Defeat of the Indians by the Oregon Regiment—Ac-cidental Death of Col. Gillion—Peace Proposed— Troops Wanted—Scarcity of Provisions and Am-

19 Ten men have arrived here from St. Josephs and from Oregon, having been 87 days on the road. They bring intelligence of a battle having occurred on the 10th of March between the Indians and the Oregon Regiment, when the former were defeated ith a loss of fifty killed and as many wounded. On the American side nine were killed and ten wounded. The pursuit of the flying hostiles, after being kept up for some distance, was abandoned for want of provisions and ammunition. The regiment has so far been successful in defending the territory, but are greatly hindered by the scanty supply of provisions and ammunition, and an insufficient number of horses.

Colonel Gillian, the commanding officer of the regiment, was accidentally killed after the battle by e discharge of a rifle. Propositions for a treaty of peace have been en-termined by the Indians, but they had come to no
