfit with him, but the bootblack was stamped in his face and all over him. He went to the gate, where the guard stands between his post and the greatest packer in the world. "W'ere's de old man?" asked the urchin

The guard told the boy to get out. "You tell de old man dat I want to see him. I want to see him alone, I don't want to bodder you ner de old man. But I want to see de old man, an' I want to see him right off."

him right off." Mr. Armour at his desk overheard the ragged request. "Let that boy come in hete," he called to the young man at the gate. The urchin approached Mr. Armour In a business-like way. No preliminary compliments.

"Say," said the urchin. "I took a nap out dere in de alley, and while I was asleep some o' dem kids from de Board o' Trade some o' dem kids from de Board o' Trade come along and swiped (stole) my kit. an' I'm short. I want to borrer a dollar to buy me a kit, an' Fll pay you back on de "stall-ment plan. See?" Mr. Armour handed the boy two silver dollars and told him to go. But the boy handed back one of the dollars and said : "I don't want but one. I'm goin' to pay it back, and dere's no use o' a man goin' in deeper'n his head. I allus keep my head above de water."

How Writers Are Paid.

The late E. P. Roe received $50,000 a year from his novels. Mark Twain gets $50,000 a year for his writings. The manag-ing editors of perhaps a dozen newspapers in the United States receive $10,000 a year. The editor of The Century Magazine is said to receive a salary of $20,000. Perhaps half a dozen of the leading newspaper correspondents get as much as $10,000. Probably twenty more receive $5,000.

From these figures the drop is deep and rapid. The ordinary good city newspaper man blesses his stars if he can average $2,-000 a year.

The report finds himself tolerably well off if can bring his count up to six columns a week. The two and three cent papers pay $5 a column. For one writer who receives $5,000 a year there are a thousand who work for $3 and $5 a column.

Giving Fair Warning. From the Detroit Free Press.

On the arrival of a train from the West over the Michigan Central the other day a assenger who was hatless walked up to officer Button and asked : "One of the 'fishuls?"

" Yes," " Lost my hat." " I see. "Out of the window."

" Yes." " Cost 75 cents."

"Very likely." "Settle with you for 50." "I'd rather you'd sue."

"Very well; sue you in fifteen minutes-good day !"

And off he went without another word, and has not been seen since.

> A Great Day in Alaska. dispatch from Sitka, Alaska, says

The Pacific Coast Steamship company's casel, the George W. Elder, landed about ninety tourists, many of whom were from New York, Pennsylvania and New England, just in time to take part in the cele-bration of the Fourth of July in this far-off territory, which, though part of the blessed "United States of America," is 7,000 miles from the capital and only a few hundred from Russian Siberia. "There was a Fourth of July oration delivered to a large crowd assembled in the old ballroom of Baranoff Castle by The old balancom of Barahoff Castle by Governor Lyman E. Knapp. The Declar-ation of Independence was read by the Hen. John S. Bugbee, judge of the district of Alaska, and a poem read by the Hon. Henry E. Haydon, clerk of the court. The Henry E. Haydon, clerk of the court. The most interesting feature of the day's pro-gramme was the Indian cance race. Five cances took part, each one containing from twelve to fourteen paddiers. "A prize of $20 was offered to the winning crew, and this acted as a stimulus to the natives to do their utmost. Never did cances fly through the water with such furious speed. Rushing on abreast, urged by a hundred skillfully used paddles, they left a wake behind them like that of a huge
