

FOR PRESIDENT, Gen. Lewis Cass, OF MICHIGAN.

FOR VICE PRESIDENT, Gen. William O. Butler, OF KENTUCKY.

FOR GOVERNOR, Morris Longstreth, THE HONEST FARMER OF MONTGOMERY.

FOR CANAL COMMISSIONER, Israel Painter, OF WESTMORLAND COUNTY.

DEMOCRATIC COUNTY TICKET.

EMANUEL SHAEFFER, City.

State: JAMES McPHAIL, Lancaster county.

Assembly: ANDREW REED, Chester county.

ISAAC HULL, East.

J. K. KIRK, Little Britain.

F. A. THOMAS, Columbia.

CHRISTIAN SHERTZ, City.

Sheriff: BENJAMIN MISHLER, City.

PROBATIONER: JOHN MARTIN, Chester.

Register: H. BLICKENSDERFER, Warwick.

Recorder: JACOB MYERS, Manor.

Clerk of the Court: JOHN R. ALBRIGHT, W. Hempfield.

Clerk of Quarter Sessions: JACOB R. LONG, Mountjoy.

Conservator: HENRY HIBSHMAN, West Calico.

Abraham Peters, Manor.

Peter Felles, Warwick.

John C. Rothery, City.

Autodid: JOHN ELSER, Elizabeth.

The proceedings of the "Free Soil" meeting, held in this city, are published as they please, say, "by particular desire." Having no organ of their own in this city, we have deemed it an act of simple courtesy to comply with the wishes of the meeting.

Several communications have been crowded out by a press of advertisements.

REAL ESTATE.—We call attention to the advertisements in our columns for the sale of Real Estate. Some of the best property in the county is in the market, and those far or near who may wish to invest money in the safest of all banks—a bank of earth—purchase a good home, would do well to call this way.

A large and enthusiastic Democratic meeting was held last Saturday at Elizabethtown, at which eloquent addresses were delivered by Col. REAR FRAZER and JESUS D. BACHMAN, Esq., of this city. Proceedings in our next.

Hon. James Buchanan. Our distinguished townsman, the Secretary of State under the National Administration, arrived in this city on Saturday afternoon. Although his presence has not been generally known, he has been visited by a large number of his old neighbors and friends, who were always happy to extend to him a cordial and hearty welcome. Mr. Buchanan's stay, we regret to say, will be necessarily short, as he intends to visit his native county, Franklin, before he returns to Washington.

A Magnificent Pole.

A truly splendid Hickory, measuring over 150 feet, and straight as an arrow, was erected by the Democrats of this city, at the railroad depot, last Monday afternoon.

The Union and Tribune, and even our staid friend of the Examiner, we see, are disposed to be merry over an unsuccessful attempt to erect it on Saturday. It is evident, however, that they have not been into the secret. The pole did go up to the perpendicular position, but not proving of the desired altitude, it was deemed prudent to lower it, that it might grow over Sunday. The descent was very rapid and very unceremonious, and to be sure, but it rested patiently on the roof of a Democratic hotel—some say it had grown about 40 inches longer! Then it went up easily, and stood up, and is now truly a pride and ornament of that part of the city. Towering high above every surrounding object, it is a proper emblem of the elevation of our glorious party.

Franklin College.

The friends of education will be gratified to learn, that the Trustees of this Institution have been liberal in their expenditures to increase its usefulness. After various other improvements, they have lately fitted up the room of the Junior Department in the most approved modern style.—Each pupil is now provided with a patent revolving pivot-chair, manufactured by J. L. Morry (N. Y.). These chairs are considered more convenient than any kind of seat that has hitherto been used in schools. They are constructed on the same plan as the beautiful article manufactured at the Motville Iron Works, for public schools, &c. Each pupil is also provided with a separate desk, of elegant form and workmanship, which stands on cast iron scrolls, firmly attached to a flat top. It is believed there is no school-room in this section of the country which surpasses this in comfortable accommodations for the industrious student.

The Trustees certainly deserve commendation for their effort to improve the means of education; and it is to be hoped that the community will appreciate the value of the privileges which are now afforded to the young of this city. Here all that are properly qualified to enter the Junior Department are admitted free, and while dwelling under the parental roof, enjoying the protection and advice of kind relatives, and the pleasures of domestic life, may not only fit themselves for college, but advance two years in their collegiate studies, so as to enter the junior class of any other college in the Union.

Meeting at Penningtonville.

We attended an immense Democratic meeting on Saturday last, at Penningtonville, in Chester county. The finest spirit prevailed, and many spoke confidently of carrying the county for Cass and Butler. Addresses were delivered by Richard Yaux, E. W. Hutter, (Washington Baker, Joseph Hemphill, (the Democratic candidate for Congress), and P. Frazer Smith, of West Chester.

The speech of our talented townsman, Mr. BAKER, gave great satisfaction. He dissected the position of Gen. Taylor with a master-hand, and gave proof that he will sit no distant day rank with our most effective public speakers in the Union.

Maine Election.

The Democrats of Maine have achieved a noble victory. They have carried both branches of the Legislature, five of the seven members of Congress, and have given to Dana (Dem.) for Governor a 1,000 majority over Hamlin (Whig). The Free Soil vote, however, has prevented an election by the people. As a plurality chooses the Presidential electors, the vote of Maine is entirely secure for Cass and Butler.

Gen. Cass and the Moralists.

