THE SABBATH. BY EBENEZER ELLIOTT. Sabbath holy! Still thou art a welcome day. When thou cometh earth and ocean. Shade and brightness, rest and motion, Help the poor man's heart to pray.

Sun-waked forest, Bird, that soares O'er the mute, empurpled moor, Throstle's song, and steam like flowest, Wind, that o'er dew-drop goest, Welcome now the woe-worn poor.

Little river Young forever!
Young forever!
Cloud, gold-bright with thankful glee,
Happy woodbine, gladly-weeping,
Gnat, within the wild rose keeping,
Oh, that they were blessed as thee!

Sabbath holy!
For the lowly
Paint with flowers thy glittering sod;
For affliction's sons and daughters, Bid thy mountains, woods, and waters, Pray to God, the poor man's God! From the fever, (Idle never,
Where on hope, Want bars the door,)

From the gloom of airless alleys, Lead thou to green hills and valleys, Weary landlord's trampled poor. Pale young mother, Gasping brother, Sister toiling in despair, Grief-bowed sire, that life-long diest, White-lipped child, that sleeping sighest,

Come and drink the light and air. Life for deadliest wrong to pay; Yet, O Sabbath! bringing gladness Unto hearts of weary sadness, Still art thou the "Poor Man's Day."

Miscellaneous.

First Court in a New County. From Breckenbridge's Recollections of the West. The first Court in Butler (Pa.) drew the whole population to the town, some on account of business, some to make business, but the greater part from idle curiosity. They were at that time chiefly lrish, who had all the characteristics of the nation A log cabin just raised and covered, but without a window sash or doors, or daubing, was prepared for the hall of justice, a carpenter's bench, with three chairs upon it was the judgment seat. The bar of Pittsburgh attended, and the presiding judge, a stiff, formal, and pedantic old bachelor, took his seat, supported by two associate judges who were common farmers, one of whom was blind of an eye. The hall was barely sufficient to contain the bench, bar, jurors, and constables. But few of the spectators could be accommodated on the lower floor, the only one yet laid; many therefore clambered up the walls, and placing their hands and feet in the open intricacies between the logs, hung there suspended like enormous Madagascar bats. Some had taken possession of the joists; and big John McJunkin (who, until now, had ruled at all public gatherings,) had placed a foot on one joist, and a foot on another directly time being out of the hands of the law on bail or nature of prophecy. It was an anticipation of future recognizance: but when the imprisonment forms a part of the satisfaction or punishment, there can be no bail or mainprize. This is the reason of the common law in relatio o escapes under capias ad satisfaciendum, and also why a ca. sa. cannot issue after the defendant has een once committed and then discharged by the plaintiff. In like manner a man cannot be imprisned twice for the same offence, even it he be released before the expiration of the term of imprisonment. This is clearly a case of close custod and the prisoner must be confined, body and lim without bail or mainprize, in some place of incar-ceration." For instance, my breakfast was for a long time bread and milk, (no tea) and the paper makers act. drew after him three-fourths of the spectators and I ate it out of a two penny earthern porringer, with suitors, while the judge, thus relieved, proceeded to a pewter spoon; but mark how luxury will enter families, and make a progress in spite of principle; being called one morning to breakfast, I found it en restored, when the sheriff came rushing to house with a crowd at his heels, crying out "Mr. Jidge, Mr. Jidge, may it plase the coort!"

"What is the matter sheriff?" "Mr. Jidge, Mr. Jidge—Mr. McJunkin's got aff d'ye mind."—"What! scaped sheriff? Summon the posse comutatus!" The pause, the pussee—why, now, I'll jist tell ye

American Antiquities. From the N. O. Picayune

Several specimens of American antiquities have arrived in this city. They were discovered by an American traveller while exploring the country of the Sierra Madre, near San Luis Potosi, Mexico, and excavated from the ruins of an ancient city, the existence of which is wholly unknown to the present inhabitants, either by tradition or history. They comprise two idols and a sacrificial basin, hewn from solid blocks of concrete sandstone, and are now in the most perfect state of preservation.

