to the resignation and flight of Metternich. The Director of Police, M. Seldnisky, has been expelled. The house of Prince Metternich was sacked by the mob, and the Grand Bukes have withdrawn inthe mah, and the Grand Bukes have left the city, which is under the protection of the city guards and the students. The accounts are but meagre as to details, but the result proves that a revolution has been effected in the Austrian capital. A letter of the 13th inst., from Vienna, says: "Vienna is in full revolt. All the inhabitants of the capital rose en masse, and every one is in fermentat en masse, and every one is in fermentation.
Students united with the burgess guard. The crowd then proceeded to the villa of Prince Metternich, situated on the Reeweg, and destroyed it.

Nineteen persons are said to have been killed, and fourteen wounded. The concute was very terrible. Cries of "The Constitu-tion," and "Liberty of the Press," were uttered.

The Aulic council of war had taken every measure necessary. The gates were closed to separate the city from the suburbs; the Bourse was closed. It is said that it was the deputies from Presburg who gave an impulse to the movement. The stu-dents, after delivering the most energetic speeches workmen assembled, were addressed by some of their own body. Groups were formed, in which the students and some of the citizens harangued the people. At hall past jour the troops fred on the Judenplatz, and six men were killed! The revolt had then attained its height. The captain commendant was dragged from his horse, and a student who had been wounded in the head was placed on it. The people who served as his escort
