Execution of Washington Goode THE BLOOD PURIFIED AND HEALTH at Boston.

[From the Boston Traveller, May 29.] At about a quarter to ten o'clock this n ashington Goode suffered the penalty of death by hanging, in the jail yard, Leverett street. For the last few days a number of clergymen have had access to his cell, and opportunity to converse with him-among them the Rev. Messrs. Snowden, Taylor and Grimes. To these persons he was constant in asseverating his innocence. Last night, as is usual with the condemned, an officer was placed in bis cell, and others in the archway landing to it, to prevent at-tempts at suicide. 12 celesk the officer in the cell discovered that Goode had attempted suicide, by cut-ting the veins at the elbow, by swallowing a large quantity of tobacco and paper, and by stuffing his blanket into his mouth. Assistance was called and the flow of blood stopped, though he was left in a the flow of state. verv weak state. expressed.

His courage held up until they began to bind His courage held up until they began to bind him, when he gave way to lamentations, such as— 'I never thought that I should come to this; this the her thought that I should come to this; this the her thought that I should come to this; this the her there is a state of the the there is a state of there is a state of the there is a state of t is the last day of my life." When the ware was handed to him, he said—"this is the last Cochituate medicine for the diseases for which they are as-I shall ever drink." In the afternoon, yesterday, he remarked—"I am not afraid to die. I have been in battle where hundreds died. But to die upon a scaffold!" He also said yesterday that he should never die upon the scaffold, and was probably med-itating suicide. His hopes of a reprieve were the United States. [may 27-18-2] itating suicide. His hopes of a reprieve were strong until within a day or two of his death, when he saw from the preparations making that he must prepare for his fate

Before these fleeting hours are gone, I'll bid this mortal world adieu;

And to the Lord I'll now resign My life, my breath, and spirit too.

Jesus my Lord, my last resource, Will reach his arm my soul to save.

He will not hide his smiling face, ir leave me in that trying hour ;

I'll trust my soul upon his grace, And cheerful leave this mortal shore.

After this, prayer was offered by Rev. Mr. Oviatt, when the preparations for execution were commenced.

He was brought from his cell in a chair, appa-rently very weak from loss of blood; but in full possession of his senses. He called for water, and drank once or twice, when he was conyeyed to the scaffold by two men, with his hands and legs firmly tied. The noose was then adjusted about his neck. during which he emitted one or two audible grouns. The warrant for his execution was then read by Sheriff Eveleth, when the cap was placed over his head, the rope cut, and the drop fell The fall probably broke his neck, as, after a few struggles, and convulsive drawing up of the lower bs, all was still.

About one hundred persons were present in the jail yard, and the windows of the neighboring houses which overlooked the yard were partly filled with men and women, boys and girls. A iew persons clambered upon the neighboring sheds to witness the sight, but the crowd about the jail was much smaller than at any previous execution.

We learn that his uncle gives the following ac-count of his birth and former life. He was born in Baltimore, and is 28 years of age. When about 15, he came to this city, and went with his uncle on board the Eastern boats, in the capacity of a servant. Afterwards, being fond of "high company, as the uncle expressed it, Goode lett him and went to sea. From that time the uncle has seen him, but occasionally, when in port. His mother is supbut obcasionary, which in port. All another is sup-posed to be living, but he seemed unwilling to talk about her. He states that he was in many battles William and Mary Wright, aged 13 months and 12 of the Florida war, and served under General days.

 There was a report that Goode had made a con-fession of his guilt to Rev. Mr. Taylor. We un-derstand, however, from Mr. Taylor himself, that no confession was made to him; neither was there any plain denial of guilt; but that Goode seemed to console himself with the belief that the witnesses against him were so disreputable, that the authoriwould not dare to hang him on such testimony. Until the very last, he thought he should escape hanging. The attempt at suicide was a most determined affair. According to the statement of the officers in attendance, the clergymen left him about nine o'clock, at his expressed wish. He then desired all those who were to watch him to leave him the cell to himself, they stopped in the entry, with the door open. He also blew out the candle, but a lantern was so placed that the light could strike all parts of his body but the face. He was unwilling to converse with his watchers, and appeared June 5] to sleep.

At a little before twelve, however, the officer heard a gurgling noise, and upon approaching, found that he had his thumbs and a portion of the blanket crammed down his throat. He was perfectly furious at their approach, and resisted their attempt to examine him with all his strength. He was found, however, to have cut both arms in at least a dozen places, with a small piece of glass which he in some way had become possessed of. Dr. Smith was called in, and his wounds dressed : but several times during the night he attempted to tear off the bandages, which were, however, constantly replaced Soon after, he began vomitting up pieces of to-bacco and wads of tarred paper, which he had swallowed. During the intervals of these sick turns, he is said to have slept soundly for three quarters of an hour—a phenomenon often exhibited by criminals on the point of death. When he reached the gallows, he said-"Lord, receive my soul;" but the sheriff asked him if he was ready, he made no reply, being apparently insensible. But very few colored persons were seen near the place of execution. In one case, a citizen, opposed to the execution, closed his place of business and placed a piece of crape at the door, with a placard, a saying: "No business to-day--a brother is to be hung." The body, after hanging nearly half an hour, was taken down and life found to be extinct. His body was claimed by his friends, to whom it was given up, and will be buried from Southac street. The last execution in this city was in 1836, when

Russell and Crockett were hung for setting fire to a house occupied by about thirty Irish families.— At that time the crowd about the jail was tremendous, and placards appeared at the corners of the streets threatening the Governor with vengeance if he allowed the execution to proceed.

The ship Powerton, arrived from Liverpool this The steward and nineteen passengers died on the voyage with Cholera.

ELOPEMENT EXTRAORDINARY.-The Barnstable Patriot states that there has been a good deal of excitement at Falmouth during the past week, in consequence of the elopement in "high life," of a merchant of that place and a Cape Horn widow. Fijey left about 11 o'clock at night for parts un-known—the gentleman leaving a wife and family, and the lady a husband, who is mate of a whale ship, now round the horn. The parties are said to very respectable, and no names are yet given.

DEAD OR ALIVE.—A weekly paper published at Showhegan, Me., called Mann's Physician, express-es a doubt of the death of Dr. Coolidge, the murderer of Matthews, and suggests that a corpse which it has reason to believe was procured for that which it has reason to believe was procured for that purpose, was substituted for Coolidge, who, by the aid of money, has been smuggled into liberty. We trust such complication and accumulation of villany will not be proved.

A GOOD EXAMPLE.—The Boston Post states that Mr. Daniel Ayre, of Lowell, is about to pay up wards of $6,000 of debts from which he was discharged upon his failure some years ago, and that he designs giving his former creditors an elegant supper on the occasion. The sum covers principal and interest in full.