In the course of his eventful and highly useful public career, Gen. Lewis Cass has rendered not only signal services to his country, but has conferred innumerable benefits on individuals and communities. Among the latter, he has endeavored himself to the highly respectable society of Moralists, in a way that will ever gratefully remember.

By two acts of the old Congress, passed 1783 and 1788, three several tracts of land upon the Muskingum river, in the now State of Ohio, containing 12,000 acres, were granted to the Moravian Society of United Brethren, in trust for certain Christian Indians. Every one knows with what zeal that Society directed itself to the civilization and instruction of our aboriginal people. They numbered among their missionaries men of the same faith and fervor as sent the Apostles forth in the first ages of the Christian church to propagate the Gospel.

The tracts of land, above described, were administered during many years by the society at a great expense for the civilization of the Delaware Indians. But in process of time the White settlements surrounded the Indians, and they generally retired to the more distant frontier. As the trust could no longer be executed, and as the Society had encountered much expense, and many equitable rights had been acquired, it became necessary to make some arrangement respecting the property, and in 1823 Gen. Lewis Cass was appointed, under the authority of an act of Congress, to close the matter with the agents of the Society, and to make provision for the disposition of the property. The whole matter, on the part of the United States, was committed to his discretion, and as he knew the zeal, and labors, and sacrifices, of the Society, and was well acquainted with the venerable Mr. ZACHARIAH TAYLOR, who lived not far from him, he entered upon the task with every disposition to deal with the Society in the spirit of liberality, which they so richly deserved, and for which he has always been distinguished.

In the fall of 1823 Gen. Cass met the Rev. Mr. DE SCHWENK, the Treasurer of the Society, and a man of acknowledged worth and intelligence, at the house of Mr. HICKERWELDER in Gnadenthal, where a satisfactory arrangement was made for the cession of the Moravian rights, and for the fulfilment of all the just and equitable stipulations on the part of the United States. Through their influence, sagacity, and kind and persevering efforts, Lewis Cass alone, did the Society obtain a satisfactory adjustment as embodied in an act of Congress, passed May 26, 1824, entitled, "An act providing for the distribution of three several tracts of land in Tuscarawas county, state of Ohio, and for other purposes."

Having spent a goodly portion of our own lives among the Herrnhuters, we know that these remnant of their most, familiar names, and their recital invariably awakens emotions of gratitude and delight. They speak of Lewis Cass in terms of the highest praise, and although generally of opposite politics, many of them would esteem it a sin against Conscience not to vote for the benefactor and friend of the devout and self-sacrificing Moravian Missionaries.

Leaving the Party.

In the reported proceedings of the "Free Soil" Convention held at Reading, we discover the following:

Dr. Elder of Philadelphia was called upon to address the Convention, when he responded in an eloquent speech, which called forth the most ardent cheering for free soil, free speech, and free men. He appealed to the Democracy of Berks to sustain the movement, and charged the Democratic party with having changed its principles, but not Mr. Van Buren.

It is the fashion of all renegades, when they turn their backs upon those that have long nurtured them, to contend that the party has left them, and not they the party! Mr. Van Buren it seems, is no better in this respect than ordinary apostates. He, too, we are told, by the advocates of the Free Soil, is the only saint left, while the remainder of the congregation have all turned sinners! As well might you take one brick from the Chinese wall, and contend that the wall had deserted the brick, and not the brick the wall! As well our drop of water from Lake Ontario, and charge the Lake, instead of the drop with going off!

We remember hearing, or perhaps reading, an anecdote respecting the facetious Major Noah, which may not be out of place here. The Major, who was an ardent and zealous Jacksonian, and as the conductor of a leading Democratic journal in New York had rendered very distinguished services. Old Hickory rewarded him with a lucrative office. The Major was popular with the Democrats, and whenever a meeting was held at Tammany Hall, the "boys" adjourned to his residence, greeted him with loud cheers and congratulations, and were in turn most heartily returned.

In an evil moment, however, the Major turned against Jackson, and came out on the side of the U. S. Bank. The men of Tammany came again, but not, as before, with cheers and shouts of rejoicing. Hisses, groans and calumnious yells now announced their presence. The Major lay snugly concealed in bed, pretending to be asleep. His faithful backer, who was always ready to play the part of a "Mars" de Democrat, at the time, "These fellows, sirs," replied the wide-awake Major, "they have left the party!"

"Free Soil" State Convention.

This body of trait politicians met at Reading, on the 13th instant, and organized by the appointment of Benjamin J. Richards of Philadelphia as President. An Electoral ticket, pledged to Van Buren and Adams, was formed, and it was found that the name of HENRY CARTER of Little Britain town, herefore an active Whig. A resolution to nominate candidates for Governor and Canal Commissioner was rejected, and a State Central Committee appointed, of which Dr. Joseph Gibbons and P. Martin Heitler of this city are members. Besides John Van Buren, the Speakers were Doctor Cassman, "Doctor" Clark, and Doctor Snodgrass—enough of the Faculty to should say, to physic a much more powerful party to death. The convention was doubtless convened at Reading, to influence the vote of old Berks, and divide her mighty Democracy. Vain and impotent conclusion! They might as well attempt to seize the county itself by the four corners, lift it from the bed of mother earth in which the God of Nature has planted it, and throw it a chaotic mass into the lap of Federal Lancaster, as to turn her stony Democracy from the faith of their fathers.

"Head him, or die."