The removal of these heavy pieces of statuary from not exceeding one square, will be inserted three times for one dollar, and twenty-five cents for each additional insertion. Those of a greater length wooden sleds, transported by canoes to the mouth of the Panuco, and thence shipped to this port. The largest of the idols was undoubtedly the God of Sacrifice, and one of the most important. It is of the life size, and the only complete specimen of the kind that has ever been discovered and brought away from the country—several attempts having been made by travellers, who were either thwarted by the natives, or encountered difficulties deemed mpracticable to overcome. The anatomical proportions and beauty of this statue are not admire at the present day, but the elaborate work upon its entire surface attracts at once the attention and scrutiny of the beholder. It is principally ornamental, interspersed with symbols of mythology and occasional hieroglyphics. It has two faces, representing Youth and Age: signifying that nonare exempt from offering life as a sacrifice. The right hand forms an aperture, in which a light is burned during the time of sacrifice. The smaller idol is the God of Sorrow, to whom worshippers came to offer up their devotions for the tears it had shed, and the refter afforded them in their griels. The statue is diminutive, the carvings plain, and the whole simply devised. The Sacrificial Basin measures two feet in diameter, and displays much skill and truth in the workmanship. It is held by two serpents entwined, with their heads reversed the symbol eternity, which enters largely into the mythology of the ancient Egyptians. The Egyptian gallery of the British Museum contains sever cimens of the work described.

The Newspaper. From the New Bedford Mercury. How endless is the variety of newspaper readers and how hard it is to satisfy their wants! Mr. A believes he shall discontinue his paper, because it contains no political news—and B is decidedly of the same sheet dabbles too freely i the political movements of the day. C does not, take it, because it is all on one side—and D, whose opinions it generally expresses, does not like it because it is not severe enough upon the opposition E thinks it does not pay due attention to fashion-able literature—and F cannot bear the flimsy notions of idle writers. G will not suffer a paper to e upon his table which ventures an opini slavery—and H never patronizes one that lacks moral courage to expose the evils of the day---l does not want a paper filled with the

M will not even read a paper that does not expose the evils of sectarianism—and N is decidedly of the opinion that the pulpit and not the press should meddle with religious dogmas.

O likes to read police reports; and P, whose appetite is less morbid, would not have a paper in which these silly reports are printed in his house—Q likes anecdotes—and R won't take a paper that publishes them. He went to work with his assistants, and soon pulled down by the legs those who were in no very great haste to obey. McJunkin was the last, and began to growl, as he prepared to descend. "What do you say sir?" said the judge. "I say, I pay my taxes; and has as good a reght here as ony mon." "Sheriff, sheriff," said the judge, "bring him before the court!" McJunkin's ire was now up; and as he reached the floor, began to strike his breast, exclaiming "My name is John McJunkin, d'ye see—here's the breast that never flinched, if so be it was in good cause. Dr. Franklin's Wife.

Franklin, in a sketch of his life and habits, re ates the following anecdote of his frugal and affec-ionate wife. A wife could scarcely make a prettier apology for purchasing her first piece of luxury. We have an English proverb, that says,

"He that would thrive, Must ask his wife." It was lucky for me that I have one as much dis-posed to industry and frugality as myself. She assisted me cheerfully in my business, and stitching pamphlets, tending shop, purchasing old linen rags for the paper makers, &c. We kept no idle serin a china bowl, with a spoon of silver. They had been bought for me without my knowledge by my wife, and had cost her the enormous sum of three-and-twenty shillings, for which she had no other excuse or apology to make, but that she thought her husband deserved a silver spoon and china bowl as any of his neighbors. This was the first appearance of plate or china in our house. which afterwards, in the course of years, as our wealth increased, augmented gradually to several hundred pounds in value.

Necessity of Prayer.

It is a great and indispensable obligation for all men to pray. The virtuous must invoke the mercies of heaven, and obtain, by prayer, the grace of perseverance. The sinner must implore, by prayer, the pardon of his offended Maker. The young must send up their prayer, that they may escape the seductions of the world, and remain unsullied in the end, and mount it by passing through the rounds, and stand upon the upper one erect. Another, who was present, said he had no doubt of it, as he had The old must sigh to heaven for pardon for the seen a man who had done the same thing, but with his addition, that when he had arrived at the top, the pulled the ladder up after him! sins committed in the season of youth, that their death may peaceful and happy.

A Good Daughter. A good daughter! There are other ministers o ove more conspicuous than her, but none in which gentler, lovelier spirit dwells, and none to which the heart's warm requitals more joyfully respond. There is no such a thing as a comparative estimate of a parent's love for one or another child. There is little which he needs to covet, to whom the treasure of a good child has been given. But a son's occupations and pleasure carry him abroad, and he resides more among temptations, which hardly permit affection that is following him per haps over half the globe, to be unmingled with anxiety, until the time when he comes to relinquish the shelter of his father's roof for one of his own

The lessor f recorded wisdom which he reads with her eyes ome to his mind with a new charm as blended with the beloved melody of her voice. He scarce knows weariness which her song does not make him forget, or gloom which is proof against the young brightness of her smile. She is the pride sation, with her eyes cast down, a soft blush on her cheek, and a quiet smile upon her lips, while in her hand that hung negligent by her side, was a bunch of flowers. In this way they were sauntering slowly along; and, when I considered them not but think it a thousand pities that the seasons fection.

