The Returning Pestilence. BY JOHN C. LORD, D. D. By river and fountain. By desert and plain. Over valley and mountain

I am coming again To execute judgment-an Angel of Wrath, With Terror, and Anguish, and Death in my path In the East I began, O'er the dark jungles sweeping:

In the old Hindoostan Was wailing and weeping From the plague-smitten city e'en the Parians flee And Gunga, corpse-burdened, rolls on to the sea. On the flower scented-gale, Is the taint of my breath, And Persian wives wail For the Angel of Death. In the land of the rose his shadow had cast, And darkened the hopes of their heart as he pass'd

Then Siberian snows In my passage I crossed And the death-wail arose In the regions of frost. In the Ice-Monarch's mantle was there no defence Gainst the life-quelling touch of the pestilence.

By the sign of Salvation I paused for a time; From each Christian nation (gone, have fallen gradually into the custom, and we find Rose voices of crime. Though the symbol was there, the substance was

To the harvest of death I went speedily on. Then Russia—the cold— In my pathway I swept, And in Moscow, the old, The grey-bearded have wep Who saw, without tears, their palaces fired

For him whose commission at Moscow expired

And onward advancing, Like a strong man from wine Where sun-browned are dancing In the land of the vine. With the step of a giant, Death's wine pro

Before me the living-behind me the dead Weep maids of Vienna! Howl, Paris and Rome The gates of Gehenna,

Are opening for doom. The plague-cart shall wait at your mansion of pride, The rich with the poor to the Dark-House shall ride At last I shall sail

For the star-bannered West, And my barque shall not fail O'er the Ocean's broad breast, To land me-long dreaded-though my shipmate Where o'er the sea-buried the mermaidens weep.

The Trappe-"Ich Ersteige"-The Burial Place of Gov. Shunk.

RY JAMES REES. There is a pleasant little village called the Trappe, situated in a most delightful part of our State, about 28 miles from Philadelphia, on the main road leading to Reading. Its rural beauty the salubrity of the air of vicinity to the romantic Schuylkill, the intelligence of its inhabitants, all unite in making it as lovely a spot as the heart o man could desire. Not long since a question arose as to the origin of its name, and many were the strange interpretations given to its cognomen, and Some have asserted, and roundly too genealogy. that it took its name from a house of doubtful character into which strangers were entrapped, murdered and robbed. To this version some covent arguments have been adduced, and if it were no for proof in our possession of the real origin, this one could be sustained by many facts in relation to such a house. Another version is given of an old the disp settler being lost in the snow, and afterward found in one of the ravines trapped by underwood, &c. &c. As the true origin is somewhat curious, we send t to you for publication. Upwards of an hundred years ago there stood a small house at the foot of the hill, which runs back from the now main road, kept by an old man, an intimate acquaintance of the Rev. Mr. Muhlenberg,* who had located, or rather was in the habit of preaching there to the few inhabitants, as well as to the settlers in various parts of the State. He made this little hotel his resting place, and it is stated by old people residents of the place, that letters were received from the old country to his address, post-marke "At the Treppe, Providence, America" This house was built upon a little rising ground, some few fee above the level of the road, leading to which wer THREE STEPS, it had neither sign or signal, but was iversally called the house of steps, and the Ger nans, perhaps Mr. Muhlenberg himself, gave it the name of the "TREPPE," meaning steps. In progress of time the harsh sound of Treppe was softened down to Trappe, and by which name it has been called and known ever since. It is invariably writ ten Trap, and thirty years ago, if it had been spell ed or written Trappe, one-half of the people in that section of the country would not have known its Progress of the Soul. We wonder, indeed, when we are told that one lay we shall be as the angels of God. I apprehend that as great a wonder has been realized already or the earth. I apprehend that the distance between the mind of Newton and a Hottentot, may have been as great as between Newton and an angel There is another view still more striking. This Newton, who lifted his calm, sublime eye to the heavens, and read, among the planets and the stars, the great law of the material universe, was, forty or fifty years before, an infant, without one clea perception, and unable to distinguish his nurse's arm from the pillow on which he slept. Howard, too, who, under the strength of an all-sacrificing benevolence, explored the depth of human suffer ing, was, forty or fifty years before, an infant, wholnizes and recalls all that was heavenly and pure y absorbed in himself; grasping at all he saw, and in past life, by reverting to the dear thought of almost breaking his little heart with fits of passion when the idlest toy was withheld. Has not man already traversed as wide a space as separates him from angels?

Newspapers. A man eats up a pound of sugar, and the -pleaare he enjoyed has ended; but the information he gets from a newspaper is treasured up in the mine to be enjoyed anew, and to be used whenever occasion or inclination calls for it. A newspaper is not the wisdom of one man, or two men; it is the wis dom of the age, and of past ages too. A family without a newspaper, is always half an age behind the times in general information ened to such teachings, from such a teacher, should besides they never think much or find much to ing up in ignorance, without any taste for reading. Besides all these evils, there's the wife, who be over-rated. Well answered Madame Campan, in her lap, and nothing to amuse her mind from to the question, "What is needed to educate a nathe toils and cares of the domestic circle. Who tion?" when she wisely replied in one word— then would be without a newspaper?—Benjamin