JOHN M. BATES of Virginia has written a letter to the editor of the New York Tribune, encouraging the movement in favor of Mr. Clay. Mr. Bates says:

As matters now stand, admitting Gen. Taylor to be a Whig candidate, (which, in my opinion, the party is doomed to certain, inevitable, and disgraceful defeat, and every man not wildly blind must see,) it is not possible to elect a man from a million and a quarter to a million and a half of free, independent Whig voters could be wheeled into line at the word of command from a corrupt and fifth-rate Washington politician (most of whom had scarcely shed their pin-leathers in politics) for a candidate who had never filled a post, and who had not for forty years, and perhaps in his life, given a vote for man or measure, without experience or knowledge of the practical operations of any one of the domestic questions which we had to deal.

A BANK CONFESION.—The editor of the New York Daily Book, Dr. Bacon, who formerly was associated editor of the N. Y. Courier and Enquirer, and is still an ardent, uncompromising Whig, writes the following truth: "In fact, the head of the party is chopped off, and its heart is broken. It is as dead as Julius Cesar, and its resurrection will be slow."

Taylor and Slavery.

But for the gravity and coolness of the imposture, it would certainly afford ground of amusement, to expose the gross inconsistencies of the Federal press in Pennsylvania, and at the North generally, when treating of the position of Gen. Taylor on the subject of Slavery. Their journals are literally filled with malice against the patriotic Cass, who is not the owner of a slave, never was, and most likely never will be, while they overflow with the praises of Gen. Taylor, who is a habitual trader and dealer in human flesh and blood! We leave it to themselves to reconcile the glaring inconsistency of such conduct. They must certainly calculate largely on the public gullibility if they presume to blind people's eyes and hearts to such a palpable contradiction. Intelligent and reflecting men will ask themselves the question: How can it be that Gen. Cass is the Slavery candidate for the Presidency, whose hands are unstained by the traffic, and Gen. Taylor the Anti-Slavery candidate, whose drawers are filled with rags of stolen goods, and who is a habitual trader and dealer in human flesh and blood? We leave it to themselves to reconcile the glaring inconsistency of such conduct. They must certainly calculate largely on the public gullibility if they presume to blind people's eyes and hearts to such a palpable contradiction. Intelligent and reflecting men will ask themselves the question: How can it be that Gen. Cass is the Slavery candidate for the Presidency, whose hands are unstained by the traffic, and Gen. Taylor the Anti-Slavery candidate, whose drawers are filled with rags of stolen goods, and who is a habitual trader and dealer in human flesh and blood? We leave it to themselves to reconcile the glaring inconsistency of such conduct. They must certainly calculate largely on the public gullibility if they presume to blind people's eyes and hearts to such a palpable contradiction. Intelligent and reflecting men will ask themselves the question: How can it be that Gen. Cass is the Slavery candidate for the Presidency, whose hands are unstained by the traffic, and Gen. Taylor the Anti-Slavery candidate, whose drawers are filled with rags of stolen goods, and who is a habitual trader and dealer in human flesh and blood? We leave it to themselves to reconcile the glaring inconsistency of such conduct. They must certainly calculate largely on the public gullibility if they presume to blind people's eyes and hearts to such a palpable contradiction. Intelligent and reflecting men will ask themselves the question: How can it be that Gen. Cass is the Slavery candidate for the Presidency, whose hands are unstained by the traffic, and Gen. Taylor the Anti-Slavery candidate, whose drawers are filled with rags of stolen goods, and who is a habitual trader and dealer in human flesh and blood? We leave it to themselves to reconcile the glaring inconsistency of such conduct. They must certainly calculate largely on the public gullibility if they presume to blind people's eyes and hearts to such a palpable contradiction. Intelligent and reflecting men will ask themselves the question: How can it be that Gen. Cass is the Slavery candidate for the Presidency, whose hands are unstained by the traffic, and Gen. Taylor the Anti-Slavery candidate, whose drawers are filled with rags of stolen goods, and who is a habitual trader and dealer in human flesh and blood? We leave it to themselves to reconcile the glaring inconsistency of such conduct. They must certainly calculate largely on the public gullibility if they presume to blind people's eyes and hearts to such a palpable contradiction. Intelligent and reflecting men will ask themselves the question: How can it be that Gen. Cass is the Slavery candidate for the Presidency, whose hands are unstained by the traffic, and Gen. Taylor the Anti-Slavery candidate, whose drawers are filled with rags of stolen goods, and who is a habitual trader and dealer in human flesh and blood? We leave it to themselves to reconcile the glaring inconsistency of such conduct. They must certainly calculate largely on the public gullibility if they presume to blind people's eyes and hearts to such a palpable contradiction. Intelligent and reflecting men will ask themselves the question: How can it be that Gen. Cass is the Slavery candidate for the Presidency, whose hands are unstained by the traffic, and Gen. Taylor the Anti-Slavery candidate, whose drawers are filled with rags of stolen goods, and who is a habitual trader and dealer in human flesh and blood? We leave it to themselves to reconcile the glaring inconsistency of such conduct. They must certainly calculate largely on the public gullibility if they presume to blind people's eyes and hearts to such a palpable contradiction. Intelligent and reflecting men will ask themselves the question: How can it be that Gen. Cass is the Slavery candidate for the Presidency, whose hands are unstained by the traffic, and Gen. Taylor the Anti-Slavery candidate, whose drawers are filled with rags of stolen goods, and who is a