the Trustees may with safety be offered to the Assurance; which reason and experience convince the Trustees may with safety be offered to the public. It will be found, on inquiry, that most offices have in the outset professed to act on some new principle; or to offer to assurers some one particular benefit not to be obtained from other societies. But policies are effected under various circumstances, and with widely different objects, and what may facilitate the views of one man, at circumstances, and with widely different objects, and what may facilitate the views of one man, alfords no accommodation to another. It appears, therefore, to the Trustees of the Equitable, that the greatest good will be effected by that office, which allows such reasonable advantages to every assurer, as at the time of completing his Policy, he considers to be suitable to his particular case. On this principle they act, and a few instances will principle they act, and a few instances will e to show the benefits derivable from its adoption—the greatest good of the greatest number.
No policy will be disputed, unless under an act of fraud by the assured, and after the same shall of fraud by the assured, and after the same shall have been declared by referees of undoubted character. In case of error, either as to age, or in the form of policy, or the answers of referees, such errors, unless wilful and fraudulent, will not be december to withing the policy.

Testimony of a well known Merchant of Williamstown, Lancaster county, Pa.:—

Dr. Wm. Steelling -Dear Sir:—It affords me much pleasure to inform you of the great benefit I have received and also in my family, from the use of your Pulmonary Syrup. I have used it for Catarrh on the Breast, and from a very few doses have been relieved. I have also found it a certain remedy for the Croup and all common colds. I have sold it at my store for four years and could give a great many instances of its success in all diseases of the Lungs and Throat.

Respectfully yours, R. M. JONES.

Rev. William Heilig, of Abbottsville, Pa., writes thus, June 10, 1842:

Dr. William Steelling—I take great pleasure in informing you that I have been much benefitted by the use of your Pulmonary Syrup; my throat which has been sore for better than two years, has been greatly improved; I think by using a few more bottles a radical cure may be affected.

Seitz's Safety Bridle Bit.

THIS is a safety Bridle Bit invented and secured by Mr. Henry Seitz, of Marietta, Pa. This Bit is expected to supersede eventually all others, either for riding or driving, combining, as it does, the common snaffle, so arranged with the pulley, as to give any person perfect power over the most vicious or frightened horse. It obviates the objections made to the severe bits now in use, which from their painful action, often make a spirited horse rear, kick and try to run away. This bit is pleasant in its action on the mouth, causing no pain norse rear, kick and try to run away. This bit is pleasant in its action on the mouth, causing no pain whatever, and has the r-quisite power when wanted —no horse having been found able to resist it.

The operation is as follows: The rein is hooked firmly to the saddle at A, passing through the loop C, into the bit over the roller at B, and securing it fast to the ring D, which prevents it from drawing head and forms the cheek rein requirements.

back and forms the check rein now in use, and to which the driving reins are buckled and pass back to the driver. For horseback, the loops and rings are dispensed with, the rein being continuous, forming two reins, one of which is thrown over the saddle horn or strapped to the pummel, and the other to the rider's hand—both reins can pass throthe rings of a martingale. For ledgies it energia.

The undersigned is the Agant for Lancaster county, of the above Bit, and feels warranted in recommending it as a valuable invention. He would refer to the following persons, who have it in use: John Forry, Manor; Henry Spiehlman, Jr., Strasburg; Jacob Stahl, Dr. J. Cushman, Marietts. There is no necessity to multiply reference as the here is no necessity to multiply references, as the Bit recommends itself, upon inspection. Popping the Question.

There is nothing more appalling to a modest and iensitive young man, than asking the girl he loves to marry him, and there are few who do not find heir moral courage tasked to the utmost.

Many a man who would lead a forlorn hope, nount a breach, and "seek the bubble reputation ven at the cannon's mouth," trembles at asking a vortian the question which is to decide his fate fo lies may congratulate themselves that nature and custom have made them the resp

In a matter which men have always found so terrible, yet which, in one way or other, they have always contrived in some awkward way to accomplish, it is not easy to give instructions suitable to every emergency.

If she be serious, he will approach the awful subject with due solemnity—if gay and lively, he will try, to make it an excellent joke—if softly sentimental, he must woo ner in a strain of high wrought romance, and it severely practical, he relies upon a straight forward commo

There is one maxim of universal approbation. Never lose an opportunity. What can a woman think of a lover who neglects one? Women cannot make direct advances, but they use infinite tact in giving men occasion to make them. In every case it is fair to presume that when a woman gives a man an opportunity, she expects him to improve it; and though he may tremble and feel his throbbing through every limb, though his heart fills up his throat, and his tongue cleaves to the roof of his mouth, yet the awful question must be asked—the fearful task uccomplished.

In the country, the lover is taking a romantic valk by moonlight, with the lady of his lovetalks of the beauties of the scenery, the harmony f nature, and exclaims—

"Ah, Julia, how happy would existence prove if always had such a compani sighs, and leans more fondly on the arm that remblingly supports her.

"My dearest Julia, be mine forever." This is a settler, and the answer, ever so inaudie, makes or undoes him quite.
"Take pity on a forlorn bachelor," says another, in a manner which may be either jest or earnest—
"Marry me at once and put me out of misery."
"With all my heart, whenever you are ready," replies the laughing fair. A joke carried thus far is easily made earnest.

granted. A gentleman who has been paying attention to a lady, says—

"Well, Mary, when is the happy day?"

