RE-UNION IN HEAVEN.

Select Poetry.

If you bright stars which gem the night, Be each a blissful dwelling sphere, Where kindred spirits re-unite, Whom death has torn asunder here How sweet it were at once to die, And leave this blighted orb afar,

And soul meet soul to cleave the sky, . And soar away from star to star. But O, how dark, how drear, and lone, Would seem the brightest world of bliss, If wandering through each radiant one, We failed to find the loved of this; If there no more the ties shall twine, That death's cold hand alone could sever; Ah! then these stars in mockery shine,

More hateful as they shine forever. It cannot be each hope, each fear, That lights the eye, or clouds the brow, Proclaims there is a bannier sphere Than this bleak world that holds us now There is a voice which sorrow hears, When heaviest weighs life's galling chain, 'Tis Heaven that whispers-dry thy tears,

The pure in heart shall meet again.

From the N. Y. Tribune. The Peasant's Prayer.

ALMIGHTY Gon! and is it just,-That lords should waste our land's produce; While starving peasants till ?-That they in wine and vile debauch, Should Erin's wealth apply; While we, who earn it wearily, Famish for food-and die?

Thou art the friend of the oppressed The guardian of the poor And wilt Thou not. O God! avenge The wrongs that we endure ! Father! shall Famine waste our land,

And fever blight our isle? Till every foot on Erin's shore Shall be a fun'ral pile: Oh! shall it be forever thus? May we not hope for good,-Shall Erin's sons be ever slaves, Their children pine for food? Forbid it God! the famine stay, Our isle from tyrants free Give to our suffering people bread; To Erin, Liberty!

A Domestic Sketch.

BY MRS. LYDIA H. SIGOURNEY.

It is the duty of mothers to sustain the reverses Frequent and sudden as they have been to our own country, it is important that voung females should possess some employmen by which they might obtain a livelihood, in case they should be reduced to the necessity of supportreduced from affluence to poverty, how pitifully contemptible it is to see the mother desponding or helpless, and permitting her daughters to embarrass those whom it is their duty to assist and cheer.

"I have lost my whole fortune," said a merchant, as he returned one evening to his home; "we can no longer keep our carriage. We must leave this large house. The children can no longer go to expensive schools. Yesterday I was a rich manto-day there is nothing I can call my own."

The Paris Beggars. They trot along the crowded streets in a shuffling

gait, in their dirty blouses, and look into the shop windows as if they had fully imbibed the precept of M. Prudhom, "that property is a robbery."-They bear themselves as if the time was near at hand for that social "redemption" of which Louis Blanc talks as irreverently as flippantly. They look you in the face with a scowl of defiance that makes you tremble. Yonder, now, a stout man upon the corner, takes off his dirty cap to a lady who is passing—she gives him nothing; he grinds his teeth, and claps his cap upon his head with an emphatic action. Such is the beggar now-a-days in Paris! The women are no better; indeed they are more open in their threats. Only last evening a gentleman and lady upon the Boulevard, below me, were beset by a stout woman, who would not cease from her importunities: at length the gentleman hinted at finding the police: "And you, sir," said the woman, "shall find the barricades again." You will hardly be prepared to believe the fact, yet it is, unfortunately, true, that thousands of the malcontents look upon the triumph of their systematic oppressors; as a re-establishment of tyranny, as odious to them as that of the late regal dynasty. The National Guard, the army, and all the lovers of order are regarded as aristocrats, who are leagued into a system of popular oppression. They look for an escape for them, only by exterminating them. And there are those, better informed, who are yet dastardly enough to encourage such delusions; they talk of an approaching triumph of the people-or their ultimate victory over the aristocracy. Universal suffrage, and free discussions are become valueless: they look for such thorough equalization as shall be belie all precedent, and all previous decisions of human reason. With such teachers to encourage, it is by no means strange that beggars should threaten.