habitual trader and dealer in human flesh and blood? We leave it to themselves to reconcile the glaring inconsistency of such conduct. They must certainly calculate largely on the public gullibility if they presume to blind people's eyes and hearts to such a palpable contradiction. Intelligent and reflecting men will ask themselves the question: How can it be that Gen. Cass is the Slavery candidate for the Presidency, whose hands are unstained by the traffic, and Gen. Taylor the Anti-Slavery candidate, whose drawers are filled with rags of stolen goods, and who is a habitual trader and dealer in human flesh and blood? We leave it to themselves to reconcile the glaring inconsistency of such conduct. They must certainly calculate largely on the public gullibility if they presume to blind people's eyes and hearts to such a palpable contradiction. Intelligent and reflecting men will ask themselves the question: How can it be that Gen. Cass is the Slavery candidate for the Presidency, whose hands are unstained by the traffic, and Gen. Taylor the Anti-Slavery candidate, whose drawers are filled with rags of stolen goods, and who is a habitual trader and dealer in human flesh and blood? We leave it to themselves to reconcile the glaring inconsistency of such conduct. They must certainly calculate largely on the public gullibility if they presume to blind people's eyes and hearts to such a palpable contradiction. Intelligent and reflecting men will ask themselves the question: How can it be that Gen. Cass is the Slavery candidate for the Presidency, whose hands are unstained by the traffic, and Gen. Taylor the Anti-Slavery candidate, whose drawers are filled with rags of stolen goods, and who is a habitual trader and dealer in human flesh and blood? We leave it to themselves to reconcile the glaring inconsistency of such conduct. They must certainly calculate largely on the public gullibility if they presume to blind people's eyes and hearts to such a palpable contradiction. Intelligent and reflecting men will ask themselves the question: How can it be that Gen. Cass is the Slavery candidate for the Presidency, whose hands are unstained by the traffic, and Gen. Taylor the Anti-Slavery candidate, whose drawers are filled with rags of stolen goods, and who is a habitual trader and dealer in human flesh and blood? We leave it to themselves to reconcile the glaring inconsistency of such conduct. They must certainly calculate largely on the public gullibility if they presume to blind people's eyes and hearts to such a palpable contradiction. Intelligent and reflecting men will ask themselves the question: How can it be that Gen. Cass is the Slavery candidate for the Presidency, whose hands are unstained by the traffic, and Gen. Taylor the Anti-Slavery candidate, whose drawers are filled with rags of stolen goods, and who is a habitual trader and dealer in human flesh and blood? We leave it to themselves to reconcile the glaring inconsistency of such conduct. They must certainly calculate largely on the public gullibility if they presume to blind people's eyes and hearts to such a palpable contradiction. Intelligent and reflecting men will ask themselves the question: How can it be that Gen. Cass is the Slavery candidate for the Presidency, whose hands are unstained by the traffic, and Gen. Taylor the Anti-Slavery candidate, whose drawers are filled with rags of stolen goods, and who is a habitual trader and dealer in human flesh and blood? We leave it to themselves to reconcile the glaring inconsistency of such conduct. They must certainly calculate largely on the public gullibility if they presume to blind people's eyes and hearts to such a palpable contradiction. Intelligent and reflecting men will ask themselves the question: How can it be that Gen. Cass is the Slavery candidate for the Presidency, whose hands are unstained by the traffic, and Gen. Taylor the Anti-Slavery candidate, whose drawers are filled with rags of stolen goods, and who is a habitual trader and dealer in human flesh and blood? We leave it to themselves to reconcile the glaring inconsistency of such conduct. They must certainly calculate largely on the public gullibility if they presume to blind people's eyes and hearts to such a palpable contradiction. Intelligent and reflecting men will ask themselves the question: How can it be that Gen. Cass is the Slavery candidate for the Presidency, whose hands are unstained by the traffic, and Gen. Taylor the Anti-Slavery candidate, whose drawers are filled with rags of stolen goods, and who is a habitual trader and dealer in human flesh and blood? We leave it to themselves to reconcile the glaring inconsistency of such conduct. They must certainly calculate largely on the public gullibility if they presume to blind people's eyes and hearts to such a palpable contradiction. Intelligent and reflecting men will ask themselves the question: How can it be that Gen. Cass is the Slavery candidate for the Presidency, whose hands are unstained by the traffic, and Gen. Taylor the Anti-Slavery candidate, whose drawers are filled with rags of stolen goods, and who is a habitual trader and dealer in human flesh and blood? We leave it to themselves to reconcile the glaring inconsistency of such conduct. They must certainly calculate largely on the public gullibility if they presume to blind people's eyes and hearts to such a palpable contradiction. Intelligent and reflecting men will ask themselves the question: How can it be that Gen. Cass is the Slavery candidate for the Presidency, whose hands are unstained by the traffic, and Gen. Taylor the Anti-Slavery candidate, whose drawers are filled with rags of stolen goods, and who is a habitual trader and dealer in human flesh and blood? We leave it to themselves to reconcile the glaring inconsistency of such conduct. They must certainly calculate largely on the public gullibility if they presume to blind people's eyes and hearts to such a palpable contradiction. Intelligent and reflecting men will ask themselves the question: How can it be that Gen. Cass is the Slavery candidate for the Presidency, whose hands are unstained by the traffic, and Gen. Taylor the Anti-Slavery candidate, whose drawers are filled with rags of stolen goods, and who is a habitual trader and dealer in human