From the Pennsylv tian of Friday last: Horrible Murder in Philadelphia Yesterday morning about two o'clock, the most festerialy informing about two o clock, the most horrible-foul, and bloody minder ever conceived of, was perpetrated in the very heart of our city, at No. 39 North Fourth street, above Arch, East side, in the vicinity of Zion Lutheran Church. The hours in commitd burg houseller and druggist house is occupied by a bookseller and druggist, named C. L. Rademacher, agent for the Leipsic manufactory of Homograthic medicines, who has the store in front. The third story of the house is ied by August Koellner, lithographer, whose ess is at No. 76 Walnut street

The adjoining house, No. 37, is occupied by a Mr. Shade, whose family was first alarmed by dreadful screams, struggling and stamping, which proceeded from the room in which Mr. Rademacher and wife slept.

A few minutes after the groans aroused from their slumbers, Mr. Koellner and wife, the former R's chamber and found that the door was fits-tened on the inside, and while he was in the act of forcing it open with an axe, it was open-R., who fell into Mr. K's arms, cov at the time to be laboring under partial insanity. He informed Mr. K. of all that had taken place. He said that a man with pistol in hand had forcibly while he and his wife were asleep and attempted to shoot him, and that the pistol would not go off. He was under the impression that there were two persons in the room, one of Would not go out the persons in the room, one of whom attacked him, and the other his wife, that the would ast know them again because there was no light in the room, and they did not speak a word. The wrife of Mr. K. came into the room a here time after husband, and heard this story of snort time after her husband, and heard this story of Mr. R. Mr. R. She says that there was a light in the room, and that when she entered she found Mrs. Radamacher lying upon the floor, about two feet from the foot of the bed, with her head east and her feet toward the door of the room. The vita spark half fed, bit the body was yet warm, though covered with blood. As represented by Mrs. K., the scene was indeed most horrible for mortal eyes to gaze upon. (It is proper here to state, that Mr. Radamacher never retired to his bed in the even-ing without locking his room door on the inside.) Mrs. Radamacher received three stabs, one in the breast. These wounds appear to have been inflict: breast. These wounds appear to have been inflictbreast. These wounds appear to have been inflictive for the finite star Langreat standing at ed with a sharp instrument. Mr. R. was also severely wounded in several places on the arru and a lamp, apparently reading a paper. He then took severely wounded in several places on the arm and head, and is now in a very critical situation. In the room a knife, said to be a common shoemaker's knife, covered with blood, was found in one corner; various places about the room, to wit, the jam wounds ll, shutters, curtains, &c., exhibited marks window sill, shutters, curtains, &c., exhibited marks of blood, as if done by the hand, which leads us to presume that the rundinght assassin made his es-cape out of the back way. No blood was dis-covered on any part of the shed or yard fences. Mopement in Worcester, The Horcester Telegraph says: Gideon Vinall, a young maa of 22 years of age, huiling from Provi-dence, engaged himself to Mr, Van Alstin, in Worcester, as a dagaerreotypist, and during six days ser-vice in that calling, he intruded himself upon the notice of a young and inexperienced girl, the daughter of a respectable citizen, who had occasion to visit the daguerrean establishment in which he was engaged. By his very assiduous attentions he so far overcome the feelings and sympathies of the girl as to secure frequent interviews, many of which were clandestine, until his plausible representations won from her an engagement. The pa-rents of the deceived girl remonstrated, plead, threatened, but to no purpose. Vinall represented day. Hundreds collected about the place yesterday, having been brought there by Madané Rumar. A post mortem examination of the body was bade by Coroner Leidy, assisted by several physicians, which occupied the entire day. No new facts/were elicited. We give all the facts in this report - The deceased was about twenty-three of five years of age, and was caritofic. Her father, Mr. Godfrey Sheek, keeps a contectionary establish-ment on the north side of Arch street, below 7th. The family is very respectable. THE MURDERER ARRESTED.-Innocent blood cries aloud to Heaven. Such crime must out. The avenger was upon the heels of the assassion in h the afternoon the MUNDERER was taken. The burglar, Charles Langfeldt—to whom suspicion so strongly pointed, is the prisoner. The police were upon his track, and officer William Russell, the irewd, sagacious and indefatigable special constable of the criminal department of the city polic was the lucky man to put his hand upon the shoul-der of the perpetrator of the murder, and to bring to light evidence which can leave not the shadow of a doubt that the guilty has been brought to jus-tice, and that the poor atonement which the forfeit of the life of the criminal can give for such a monstrous act of villainy, will be speedily made. Langfeldt, whose history we gave at the time of his arrest in this city, about four years ago, is a native of Germany. From Germany he went to France. From France he come to New Orleans ; from New Orleans to Philadelphia. He was a convict in Europe, and arrived in this country thus stigma-tized. His subsequent conduct proved him to be a hardened villain. Soon after his arrival in Phil idelphia, and while working for Mr. Cassell a shoemaker, who then lived in the house now occut pied by Mr. Rademacher, he robbed, the Zion Church. When arrested, he had a vest made out township. enlarged from prison.

About a week since he took up his quarters at the shoemakers' boarding-house of Mrs. Martin, in By the same, Wr. John McCaskey to Mrs. Alartin, in Front street, below Vine. It was here, working at his bench, that he was arrested. And now to the proof against him. It is a chain of circum-stantial evidence, complete in every link, and strong as adamant. The bloody knife found in Mr. Rade macher's chamber has been identified by the fellow workmen of the prisone as built by the fellow workmen of the prisoner as having belonged to his kit. Langfeldt was at the place of Mr. Watt, cordwainer, in the Northern Liberties, on the afternoon previous to the murder. Mr. Watt, when he was gone, missed a knile which he suspected his visitor of stealing. This knile is still missing. All the physicians who examined the body of Mrs Rademacker as well as the person of Mr. Rademacker, agree that the wounds must have been inflicted by two knives-one sharp-the other blunt. The missing knife was sharp; the discovered knife

Mr. Frank saw the man in the alley at half-past one. Langfeldt was absent from his boarding house after midnight, the same night. That morning at three o clock, he came home, got a basin of water, took it up stairs and washed portions of his panta-loons. His coat has had blood washed from it. His boots have blood on them. The pockets of his pantaloons were cut out by the police, and in them are marks of his bloody fingers. The waist bands of his pants are bloody ingets. The waist-bands of his pants are bloody; so are the bottoms. He had on his shirt, with the back part front, and the bosom behind. The bosom was bloody .--Other articles of clothes found in his chest were
