Dr. Franklin's Opinion of Luck.

THE astonishing success of JOS. GORMELY, in the CLOTHING BUSINESS, excites the surprise of some and the envy and jealousy of others. His unparalleled success some attribute to one cause, and some to another. And some, more envious than the rest, attribute it to any cause He has made particular arrangements to supply Prothonotaries with the new and approved Judgment Docket and Register, with the new Statement of Administration Acct., Old Books, Periodicals, Law Books, Music, Newspapers, &c., bound to at y pattern, and in any style required. He has made full and ample arrangements to bind Harper's Illustrated Edition of the Bible, and Harper's Illustrated Edition of the Bible. or how foul the misrepresentations. OCTÕBER.

BY WILLIS GAYLORD CLARK. Solemn, yet beautiful to view, Month of my heart! thou dawnest here, With sad and faded leaves to strew, The Summer's melancholy bier. The moaning of thy winds I hear, As the red sunset dies afar, And bars of purple clouds appear, Obscuring every western star

Thou solemn month! I hear thy voice : It tells my soul of other days, When but to live was but to rejoice, When earth was lovely to my gaze Oh, visions bright-oh, blessed hours, Where are their living raptures now I ask my spirit's wearied powers-

I look to Nature, and behold. My life's dim emblems rustling round n hues of crimson and of gold-The year's dead honors on the ground And, singing with the winds, I feel, While their low pinions murmur by, How much their sweeping tones reveal,

When spring's delight some moments shone, They came in zephyrs from the west; They bore the woodlark's melting tone, They stirred the blue lark's glassy breast Through summer, fainting in the heat,

They lingered in the forest shade; But changed and strengthened now, they beat In storms o'er mountain, glen and glade. How like those transports of the breast,

When life is fresh and joy is new; Soft as the halovon's downy nest, And transient all as they are true; They stir the leaves in that bright wreath, Which Hope about her forehead twines, Till Grief's hot sighs around it breathe,

Then Pleasure's lip its smile resigns A last for Time and Death way they ming! Like clouds in autumns gusty air, The burial pageant of the spring. The dreams that each successive year Seemed bathed in hues of brighter pride

At last like withered leaves appear,

And sleep in darkness side by side Miscellaneous.

There was a day when Talleyrand arrived i Havre, hot foot from Paris. It was in the darkest hour of the French Revolution. Pursued by the bloodhounds of the Reign of Terror, stripped of every wreck of property or power, Talleyrand secured a passage to America in a ship about to sail. He was going a beggar and a wanderer to a strange land, to earn his bread by daily labor. "Is there an, American staying at your house he asked the landlord of the hotel. "I am bound to cross the water, and would like a letter to some person of influence in the New World," The landlord hesitated a moment then replied

There is a gentleman up stairs, either from imerica or Britain, but whether an Americau He pointed the way, and Talleyrand--who cended the stairs. A miserable supplicant he stood before the stranger's door, knocked and entered. In the far corner of a dimly lighted room sat a gentleman of some fifty years, his arms folded, and marvelous work.

his head bowed on his breast. From a window directly opposite, a flood of light poured over his forehead. His eyes looking from beneath the downcast brows gazed on Talleyrand's face with a peculiar and search expression. His face was striking in its outline; the mouth and chin indicative of an iron will. His form, vigorous, even with the snows of fifty winters was clad in a dark, but rich and distinguished costume. Talleyrand advanced-stated that he was a fugi ve-and under the impression that the gentleman pefore him was an American he poured forth his istory in eloquent French and broken English-"I am a wanderer-an exile. I am forced to ly to the New World, without a friend or home. You are an American! Give me then, I beseech you a letter of yours, so that I may be able to earn | Is he old? should not be asked; but, is he active? my bread. I am willing to toil in any mannerthe scenes of Paris have filled me with such horror, that a life of labor would be paradise to a career prefer, in any important enterprise, to those young of luxury in France. You will give me a letter to gentlemen who lear and tremble at approaching one of your friends. A gentleman like you have shadows, and turn pale at a lion in their path.

The strange gentleman rose. With a look that Talleyrand never forgot, he retreated towards the door of the next chamber, his head still downcast, his eyes looking still from beneath his darkened brow He spoke as he retreated backward: his voice was full of meaning-"I am the only man born in the New World who can raise his hand to God and say-I have not a friend—not one in all America!"

Talleyrand never forgot the overwhelming sadess of that look which accompanied these words. · Who are you!" he cried as the strange man etreated towards the next room. "Your name?" "My name"-with a smile that had more of mockery than joy in its convulsive expressionmy name is Benedict Arnold." He was gone. Talleyrand sank in a chair grasping the words-"Arnold, the traitor!" Cain with a wanderer's mark upon his brow.-Even in that secluded room at that Inn of Havre, his crimes found him out and forced him to tell his

Dean Swift and the Tailor. A tailor in Dublin, near the residence of the Dean, took it into the "ninth part" of his head that not exceeding one square, will be inserted three times for one dollar, and twenty-five cents for each the prophecies, and especially the book of Revelutions. Quitting the shop board, he turned out preacher or rather a prophet, until his customers had left his shop, and his family were likely famişli. His monomania was well known to the Dean, who benevolently watched an opportunity to turn the current of his thoughts. One night, the tailor, as he fancied, got especial revelution to go that the time is past, when you look back to it, and convert Dean Swift, and next morning took up appears as if it were nothing; and you may believe the line of march to the deanery. Who is Old? A wise man will never rust out. As long as he an move and breathe, he will be doing something for himself, his neighbors, or for posterity. Almost to the last year of his life, Washington was at work. So were Franklin, and Young, and Howard, and Newton. The vigor of their lives never decayed. No rust marred their spirits. It is a foolish idea to suppose we must lie down and die, because we are old. Who is old? Not the man of energy; not the day laborer in science, art, or benevolence; but he only who suffers his energies to waste away, and the spring of life to become motionless; on whose hands the hours drag heavily, and to whom all things wear the garb of gloom. can he breathe freely and move with agility ?-There are scores of gray-headed men we should Modest Literary Request. "One morning," Scott said, "I opened a huge lump of a despatch, without looking how it was addressed, never doubting that it had travelled under some omnipotent frank, like the First Lord of Admiralty's, when, lo and behold, the contents proved to be a MS. play, by a young lady, of New York, who kindly requested me to read and correct it, equip it with prologue and epilogue, procure it a favorable reception from the manager of Drury Lane, and make Murry or Constable bleed handsomely for the copyright; and inspecting the cover I found that I had been charged five pounds odd for the postage. This was bad enough,-but there was no help, so I groaned and submitted. A fortnight or so after, another packet, of not less formidable bulk, arrived, and I was absent enough to break its seal too, without examination. Conceive my horror when out jumped the identical tragedy "The Cherokee Lovers," with a second epistle from the authoress, stating, that, as the winds had een boisterous, she feared the vessel entrusted with her former communication might have foundered, and therefore judged it prudent to forward