flesh and blood? We leave it to themselves to reconcile the glaring inconsistency of such conduct. They must certainly calculate largely on the public gullibility if they presume to blind people's eyes and hearts to such a palpable contradiction. Intelligent and reflecting men will ask themselves the question: How can it be that Gen. Cass is the Slavery candidate for the Presidency, whose hands are unstained by the traffic, and Gen. Taylor the Anti-Slavery candidate, whose drawers are filled with rags of stolen goods, and who is a habitual trader and dealer in human flesh and blood? We leave it to themselves to reconcile the glaring inconsistency of such conduct. They must certainly calculate largely on the public gullibility if they presume to blind people's eyes and hearts to such a palpable contradiction. Intelligent and reflecting men will ask themselves the question: How can it be that Gen. Cass is the Slavery candidate for the Presidency, whose hands are unstained by the traffic, and Gen. Taylor the Anti-Slavery candidate, whose drawers are filled with rags of stolen goods, and who is a habitual trader and dealer in human flesh and blood? We leave it to themselves to reconcile the glaring inconsistency of such conduct. They must certainly calculate largely on the public gullibility if they presume to blind people's eyes and hearts to such a palpable contradiction. Intelligent and reflecting men will ask themselves the question: How can it be that Gen. Cass is the Slavery candidate for the Presidency, whose hands are unstained by the traffic, and Gen. Taylor the Anti-Slavery candidate, whose drawers are filled with rags of stolen goods, and who is a habitual trader and dealer in human flesh and blood? We leave it to themselves to reconcile the glaring inconsistency of such conduct. They must certainly calculate largely on the public gullibility if they presume to blind people's eyes and hearts to such a palpable contradiction. Intelligent and reflecting men will ask themselves the question: How can it be that Gen. Cass is the Slavery candidate for the Presidency, whose hands are unstained by the traffic, and Gen. Taylor the Anti-Slavery candidate, whose drawers are filled with rags of stolen goods, and who is a habitual trader and dealer in human flesh and blood? We leave it to themselves to reconcile the glaring inconsistency of such conduct. They must certainly calculate largely on the public gullibility if they presume to blind people's eyes and hearts to such a palpable contradiction. Intelligent and reflecting men will ask themselves the question: How can it be that Gen. Cass is the Slavery candidate for the Presidency, whose hands are unstained by the traffic, and Gen. Taylor the Anti-Slavery candidate, whose drawers are filled with rags of stolen goods, and who is a habitual trader and dealer in human flesh and blood? We leave it to themselves to reconcile the glaring inconsistency of such conduct. They must certainly calculate largely on the public gullibility if they presume to blind people's eyes and hearts to such a palpable contradiction. Intelligent and reflecting men will ask themselves the question: How can it be that Gen. Cass is the Slavery candidate for the Presidency, whose hands are unstained by the traffic, and Gen. Taylor the Anti-Slavery candidate, whose drawers are filled with rags of stolen goods, and who is a habitual trader and dealer in human flesh and blood? We leave it to themselves to reconcile the glaring inconsistency of such conduct. They must certainly calculate largely on the public gullibility if they presume to blind people's eyes and hearts to such a palpable contradiction. Intelligent and reflecting men will ask themselves the question: How can it be that Gen. Cass is the Slavery candidate for the Presidency, whose hands are unstained by the traffic, and Gen. Taylor the Anti-Slavery candidate, whose drawers are filled with rags of stolen goods, and who is a habitual trader and dealer in human flesh and blood? We leave it to themselves to reconcile the glaring inconsistency of such conduct. They must certainly calculate largely on the public gullibility if they presume to blind people's eyes and hearts to such a palpable contradiction. Intelligent and reflecting men will ask themselves the question: How can it be that Gen. Cass is the Slavery candidate for the Presidency, whose hands are unstained by the traffic, and Gen. Taylor the Anti-Slavery candidate, whose drawers are filled with rags of stolen goods, and who is a habitual trader and dealer in human flesh and blood? We leave it to themselves to reconcile the glaring inconsistency of such conduct. They must certainly calculate largely on the public gullibility if they presume to blind people's eyes and hearts to such a palpable contradiction. Intelligent and reflecting men will ask themselves the question: How can it be that Gen. Cass is the Slavery candidate for the Presidency, whose hands are unstained by the traffic, and Gen. Taylor the Anti-Slavery candidate, whose drawers are filled with rags of stolen goods, and who is a habitual trader and dealer in human flesh and blood? We leave it to themselves to reconcile the glaring inconsistency of such conduct. They must certainly calculate largely on the public gullibility if they presume to blind people's eyes and hearts to such a palpable contradiction. Intelligent and reflecting men will ask themselves the question: How can it be that Gen. Cass is the Slavery candidate for the Presidency, whose hands are unstained by the traffic, and Gen. Taylor the Anti-Slavery candidate, whose drawers are filled with rags of stolen goods, and who is a habitual trader and dealer in human flesh and blood? We leave it to themselves to reconcile the glaring inconsistency of such conduct. They must certainly calculate largely on the public gullibility if they presume to blind people's eyes and hearts to such a palpable contradiction. Intelligent and reflecting men will ask themselves the question: How can it be that Gen. Cass is the Slavery candidate for the Presidency, whose hands are unstained by the traffic, and Gen. Taylor the Anti-Slavery candidate, whose drawers are filled with rags of stolen goods, and who is a habitual trader and dealer in human flesh and blood? We leave it to