The Pather of a Hotel-Keeper Selling Liquor Without License-A Great Deal Of Indignation Among Dealers

Jonathan Larzalere, of Marietta, is the first man in Lancaster county to start an original package store. He opened his establishment a few days ago, and since then has been doing a rushing business. His store is on the main street, near the terian church.

The only people excited about the busi-ness venture of Mr. Larralere are the hotel men of the town. They are very much exercised, if their remarks are any indieation of how they feel on the subject. Largalere pays no attention to them, but is actively engaged in trying to build up a profitable business.

His son is a hotel-keeper in Marietta, and it is said will join with the other men put a stop to what they claim is a violation of law. While nothing definite because of law. While nothing definite has been agreed upon it is probable that the constable of the borough will be furnished with the names of those who buy liquor from Mr. Larzalere and a request made to him to refurn him to work. made to him to return him to court. If the constable refuses to do so then proceedings will be instituted to have the court pass upon the legality of the original package business, so far as this county is concerned. Mr. Larzalere says nothing, but will have his interests looked after when the case reaches court.

Mr. Larzalere buys his packages in Balimore, and while he has been very busy attending to customers the past few days other dealers in the same commodity have and but little else to do but talk about the pold movement of the original package

Hotel men throughout the city and county will watch with interest the proceedings in the Larzalere case. If it should be decided that the original package business is legal, original package houses will be numerous, the applications for license next year will be few and the revenue of the state, city, boroughs and townships will be cut down materially.

The Law and Order society have not yet learned of Mr. Larzalere's scheme and they may proceed to pur a stop to his business than Larzalere lives on Front street and is a cooper by trade. He has worked for years for Jacob Roth.

REMMLER'S END APPROACHES. Breaking Down as the Day of Electro-

Breaking Down as the Day of Electrocution Draws Near.

Though it is not definitely known when Murderer Kemmler will die in the electric chair, Warden Durston, of the Auburn, N. Y., prison, is keeping the day acrupulously to hit.self so far. It is pretty certain that the execution will take place some time next week. The time fixed under the last sentence is between August 4 and 11, and it is believed that the warden will suffer no unnecessary delay.

The terrible strain of suspense under which Kemmler has been for so long has begun to tell heavily upon him. There is no doubt that heretofore he has been buoyed up by certain vague hopes. He has now been told he must banish all this from his mind and face the inevitable. The result is that his wonderful nerve has at last been shaken. The little vanities and the childish interest in his new accomplishment of writing and reading, which kept up his spirits during the former ordeal, have now deserted him. He has grown careless in his dress, and he broods instead of interesting himself in books as he once did. He sleeps badly nights, and is restless and nervous. Whether he will go all to pieces and have to be dragged to the fatal chair is a question. It will not be surprising if those who witness the last scene of all have to behold one of the most pitful spectacles ever witnessed at an execution. pitiful spectacles ever witnessed at an exe

Seven of the men train with the Cantor faction in the Russian Hebrew church. The eighth was Philip Firman, and he got into the wrangle through a tongue-lashing the others were giving him. The disturbance lasted a long time and was a nuisance to the neighborhood. The pavement on Middle street, near Rockland, was blockaded, the fowless language was used and a great crowd attracted. The men arrested were Jacob Cantor, H. Birnun, Simon Dumo, Isaac Pluckmek, Max Mulwitzki, S. Goldberg, Philip Firman and David Meusel. All the accused furnished ball for a hearing before Alderman A. F. Donnelly, and a lively bearing it will be.

Lived on Buttermilk.

Mrs. — , of Lancaster city, said she suffered with dyspepsia and chronic beadache for eight years, and with serious heart troubles, to such a degree that on occasions he fainted several times during the day. One the day she bought one of Hoke's Electric Belts she had fainted six times. She was unable to work or eat, the only nourishment she could take for some time was buttermilk. She was treated by several physicians, their visits only, without the medicine, costing her as much as $77 a year but brought no cure. After wearing one o Hoke's Electric Belts fer, three weeks she was able to eat everything, and does her housework as well as ever. The lady, for reasons of delicacy, wishes her name not used publicly, but is willing to swear to these facts, and authorizes Prof. Hoke to give her name and address to any one calling on him.
