From the N. Y. Journal of Commerces The Apple Girl.

Day after day, with the regularity of a clock; girl of fourteen, shabbily dressed and not ove clean, has brought apples for sale into our office. She was here half an hour ago, and on going out moment since, we found her seated on the floor a moment since, we found her seated on the floor in the entry by the window, lost in the pages of a book which she was eagerly devouring. "Where, did you get that book!" we inquired. "I bought it at a stand, sir." "What is it?" "A Fairy We smiled and walked on: thinking longer f the incident than might at first be supposed. is leading a laborious life of poverty, compared with which all our trials and troubles seem but deeper anxiety than we ever experienced, sauses and dreams the old dreams of Fairy land, which we in our boyhood, and our fathers and their fathers, in young days revelled in. Forgetting the sounds of Wall street, the war of carts and engines, she reads fanciful tales of Ouplies and Sprites, and on the floor of our entry makes a magic circle" for Queen Mab... What matters to magic circle for queen Man... What matters to her the exchange of millions of money or the gigantic transactions of the street! What if ships are laden and unladen, fortunes made and lost? What if newspapers are to be published; what if the prices of the auction room disappoint the seller, or cotton and grain have fallen, or a steamer is below with news of wars and revolutions. She has no thought or care for all this. She is far re-moved from any effect of changes in the stockmarket: the storms that shake thrones are in an lerbolts which overturn nations, strike on mounain peaks too high to be felt or heard by her. Her life is in the valley, yet she leaves it, and lives another life among the beautiful creations of fancy. God has made none too low to dream, and none too high. The same book which occupies that girl's mind on the floor, has once been the companof the hours of some wealthy child, as its gilded leaves and rich covers (now stained and soiled) indicate. The lounger in a rich fautueil or on a costly sofa, had the identical pleasure, no more or less keenly, than this poor reader of fanciful stories. And what after all is the great difference be tween her and us? We all dream dreams contin-ually, and our ambitions are too often schoolboy ncies, that we forget not in our lives. We grasp bubbles which break in our hands, we pursue phantoms that fly before and vanish only in the