A true love will almost certainly always greet their approaching footsteps that they cannot alienate. But their ambition should be, not to have it a love merely which feelings implanted by nature excite, but one made intense and overflowing by approbation or worthy conduct; and she is strangely blind to her own happiness, as well as undutiful to them to whom she owes most, in whom the perpetual appeals of paternal disinterestedness do not call forth the John Thomas, one of the missi nary brethren of Serampore, was one day, after addressing a crowd of the natives on the banks of the Ganges, accosted by a Brahmin, as follows: "Sir, don't you say that the devil tempts man to sin?" "Yes," answered Mr. Thomas. "Then," said the Brahmin, "certainly the fault is the devil's the devil, therefore, and not man, ought to suffer the punishment." While the countenances of many of the natives discovered their approbation of the Brahmin's inference. Mr. Thomas observing a boat with several men on board, descending the river, with that felicity of instructive retort for which he was distinguished, replied—"Brahmin, do you see yonder boat?" "Yes." "Suppose I was to send some of my friends to destroy every person on board, and bring me all that is valuable in the boat; who ought to suffer punishment? I for instructing them, or they for doing this wicked act?" "Why answered the Brahmin, with emotion, "you ough all to be put death together." "Ay, Brahmin," re plied Mr. T., "and if you and the devil sin together the devil and you will be punished together.

Few things in this weary world are so delightful least, nor to my eye, lose their tender, their powerful charms! How slight, how small, how tiny a memorial, saves a beloved one from oblivion—worn on the finger, or close to the heart, especially if they be dead. The Young Lovers.

BY WASHINGTON INVING. To a man who is a little of a philosopher, and a bachelor to boot, and who, by a hint of some one experienced in the follies of life, begins to look with a learned eye upon the ways of man, and eke of woman, to such a man I say, there is something years entertaining in the interest to something. very entertaining in noticing the conduct of a pair of young lovers. It may not be as grave and scientific a study as the love of the plants, but it is certainly interesting. I have therefore derived much pleasure, since my arrival at the hall, from observing the fair Julia and her lover. She has all the delightful, blushing conscientiousness of an artless girl, inexperienced in coquetry, who has made her first conquest, while the captain regards her with that mixture of tondness and exultation with which youthful lover is apt to contemplate so beauteous prize. I observed them vesterday in the garden advancing along one of the retired walks. The sun was shining with delicious warmth marking great masses of bright verdure and deen blue shade The cuckoo, that harbinger of Spring, was faintly heard from a distance; the thrush piped from the hawthorn, and the yellow butterfly sported and toyed and fluttered in the air. The fair Julia was eaning on her lover's arm, listening to his conver ation, with her eyes cast down, a soft blush on her

From the Genessee Farmer. It is a truth admitted by all, that youth is the best period of life to acquire a knowledge of the business which is to employ us in manhood. Why not then begin in our primary schools, and instruct our children in the elementary principles of the siness by which they are destined to obtain a ivelihood? A boy who is to become a farmer may acquire, in the course of a common school education, and without prejudicing his other useful studies, much elementary knowledge in husbandry studies, nuch elementary knowledge in husbandry, which like a seed in a fertile soil; will grow with his growth, strengthen with his strength, and produce abundantly. The German system in this respect is entitled to preference over every other with which we are acquainted. Loudon informs us, and he obtained his knowledge on the spot, that in Bauaria, a piece of ground; to steaked, to seek Bavaria, a piece of ground is attached to each parochial school, to be cultivated by the scholars with their masters; and that in these school cate-chisms of agriculture, of orchard culture and others, has been introduced through the active exertions of Mr. Hazzi, and put into the hands of all the boys and girls, the latter studying those only which relate to gardening, the management of silk worms, and domestic economy. Our habits are generally moddled in youth, and it is of much importance to

Woman and Flowers. Woman, says a newspaper writer, loves flowers, and flowers are like woman in their beauty and sweetness, so they ought to grow up together. No flower-garden looks complete without a woman in it—no woman seems so lovely as when she is surrounded by flowers. She should have her fragrant boquet at the party; window-plants in the parlor if possible, some rich and rare flowering shrubs in her conservatory; but better than all these, and supplying all, every woman in the world should have a flower-garden. Every man who has the least gallantry or paternal feeling, should make a flower-garden for his wife and daughters. Every house—the smallest cottage, as well as the largest mansion—should have around it the perfume of lilacs, pinks, and other hardy odoriferous flowers that cost no trouble, but bring with them every year a world of beauty and fragrance.

The Pursuit of Ambition. The pursuit of ambition may be aptly compare to ascending the Andes.
