Assurance; which reason and experience convince the Trustees may with safety be offered to the public. It will be found, on inquiry? that most offices have in the outset professed to act on some new principle; or to offer to assurers some one particular benefit, not to be obtained from other societies But policies are effected under various circumstances, and with widely different objects, and what may facilitate the views of one man, af-fords no accommodation to another. It appears, therefore, to the Trustees of the Equitable, that the greatest good will be effected by that office, which allows such rensonable advantages to every assurer, as at the time of campleting his Policy, he considers to be suitable to his particular case. On this principle they act, and a fow instances will this principle they act, and a few instances will suffice to show the benefits derivable from its adoption—the greatest good of the greatest number.
