

CLOVE ANODYNE TOOTHACHE DROPS. An immediate and perfect Cure.

THOSE who have felt the painful throbbing and ex cruciating pangs of this disease shooting through their jaws with most tormenting perseverance, and, as their jaws with most tormenting perseverance, and, as soften the case, have received but little sympathy from friends on such occasions, will no doubt be much pleased to know of a remedy that will never fail to quiet forever ful offender. This remedy is the CLOVE NODYNE, an unfailing cure. The following testimony is from one of our most distinguished practical Dentist tinguished practical Dentists:

Reinhardt's Patent Glass Pad Lever Truss. THESE TRUSSES have a superiority over an heretofree in use on account of their durability and cleanliness. The Rupture Pad, which is constructed of Glass, has a double motion: 1st, by revolving on its own axis, and 2d, by the Lever, by which it is attached to the main spring. In this which it is attached to the main spring. In this way it is so adjusted as to suit the motion of the body, and is always clean and durable, which in the ordinary stuffed pads is not the case. The manifest superiority these Trusses have over others, is, that they are more effectual in retaining the parts in their proper place and making an equal pressure. They can be adjusted to suit either side. The Umbilical Truss is unsurpassed, being so adapted as to remain perfectly secure when applied. Poetry.

THE FISHERMAN.

BY JOHN G. SAXE. There lived an honest fisherman I knew him passing well, Who lived hard by a little pond, Within a little dell.

A grave and quiet man was he, Who loved his book and rod: So even ran his line of life, His neighbors thought it odd. For science and for books, he said,

No school to him was worth a fig.

Except a "school of fish," The single minded fisherman A double-calling had-To tend his flock in winter time. In summer fish for shad.

He never had a wish.

In short, this honest fisherman All other toils forsook, And though no vagrant man was he, He lived by "hook and crook." All day that fisherman would sit Upon an ancient log,

And gaze into the water, like A cunning fisherman was he, His angles were all right, And when he scratched his aged poll,

You'd know he'd got a bite. To charm the fish, he never spoke, Although his voice was fine, He found the most convenient way Was just to "drop a line."

If made to speak to-day, Would own, with grief, this angler had A mighty "taking way," One day, while fishing on a log, He mourned his want of luck, When suddenly he felt a bite, And jerking-caught a duck.

And many a "gudgeon" of the pond,

Alas! that day the fisherman Had taken too much grog, And being but a landsman, too He couldn't "keep the log," In vain he strove with all his might And tried to gain the shore Down, down he went to feed the fish He'd waited oft before!

The moral of this mournful tale To all is plain and clear; A single "drop too much" of rum May make a watery bier, And he who will not "sign the pledge," And keep the promise fast, May be, in spite of fate a stiff Cold water man at last!

The Supreme Power.

From an eloquent article in the N. A. Review.

BY EDWARD EVERETT. "It has been as beautifully as truly said, that the undevout astronomer is mad." The same remark might with equal force and justice be applied to the undevout geologist. Of all the absurdities ever started, none more extravagant can be named, that the transfer of the control that the grand and far-reaching researches and dis coveries of geology are hostile to the spirit of re ligion. They seem to us, on the very contrary, to lead the inquirer step by step, into the more imme-diate presence of that tremendous Power, which could alone produce and can alone account for the primitive convulsions of the globe, of which the proofs are graven in eternal characters, on the side of its bare and cloud-piercing mountains, or are wrought into the very substance of the strata that compose its surface, and which are also day by lay and hour by hour, at work, to feed the fires of the volcano, to pour forth its molten tides, or to compound the salubrious elements of the mineral fountains, which spring in a thousand valleys. In gazing at the starry heavens, all glorious as they are, we sink under the awe of their magnitude, the mystery of their secret and reciprocal influences, the bewildering conceptions of their distances. Sense and science are at war The sparkling gem that glitters on the brow of night, is converted by science into a mighty orb-the source of light and heat, the centre of attraction, the sun of a system like our own. The beau tiful planet which lingers in the western sky, when the sun has gone down, or heralds the approach of morning,-whose mild and lovely beams seem to shed a spirit of tranquility, not unmixed with sadness, nor far removed from devotion, into the very heart of him who wanders forth in solitude to be hold it-is in the contemplation of science, a cloud that twinkle in the vault of night, the well instructthat twinkle in the vault of night, the well instructed mind sees opening before it in mental vision, the the pay more for what they buy, and second, by stungdous prechanges of the heavens. Its planets stupendous mechanism of the heavens. Its planets swell into worlds. Its crowded stars.recede, expand, become central suns, and we hear the rush of the mighty orbs that circle round them. The banks of Orion are loosed, and the sparkling rays which cross each other on his belt, are resolved into floods of light, streaming from system to system, across the illimitable pathway of the outer The conclusions which we reach, are oppressively grand and sublime: the imagination r them; the truth is too vast, too remote from the premises, from which it is deducted; and man, poor frail man, sinks back to the earth, and sighs to worship again, with the innocence of a child or Chaldean shepherd, the quiet and beautiful stars, as he sees them in the simplicity of sense. But in the province of geology, there are some subjects, in which the senses seem, as it were, led up into the laboratory of divine power. Leta man fix his eyes upon one of the marble columns in the Capitol at Washington. He sees there a condition the earth's surface, when the pebbles of every size and form and material, which compose this singular species of stone, were held suspended in the medium in which they are now imbedded, then will the people allow these politicians to disappoint, all their bright hopes for the future?