themselves to reconcile the glaring inconsistency of such conduct. They must certainly calculate largely on the public gullibility if they presume to blind people's eyes and hearts to such a palpable contradiction. Intelligent and reflecting men will ask themselves the question: How can it be that Gen. Cass is the Slavery candidate for the Presidency, whose hands are unstained by the traffic, and Gen. Taylor the Anti-Slavery candidate, whose drawers are filled with rags of stolen goods, and who is a habitual trader and dealer in human flesh and blood? We leave it to themselves to reconcile the glaring inconsistency of such conduct. They must certainly calculate largely on the public gullibility if they presume to blind people's eyes and hearts to such a palpable contradiction. Intelligent and reflecting men will ask themselves the question: How can it be that Gen. Cass is the Slavery candidate for the Presidency, whose hands are unstained by the traffic, and Gen. Taylor the Anti-Slavery candidate, whose drawers are filled with rags of stolen goods, and who is a habitual trader and dealer in human flesh and blood? We leave it to themselves to reconcile the glaring inconsistency of such conduct. They must certainly calculate largely on the public gullibility if they presume to blind people's eyes and hearts to such a palpable contradiction. Intelligent and reflecting men will ask themselves the question: How can it be that Gen. Cass is the Slavery candidate for the Presidency, whose hands are unstained by the traffic, and Gen. Taylor the Anti-Slavery candidate, whose drawers are filled with rags of stolen goods, and who is a habitual trader and dealer in human flesh and blood? We leave it to themselves to reconcile the glaring inconsistency of such conduct. They must certainly calculate largely on the public gullibility if they presume to blind people's eyes and hearts to such a palpable contradiction. Intelligent and reflecting men will ask themselves the question: How can it be that Gen. Cass is the Slavery candidate for the Presidency, whose hands are unstained by the traffic, and Gen. Taylor the Anti-Slavery candidate, whose drawers are filled with rags of stolen goods, and who is a habitual trader and dealer in human flesh and blood? We leave it to themselves to reconcile the glaring inconsistency of such conduct. They must certainly calculate largely on the public gullibility if they presume to blind people's eyes and hearts to such a palpable contradiction. Intelligent and reflecting men will ask themselves the question: How can it be that Gen. Cass is the Slavery candidate for the Presidency, whose hands are unstained by the traffic, and Gen. Taylor the Anti-Slavery candidate, whose drawers are filled with rags of stolen goods, and who is a habitual trader and dealer in human flesh and blood? We leave it to themselves to reconcile the glaring inconsistency of such conduct. They must certainly calculate largely on the public gullibility if they presume to blind people's eyes and hearts to such a palpable contradiction. Intelligent and reflecting men will ask themselves the question: How can it be that Gen. Cass is the Slavery candidate for the Presidency, whose hands are unstained by the traffic, and Gen. Taylor the Anti-Slavery candidate, whose drawers are filled with rags of stolen goods, and who is a habitual trader and dealer in human flesh and blood? We leave it to themselves to reconcile the glaring inconsistency of such conduct. They must certainly calculate largely on the public gullibility if they presume to blind people's eyes and hearts to such a palpable contradiction. Intelligent and reflecting men will ask themselves the question: How can it be that Gen. Cass is the Slavery candidate for the Presidency, whose hands are unstained by the traffic, and Gen. Taylor the Anti-Slavery candidate, whose drawers are filled with rags of stolen goods, and who is a habitual trader and dealer in human flesh and blood? We leave it to themselves to reconcile the glaring inconsistency of such conduct. They must certainly calculate largely on the public gullibility if they presume to blind people's eyes and hearts to such a palpable contradiction. Intelligent and reflecting men will ask themselves the question: How can it be that Gen. Cass is the Slavery candidate for the Presidency, whose hands are unstained by the traffic, and Gen. Taylor the Anti-Slavery candidate, whose drawers are filled with rags of stolen goods, and who is a habitual trader and dealer in human flesh and blood? We leave it to themselves to reconcile the glaring inconsistency of such conduct. They must certainly calculate largely on the public gullibility if they presume to blind people's eyes and hearts to such a palpable contradiction. Intelligent and reflecting men will ask themselves the question: How can it be that Gen. Cass is the Slavery candidate for the Presidency, whose hands are unstained by the traffic, and Gen. Taylor the Anti-Slavery candidate, whose drawers are filled with rags of stolen goods, and who is a habitual trader and dealer in human flesh and blood? We leave it to themselves to reconcile the glaring inconsistency of such conduct. They must certainly calculate largely on the public gullibility if they presume to blind people's eyes and hearts to such a palpable contradiction. Intelligent and reflecting men will ask themselves the question: How can it be that Gen. Cass is the Slavery candidate for the Presidency, whose hands are unstained by the traffic, and Gen. Taylor the Anti-Slavery candidate, whose drawers are filled with rags of stolen goods, and who is a habitual trader and dealer in human flesh and blood? We leave it to themselves to reconcile the glaring inconsistency of such conduct. They must certainly calculate largely on the public gullibility if they presume to blind people's eyes and hearts to such a palpable contradiction. Intelligent and reflecting men will ask themselves the question: How can it be that Gen. Cass is the Slavery candidate for the Presidency, whose hands are unstained by the traffic, and Gen. Taylor the Anti-Slavery candidate, whose drawers are filled with rags of stolen goods, and who is a habitual trader and dealer in human flesh and blood? We leave it to themselves to reconcile the glaring