CONTEMPT.

BY N. E. WILLIS. The following out-burst of mingled poetry and philosophy contains one of the most profound and avaluable lessons which man can learn: I have unlearned contempt. It is the sin Chat is engendered earliest in the soul, And doth beset it like a poison-worm, Feeding on all its beauty. As it steals Into the bosom you may see the light Of the clear, heavenly eye grow cold and dim And the fine upright glory of the brow Cloud with mistrust, and the unfettered lip, That was as free and changeful as the wind, Even in sadness redolent in love, Curled with the iciness of constant scorn. It eats into the mind till it pollutes All its pure fountains. Feeling, reason, taste, Breathe of its chill corruption. Every sense That could convey a pleasure is benumbed, And the bright human being, that was made Full of rich warm affections, and with power To look through all things lovely up to God, Is changed into a cold and doubting fiend. With but one use for reason-to despise Oh! if there is one law above the rest. Written in wisdom-if there is a word That I would trace as with a pen of fire Upon the unsunn'd temper of a child— If there's any thing that keeps the mind Open to angel visits, and repels e ministry of ill--'tis human love! God has made nothing worthy of contempt. The smallest nebble in the well of truth Has its peculiar meaning, and will stand When man's best monuments have pass'd away. The law of heaven is love, and though its name Hae been usurped by passion, and profaned To its unholy uses through all time, Still the eternal principle is pure: And in these deep affections that we feel Omnipotent within us, we but see The lavish measure in which love is given: And in the yearning tenderness of a child For every bird that sings above his head, And every creature feeding on the hills, And every tree and flower and running broo We see how every thing was made to love;

MELODY.

And how they err, who in a world like this

Find any thing to hate but human pride.

BY THE LATE WILLIAM LEGGETT? Were each a blissful dwelling sphere Where kindred spirits re-unite. How sweet it were at once to die. And leave this blighted orb afar, Mix soul and soul to cleave the sky.

But oh, how dark, how drear, and lone, Would seem the brightest world of bliss It wandering through each radiant one. We failed to find the loved in this; If there no more the ties shall twine That death's cold hand no more can sever; Ah, then these stars in mockery shine,

That lights the eye or clouds the brow Proclaims there is a hannier sphere Than this bleak world that holds us now, When heaviest weighs life's galling chain; 'Tis Heaven that whispers dry thy tears,

The Gentleman.

True gentlemen are to be found in every grade of society. The ploughman, with his broad sunburnt hand, his homely dress, and his open honest countenance, is oftener found to be possessed of the real attributes of a gentleman, than the enervated man-milliner, who is much more careful of his of his glossy wool were displaced, would be thrown immediately into strong convulsions. The blood the heart of a Russian serf, is as pure in the eyes of God as the life current which eddies round the princely fountain of the highest of England's no blemen. It is a false, illiberal idea, that because a man cannot claim alliance with the proud and wealthy, his name should be stricken from the list of gentlemen. We are all created alike-our mothers suffer the same pangs; and shall the one who is ushered into life upon a silken couch spurn him whose limbs were first laid on a truss of straw? Which class from time immemorial has shed honor and glory on the earth-the proud aristocrat or the poor peasant? Whose names are enrolled in the dazzling pages of history-the gentleman of fashion or the gentleman of nature? What voices are most heard, and to most effect, through out the world? Why, those of men born in pov erry but clothed by truth with the jewelled robe of honor. Does the mere fact of a man's being able to make a bow with scrupulous exactness constitute him a gentleman! Shall the children of one mother be divided, because one portion are gifted with gracefulness of action and coxcombry of demeanor, while the others will not stoop to cringe at flattery's fawn, or waste the hours given them by Heaven to improve, in the useless study of the puerile forms of fashion? Oh, how glad it makes one's heart to see the "painted lizards' see them skrink away at the approach of honest acknowledge their own inferiority!

Who is the gentleman? he who can boast of nothing but a name, upon which dishonor has your duty, and hundreds who were once alienated never thrown his leprous poison. He who can lie down upon his pillow at night knowing that he has done his neighbor no injury; whose heart is never locked to pity, and whose arm is always nerved to redress the injuries of the oppressed.

Who smiles not at misfortune, and who mocks not the affliction of his fellows. He who looks upon all as equals, and who fears not to stand in the presence of a king. The man who is guided by moral honor, and not obliged to have laws made for his observance. He who has true democracy in his soul-who desires and gives to every mal the enjoyment of his own opinions, provided those opinions do not intringe the decrees of justice in that survivalled place for bargains, THE BRE its most rigid sense. Such a man and only such a one should dare lay claim to the proud appellation (GODS, which will be sold at very small profits.) of a "gentleman." Thank find! we are in a country where the field of honor and renown is open to all. The lowest freeman in the land is in part the governor of its proudest officer. He who tills the earth walks erect in the proud dignity of natural right, knowing that he cannot be oppressed while he respects himself. There is no distinction of classes here—the blacksmith and the Senatorthe shoemaker and the President-all hail each other as "gentlemen." --- Crescent City.

Franklin's Resting Place.

Such was his worth, his loss was such. We cannot love too well, or grieve too much."

