live a great way from them, Willie, and thou art not likely to see them in London." "No, my dear, I dare say not; they do not often come back, and even if they did, I could not find them in my holiday attire; I saw the paper which was paid to them by the great subscription discontinued until all arrangements are paid, unless by the option of the Editor." "Indeed, replied he, is my holiday attire more lovely, though humbly, offered up to his Creator in thanksgiving and praise." "The next day one of his sisters came jumping into the room and exclaimed, "Why, Willie! I wonder what great man thou art like!" "Indeed, replied he, is my holiday attire more lovely, though humbly, offered up to his Creator in thanksgiving and praise."

and cannot be thus used without a palpable fracture of the skull of Frisican. "Don't, won't and can't, though admitted as colloquial English, are not good contractions. We could have been, however, if people would avoid using don't in the third person, singular. "He does not" can never be properly abbreviated into "He don't." The Wife.

BY WASHINGTON IRVING. I have often had occasion to remark the fortitude with which women sustain the most shocking reverses of fortune. Those disasters which break down the spirit of man, and prostrate him in the dust, seem to call forth all the energies of the sex, and give such untiringly and elevation to their character, that at times it approaches to sublimity.