inconsistency of such conduct. They must certainly calculate largely on the public gullibility if they presume to blind people's eyes and hearts to such a palpable contradiction. Intelligent and reflecting men will ask themselves the question: How can it be that Gen. Cass is the Slavery candidate for the Presidency, whose hands are unstained by the traffic, and Gen. Taylor the Anti-Slavery candidate, whose drawers are filled with rags of stolen goods, and who is a habitual trader and dealer in human flesh and blood? We leave it to themselves to reconcile the glaring inconsistency of such conduct. They must certainly calculate largely on the public gullibility if they presume to blind people's eyes and hearts to such a palpable contradiction. Intelligent and reflecting men will ask themselves the question: How can it be that Gen. Cass is the Slavery candidate for the Presidency, whose hands are unstained by the traffic, and Gen. Taylor the Anti-Slavery candidate, whose drawers are filled with rags of stolen goods, and who is a habitual trader and dealer in human flesh and blood? We leave it to themselves to reconcile the glaring inconsistency of such conduct. They must certainly calculate largely on the public gullibility if they presume to blind people's eyes and hearts to such a palpable contradiction. Intelligent and reflecting men will ask themselves the question: How can it be that Gen. Cass is the Slavery candidate for the Presidency, whose hands are unstained by the traffic, and Gen. Taylor the Anti-Slavery candidate, whose drawers are filled with rags of stolen goods, and who is a habitual trader and dealer in human flesh and blood? We leave it to themselves to reconcile the glaring inconsistency of such conduct. They must certainly calculate largely on the public gullibility if they presume to blind people's eyes and hearts to such a palpable contradiction. Intelligent and reflecting men will ask themselves the question: How can it be that Gen. Cass is the Slavery candidate for the Presidency, whose hands are unstained by the traffic, and Gen. Taylor the Anti-Slavery candidate, whose drawers are filled with rags of stolen goods, and who is a habitual trader and dealer in human flesh and blood? We leave it to themselves to reconcile the glaring inconsistency of such conduct. They must certainly calculate largely on the public gullibility if they presume to blind people's eyes and hearts to such a palpable contradiction. Intelligent and reflecting men will ask themselves the question: How can it be that Gen. Cass is the Slavery candidate for the Presidency, whose hands are unstained by the traffic, and Gen. Taylor the Anti-Slavery candidate, whose drawers are filled with rags of stolen goods, and who is a habitual trader and dealer in human flesh and blood? We leave it to themselves to reconcile the glaring inconsistency of such conduct. They must certainly calculate largely on the public gullibility if they presume to blind people's eyes and hearts to such a palpable contradiction. Intelligent and reflecting men will ask themselves the question: How can it be that Gen. Cass is the Slavery candidate for the Presidency, whose hands are unstained by the traffic, and Gen. Taylor the Anti-Slavery candidate, whose drawers are filled with rags of stolen goods, and who is a habitual trader and dealer in human flesh and blood? We leave it to themselves to reconcile the glaring inconsistency of such conduct. They must certainly calculate largely on the public gullibility if they presume to blind people's eyes and hearts to such a palpable contradiction. Intelligent and reflecting men will ask themselves the question: How can it be that Gen. Cass is the Slavery candidate for the Presidency, whose hands are unstained by the traffic, and Gen. Taylor the Anti-Slavery candidate, whose drawers are filled with rags of stolen goods, and who is a habitual trader and dealer in human flesh and blood? We leave it to themselves to reconcile the glaring inconsistency of such conduct. They must certainly calculate largely on the public gullibility if they presume to blind people's eyes and hearts to such a palpable contradiction. Intelligent and reflecting men will ask themselves the question: How can it be that Gen. Cass is the Slavery candidate for the Presidency, whose hands are unstained by the traffic, and Gen. Taylor the Anti-Slavery candidate, whose drawers are filled with rags of stolen goods, and who is a habitual trader and dealer in human flesh and blood? We leave it to themselves to reconcile the glaring inconsistency of such conduct. They must certainly calculate largely on the public gullibility if they presume to blind people's eyes and hearts to such a palpable contradiction. Intelligent and reflecting men will ask themselves the question: How can it be that Gen. Cass is the Slavery candidate for the Presidency, whose hands are unstained by the traffic, and Gen. Taylor the Anti-Slavery candidate, whose drawers are filled with rags of stolen goods, and who is a habitual trader and dealer in human flesh and blood? We leave it to themselves to reconcile the glaring inconsistency of such conduct. They must certainly calculate largely on the public gullibility if they presume to blind people's eyes and hearts to such a palpable contradiction. Intelligent and reflecting men will ask themselves the question: How can it be that Gen. Cass is the Slavery candidate for the Presidency, whose hands are unstained by the traffic, and Gen. Taylor the Anti-Slavery candidate, whose drawers are filled with rags of stolen goods, and who is a habitual trader and dealer in human flesh and blood? We leave it to themselves to reconcile the glaring inconsistency of such conduct. They must certainly calculate largely on the public gullibility if they presume to blind people's eyes and hearts to such a palpable contradiction. Intelligent and reflecting men will ask themselves the question: How can it be that Gen. Cass is the Slavery candidate for the Presidency, whose hands are unstained by the traffic, and Gen. Taylor the Anti-Slavery candidate, whose drawers are filled with rags of stolen goods, and who is a habitual trader and dealer in human flesh and blood? We leave it to themselves to reconcile the glaring inconsistency of such conduct. They