In one corner of the burying-ground, best known s Christ's Church-yard, repose the remains of the philosopher Franklin. On entering the yard from Arch street, attention will unavoidably be directed to his humble tomb by a well trodden path which leads from the gate to the marble slab which bear the simple inscription which will at once strike the beholder with wonder, viz; "Benjamin and Deborah Franklin." With wonder, I say, because we are accustomed to see the stones covering the enements of great men inscribed with eulogiums but the one we are now beholding has nothing but the words above quoted, and the year in which i

And this is the grave of a man who might once have been seen, a runaway boy, in the streets of Philadelphia, seeking employment as a printer; and again, as editor and proprietor of the United States Gazette, long so ably conducted by Mr. Chandler. Once trying experiments with a simple paper kite; again, astonishing the world with the discoveries made through its instrumentality. Once in England as a deceived journeyman printer; again as minister from an Iudependent Republic. Once in his workshop, as a laboring mechanic; again in the halls of Legislation, advocating the cause of Ladies freedom, and urging an oppressed people to rise and drive the British Lion from our forests. Yes he was one of those who signed away their lives. fortunes and honors, if necessary, for the welfare of their fellow-citizens. But all this could not save him from the hand of death. Though the Philosopher and Statesman must lie as low as the less favored, yet the circumstances connected with the lives of those whose motto was "non sibi sed putra," possess charms. which all can appreciate, and all upon that stone, and our eyes become fixed upon it as though it possessed an endearing charm. We look back on his life and deeds, and when we remember that a nation wept when Franklin died, we cannot refrain from dropping a tear over his the best advantage; and while he attempts that, he will at the same time spare no pains to instill into their youthful minds the strictest Morality, which he considers all important. He hopes, therefore, the the will be patential as such a tripulal in their than the will be patential as such as the late to the strictest morality, which he considers all important. clouds, where the first beams of the rising sun will gild his name; but that name is inscribed in charging the sun who read and cipher such that name is inscribed in charging the sun will be such as the sun will be such as the sun will be supported by the acters not easily to be erased, on every liberty-loving heart; and so long as Philosophy continues to be a science, benevolence a virtue and liberty the watch-word of the American people, will his memory be cherished, and his name be honored,-Bapt.

.... The Ancestry of Washington.

The Albany Evening Journal, referring to the fact says: Mr. Mascord, of Albany, in his recent visit to England, was also at the residence of the ancestors of Washington, and brought with him a fine painting of the old Washington Mansion, with a plaster cast of the monuments of deceased members of the family now to be seen in the church. He also took the following extract from " Baker's History of Northampton:

cel of the dissolved priory of St. Andrew, with all lands in Sulgrave and Woolford, and certain land in Stotesbury and Colton near Northampton, late belonging to the said priory, and all lands in Sul-grave late belonging to the dissolved priories of Canons Ashby and Catesby, were granted to Lawrence Washington, of Northampton, gent, who died seized in 20 Eliz. (1583-4) leaving Robert Washington, his son and heir, aged 40 years; who, jointly with his eldest son. Lawrence Washington, sold the manor of Sulgrave in 8 Jac. (1610) to his nephew Lawrence Makepeace, of the Inner Temple, London

Lawrence Washington, after the sale of this gloves than his honor; whose shirt bosom must estate, retired to Bungton, where he died. His section as a virgin's fame; and who, if one curl ond son, John Washington, emigrated to America about the middle of the 27th century, and, as exhibited in the subjoined pedigree, was great-grand-father of the American patriot George Washington.

Anecdote of Patrick Henry.

When the celebrated Patrick Henry, of Virginia was near the close of his life, he laid his hand on his Bible, and addressed a friend who was with him. "Here is a book worth more than all others print ed; yet it is my misfortune never to have read it with proper attention until lately." About the same time he wrote to his daughter-"I have heard it said that deists claim me. The thought pained me more than the appellation of Tory; for I consider religion of infinitely higher importance than politics, and I find much cause to reproach myself that I have lived and given no decided public proof of my being a Christian."

and mind them not. If they block up your path, walk around them, regardless of their spite. A man who has no enemies is seldom good for any thing-he is made of that kind of material which is so easily worked that every one has a hand in it. A sterling character-one who thinks for himself, and speaks what he thinks, is always sure to have enemies. They are as necessary to him as fresh air; they keep him alive and active. A celebrated character, who was surrounded by enemies, used to remark: "They are sparks which if you do not blow, will go out of themselves." Let this be your trodden under foot by the gentleman of nature? to feelings, while endeavoring to live down the scandal of those who are bitter against you. His unparalleled success some attribute to one cause, and some to another. And some, more envious than the rest, attribute it to any cause that her that the surprise his property of the surprise of the surprise his property of the that best suits their purposes, no matter how unjust, or how foul the misrepresentations. Again, there is another class more easily satisfied, and content is another class more easily satisfied, and content themselves by saying—'' Well, it is all luck—better to be born lucky than rich. Born under a lucky planet,'' &c, '' Pshaw says Dr. Franklin, of luck, all the luck I know of is in proper management.'' Precisely so, Dr., and just the operating cause in the extensive business done at the great LANCAS-TER HALL OF FASHIONS. The only secret in this large business, and the only reason that it of large, is because he is careful in the selection is good materials, and has all his goods well madeand then the fit of his garments cannot be surpassed;