The following table shows the quantity of some a liquid sea of marble, which was hardened into of the principle articles of produce left at tidewasolid, fustrous, and variegated mass before his te Laughter.

Man is the only animal with the powers of laughing—a privilege which was not bestowed upon him for nothing. Let us then laugh while we may, no matter how broad the laugh may be, short of a lock jaw, and despite of what the poet says about "the loud laugh that speaks the vacant mind." The mind should occasionally be vacant as the land should sometimes lie fallow, and for pre-

Facts for Whig Protectionists. There is daily-growing up a deeper distrust of the whole system of Protection. However necessary it may be to the success of individual enterprise, this system is now pretty generally rewrapt sphere; a world of rugged mountains and stormy deeps. These brilliant results, so important to the country, and so vital to the agricultural interest, have, it seems, excited the envy of those purtisans, who labor more to promote the welfare of classes than of the great body of the people. he season advances. The returns of the imports and exports of the United States, as indicated in the official returns of the Treasury department, indicate similar results, as follows:—.

The exports of breadstuffs in the last vear, which has been one of good English harvests, has en much less than in 1847, the year of " famine. but it greatly exceeds that of any prior year, and the whole shows a greatly increased and benefi-cial trade, particularly in corn and provisions.— The export value of other domestic produce was not probably realized abroad, more particularly in relation to that which fell in price rapidly as the year advanced. Of the large amount under the head of foreign produce exported, a considerable portion was of the precious metals exported in the shape of foreign coin, through a pressure of extraor-dinary demand, growing out of political revolutions in Europe. This amount probably rivalled that imported in the previous year. The amount so xported was, however, nearly all supplied by immigration, and did not appear in the custom-house

The late European accounts are of a more en couraging aspect. Money continued abundant in the London market at 11/2 a 2 per cert., and breadstuffs were heavy under the large arrivals from the United States and Europe. The manufacturing districts were more active and the prospects more encouraging—so much so that an advance of ‡d-per lb., had been effected in cotton, in the face of the large crop and disturbed condition of Europe. The greatest excitement prevails on the Continent in which was to have come off on the 10th De ber. The Prince Louis Bonaparte would without doubt, be elected; and his manifesto had given much satisfaction from its pacific tone and sound economic views, clearly recognizing the fact that the future welfare of France depended upon the free exercise of individual industry and removal of taxes, through the economy effected by the diminution of the army and government pensioners. Should order be restored, and industry resume its course, the prospect of the coming year is of great prosperity for the United States.

EXECUTIVE CHAMBER, Harrisburg, Jan. 23, 1849. Mrs. Shunk—Dear Madam:—The accompa mying resolutions, passed by the Senate of this State, have been presented to me, with a request that I should transmit them to you, and at the same time, express "the regard of the two Houses for the state of the same time, express "the regard of the two Houses for the same time, express "the regard of the two Houses for the same time, express the same time, expre for your elevated character and their profound regret at the late providential dispensation," which deprived the State of an illustrious citizen, and ueprived the State of an illustrious citizen, and you of a devoted friend and husband.

In presenting these resolutions, which I would beg you to accept from the Legislature as a tribute to your worth, and a proper testimonial to the memory of the illustrious deceased, allow me to minds in their contents. to mingle in their regrets the expression of my peronal regard for the social and public virtues of the late Governor shunk, and my unfeigned con-dolence for your afflicting bereavement. He was an honest man and a sincere Christian, a devoted husband and an affectionate father, whose greatest delight was in the family and social circle, and in making all around him cheerful and happy. Be pleased to convey to both houses of the General Assembly my most grateful sense of the honor they have done to his memory, and for the sympathy and generosity manifested towards myself, under the afflictive bereavement which I have most heartfelt thanks. I am, dear sir, very respectfully, Your ob't servant,