must certainly calculate largely on the public gullibility if they presume to blind people's eyes and hearts to such a palpable contradiction. Intelligent and reflecting men will ask themselves the question: How can it be that Gen. Cass is the Slavery candidate for the Presidency, whose hands are unstained by the traffic, and Gen. Taylor the Anti-Slavery candidate, whose drawers are filled with rags of stolen goods, and who is a habitual trader and dealer in human flesh and blood? We leave it to themselves to reconcile the glaring inconsistency of such conduct. They must certainly calculate largely on the public gullibility if they presume to blind people's eyes and hearts to such a palpable contradiction. Intelligent and reflecting men will ask themselves the question: How can it be that Gen. Cass is the Slavery candidate for the Presidency, whose hands are unstained by the traffic, and Gen. Taylor the Anti-Slavery candidate, whose drawers are filled with rags of stolen goods, and who is a habitual trader and dealer in human flesh and blood? We leave it to themselves to reconcile the glaring inconsistency of such conduct. They must certainly calculate largely on the public gullibility if they presume to blind people's eyes and hearts to such a palpable contradiction. Intelligent and reflecting men will ask themselves the question: How can it be that Gen. Cass is the Slavery candidate for the Presidency, whose hands are unstained by the traffic, and Gen. Taylor the Anti-Slavery candidate, whose drawers are filled with rags of stolen goods, and who is a habitual trader and dealer in human flesh and blood? We leave it to themselves to reconcile the glaring inconsistency of such conduct. They must certainly calculate largely on the public gullibility if they presume to blind people's eyes and hearts to such a palpable contradiction. Intelligent and reflecting men will ask themselves the question: How can it be that Gen. Cass is the Slavery candidate for the Presidency, whose hands are unstained by the traffic, and Gen. Taylor the Anti-Slavery candidate, whose drawers are filled with rags of stolen goods, and who is a habitual trader and dealer in human flesh and blood? We leave it to themselves to reconcile the glaring inconsistency of such conduct. They must certainly calculate largely on the public gullibility if they presume to blind people's eyes and hearts to such a palpable contradiction. Intelligent and reflecting men will ask themselves the question: How can it be that Gen. Cass is the Slavery candidate for the Presidency, whose hands are unstained by the traffic, and Gen. Taylor the Anti-Slavery candidate, whose drawers are filled with rags of stolen goods, and who is a habitual trader and dealer in human flesh and blood? We leave it to themselves to reconcile the glaring inconsistency of such conduct. They must certainly calculate largely on the public gullibility if they presume to blind people's eyes and hearts to such a palpable contradiction. Intelligent and reflecting men will ask themselves the question: How can it be that Gen. Cass is the Slavery candidate for the Presidency, whose hands are unstained by the traffic, and Gen. Taylor the Anti-Slavery candidate, whose drawers are filled with rags of stolen goods, and who is a habitual trader and dealer in human flesh and blood? We leave it to themselves to reconcile the glaring inconsistency of such conduct. They must certainly calculate largely on the public gullibility if they presume to blind people's eyes and hearts to such a palpable contradiction. Intelligent and reflecting men will ask themselves the question: How can it be that Gen. Cass is the Slavery candidate for the Presidency, whose hands are unstained by the traffic, and Gen. Taylor the Anti-Slavery candidate, whose drawers are filled with rags of stolen goods, and who is a habitual trader and dealer in human flesh and blood? We leave it to themselves to reconcile the glaring inconsistency of such conduct. They must certainly calculate largely on the public gullibility if they presume to blind people's eyes and hearts to such a palpable contradiction. Intelligent and reflecting men will ask themselves the question: How can it be that Gen. Cass is the Slavery candidate for the Presidency, whose hands are unstained by the traffic, and Gen. Taylor the Anti-Slavery candidate, whose drawers are filled with rags of stolen goods, and who is a habitual trader and dealer in human flesh and blood? We leave it to themselves to reconcile the glaring inconsistency of such conduct. They must certainly calculate largely on the public gullibility if they presume to blind people's eyes and hearts to such a palpable contradiction. Intelligent and reflecting men will ask themselves the question: How can it be that Gen. Cass is the Slavery candidate for the Presidency, whose hands are unstained by the traffic, and Gen. Taylor the Anti-Slavery candidate, whose drawers are filled with rags of stolen goods, and who is a habitual trader and dealer in human flesh and blood? We leave it to themselves to reconcile the glaring inconsistency of such conduct. They must certainly calculate largely on the public gullibility if they presume to blind people's eyes and hearts to such a palpable contradiction. Intelligent and reflecting men will ask themselves the question: How can it be that Gen. Cass is the Slavery candidate for the Presidency, whose hands are unstained by the traffic, and Gen. Taylor the Anti-Slavery candidate, whose drawers are filled with rags of stolen goods, and who is a habitual trader and dealer in human flesh and blood? We leave it to themselves to reconcile the glaring inconsistency of such conduct. They must certainly calculate largely on the public gullibility if they presume to blind people's eyes and hearts to such a palpable contradiction. Intelligent and reflecting men will ask themselves the question: How can it be that Gen. Cass is the Slavery candidate for the Presidency, whose hands are unstained by the traffic, and Gen. Taylor the Anti-Slavery candidate, whose drawers are filled with rags of stolen goods, and who is a habitual trader and dealer in human flesh and blood? We leave it to themselves to reconcile the glaring inconsistency of such conduct. They must certainly calculate largely