"What day, pray?" she asks with a conscious

"Why, everybody knows we are going to get married, and it might as well be one time as another; to when shall it be?" Cornered in this fashion, there is no retreat. "Jane, I love you! Will you marry me?" is mewhat abrupt, and frankly given. "Yes," is the test and sweetest answer " Ellen, one word from you would make me the ppiest man in the universe."

"I should be cruel not to speak it then, unless it a very hard one. "It is a word of three letters, and answers the uestion—Will you have me?"

The lady, of course, answers "Yes," unless she The lady, of course, answers "Yes," unless she pappens to prefer a word of only two letters, and shall be married next week to a girl that has earned two hundred dollars since she was eighteen. And so this interesting and terrible process, in practice as simple as it is in theory, is varied in a hundred ways according to the circumstances and /arious dispositions.

The timid gentleman asks: " Have you any objections to changing your name?" and follows this up with another which clenches its significance, How will mine suit you?"

Another says: "Will you tell me what I most Yes, if I can."

"The happy day when we shall be married." Another says: "Eliza, we must do what all the world evidently expects we shall." "All the world is very impertinent." "I know it-but it can't be helped. When shall tell the parson to be ready?" As a general thing, a man need never be refused. Every woman, except a heartless coquette, finds the means of discouraging a man whom she does not intend to have, before the matter comes to a point of declaration.

Slavery Among Insects. The following singular facts are from "Newman's History of Insects." They show that even among creeping things, might subvert right, and the strong tyrannise over the weak:—"The most remarkable fact connected with the history of ants is the propensity possessed by certain species to kidnan the workers of other propersions." kidnap the workers of other species, and compel them to labor for the benefit of the community, thus suing them completely as slaves; and, as far as we yet know, the kidnappers are red, or pale-colored ants, and the slaves, like the captured natives of Africa, are of a jet black. The time for taking slaves extends over a period of about ten weeks, and never commences until the male and female are about emerging from the pupa state; and thus the ruthless marauders never interfere with the continuation of the species. This instinct seems spe-cially provided; for, were the slave ants created for cially provided; for, were the slave ants created for no other end than to fill the station of slavery, to which they appear to be doomed still, even that office must fail, were the attacks to be made on their nest before the winged myriads have departed or are departing, charged with the duty of continuing their kind. When the red ants are about to sally forth on a marauding expedition, they send scouts to ascertain the exact position in which a sally forth on a marauding expedition, they send scouts to ascertain the exact position in which a colony of negroes may be found. These scouts having discovered the object of their search, return to the nest and report their success. Shortly afterwards the army of red ants marches forth, headed by a vanguard, which is perpetually changing; the individuals which constitute it, when they have advanced a little before the main body halt, falling into the rear, and being replaced by others. This vanguard consists of eight or ten ants only. When they have arrived near the negro colony they disperse, wandering through the herbage and hunting

Perse, wandering through the herbage and hunting about, as aware of the propinquity of the object of their search, yet ignorant of its exact position. At last they discover the settlement; and the foremost of the invaders, rushing impetuously to the attack, are met, grappled with, and frequently killed by the negroes on guard. The alarm is quickly contained. perse, wandering through the herbage and hunting negroes on guard. The alarm is quickly commu-nicated to the interior of the nest; the negroes sally forth by thousands; and the red ants rushing to the rescue, a desperate conflict ensues, which, however, always terminates in the defeat of the negroes, who retire to the innermost recesses of their habitation. Now follows the scene of pillage. The red ants, with their powerful mandibles, tear open the sides of the negro ant-hills, and rush into the heart of the citadel. In a few minutes each invader emerges, arrying in its mouth the pupa of a worker negro carrying in its mouth the pupe of a worker neglo, which it has obtained in spite of the vigilance and valor of its natural guardians. The red ants return in perfect order to their nest, bearing with them their living burdens. On reaching their nest, the their living burdens. Character. The most important possession for man in his The most important possession for man in his intercourse with the world, is a good character.—Riches may take to themselves wings and fly away with the frowns of fortune—friends may prove false; but so long as a man has within him the consciousness of having done right, he has a treasure far superior to wealth or the esteem of those

Without a good character, all the blessings of life must ever fail to produce that enjoyment which s experienced by the numberst soft of toil, who knows that the world esteems him honest, and feels that he is so. The world pays a certain kind of deference to wealth and position, but real worth is respected and esteemed even by those who are numblest son of toil wh themselves vicious. The upright man is honored by the veriest rogue that lives. He may affect to lespise the man who labors day after day to procure the wants of life, when by a bold stroke of rascality he might obtain wealth and ease; but in is secret heart he knows that the humble honest man in the possession of a clear conscience is the owner of a treasure worth all the ill-gotten gain that might be acquired by a life of roguery.

But it sometimes happens that a good character is not accompanied by a good reputation. Circumtances may and often do occur to place the purest nd most virtuous in a false and suspicious position right, but the man who labors on with a firm demination to preserve a conscience void of offence whatever the world may say, or however much he may be slandered and maligned, will still be happie nan if driven to desperation, he enters upon a life of crime. Let the young man then, who wishes to go thro' the world pleasantly, preserve a good character.

That cannot be taken away from him however much the world may injure his reputation. The character is an actual possession. The reputation is the credit a man gets for that possession. A poor man sometimes is esteemed rich, and a rich nan poor, by the world; but that does n his real position. As soon as he found himself safe, he said to himself, "how wrong was I not to endure the rain patiently, as sent by Providence!
