The deep mouthed Cannon's opening roar had ceased, and O'er Chapultepec's embattled field the War cloud darkly lifting up its massy Folds, still hung a death-pall to many Spirits brave, who hence in warrior-grav Spirits brave, who hence in warrior-graves should Sleep. The earth had trembled all day long, as Mountain echo'd mountain sound in turn, and Answering hill and dale rolled back the cry, of "fierce contested war." All this had ceased When midst the wreck of battle bloody, a Wounded colding her mediate the work of battle bloody, a Wounded soldier lay, and o'er him bent

Mineral Region of Lake Superior. Extract from the remarks made by Mr. J. S. Hodge, on the Mineral Region of Lake Superior,

Cambridge: "The mines are wrought wholly for native cop-"The mines are wrought wholly for nauve copper. The veinstone with scattered particles, furnish what is called stamp took; which is crushed under heavy stamps and then washed; the lumps are called barrel ore, being packed in barrels for transportation; and the masses, after being cut up nto pieces not exceeding two tons in weight, are shipped in bulk. The size of some of these masses is so enormous as almost to exceed belief. They have been broken up in the Cliff mine of 60 and even 80 tons in weight. Such pieces are reduced in the mine to fragments of seven tons weight and less, and after being hoisted to the surface are still further reduced. At the Minesota Mine, near the Ontonagor River, I had an opportunity of examining in June the most extraordinary mass yet met with. Two shafts had been sunk on the line of the vein 150 ft. apart. At the depth of about 30 feet they struck massive copper, which lay in a huge sheet with the same underlay as that of the vein—about 15 deg. towards the North. Leaving this sheet as a banging wall, a level was run under it connecting the two shafts. For this whole distance of 150 ft. the mass appears to be continuous, and how much further it goes on the line of the vein either way there is no evidence, nor beside to what depth it penetrates in the solid vein. I examined it with care, striking it repeatedly with my hammer in order to detect, if possible, by the sound any break or interruption there might be in the mass—for a thin scale of stone encrusted it sometimes and concaded the fossification.

cealed the face of the metal. Examinations had been made by drilling through this scale, where it attained the thickness of an inch or so; but in no place had any sign of a break been found. It formed the whole hanging wall of the level, showing a width of least eight feet above the floor in which its lower edge was lost. It had been cut through in only one place, where a partial break afforded a convenient opportunity. Measuring the thickness bere as well as the irregular shape of the gap admitted, it was found somewhat to exceed five feet. Assuming the thickness to average only one foot, there would be in this mass 1200 cubic feet, or about 250 tons—still it is not safe to assume even one foot, for the masses vary extremely in unickness. The mode adopted to remove these masses is to cut channels through them with cold chisels, after they are shattered by large sand blasts put in behind them. Grooves are cut with the chisels across their one foot, for the masses vary extremely in thickness them. Grooves are cut with the chisels across their smallest places, one man holding, and another striking, as in drilling. A chip of copper three-quarters of an inch wide, and up to six inches in length, is taken out, and the process is repeated until the groove passes through the mass. The expense of this work is from $8 to $12 per superficial feet of the face exposed. Fragments of veinstone enclosed in the copper prevent the use of saws. A powerful machine, occurving little room, is much needed. nachine, occupying little room, is much needed, which would perform more economically this the Cliff Mine for the year 1848 is estimated at S30 tons, averaging 60 per cent. During the present year more than half this amount has been already sent down, and there is enough more on the sense and in sight in the mine to warrant the season it so happened that a hunter chanced at the season it so happened year's work, or 600 tons of copper. The whole amount of copper annually imported into the U.S. is about the value of $2,000,000 or about 5400 tons. But little has been supplied from 1500 tons. But little has been supplied from 1500 tons. ons. But little has been supplied from our own mines. Nine such mines, then, as the Cliff, would render us independent of foreign supplies. From present appearances, after careful examination of the region, and consideration of progress made in mining since my last visit in 1846, I feel myself warranted in expressing a decided conviction that his amount of copper must be supplied in a very few years, and this metal soon become, as lead already has, one of export instead of import. The recent tailures of mining speculations wildly undertaken and ignorantly and extravagantly conducted, may and ignorantly and extravagantly conducted, may for a time check the development of these mines but their wonderfully rich character is now begin ning to be properly appreciated, as well as the reliance which may be put in the surface appearance of the veins. Some curious features in their character and distribution have been detected, which have heretofore escaped observation for want of sufficient data, and which will, I believe, be found of great consequence in the selection of the best localities. These, after further examination, I may at another time make public. The history of these mines, so far, has remarkably proved the foresight and excellent judgment of the lamented Do

Houghton, particularly so in his predictions of the disastrous effects that must result from such specu-lations as have caused the country to be overrun by hordes of adventurers.

The silver found associated with the copper has not proved of much importance, perhaps for the reason that the greater part of it is purloined by the miners. The Cliff Mine has probably yielded more than $30,000 worth, of which not more than tenth part has been secured by the proprietors saw myself, the present season, no less than six bs. and eight ounces of lumps and bars of silve ized in the hands of an absconding workman.

State of Pennsylvania vs. The Wheeling Bridge. The bridge in process of erection, across the Ohio river, at Wheeling, is said to be too low to admit the passage of steamboats under it during high water, and will therefore materially obstruct the navigation. To abate the nuisance, the people of Pittsburg, in the name of the Commonwealth of admit the passage of steamboats under it during Pennsylvania, have brought suit in the District Court of the United States. The case was recently ried, and Justice GRIER delivered an opinion on the motion for an injunction, from which we opine that the object of the Pittsburgers seems likely to e gained in the further prosecution of the suit. That the right of the State of Pennsylvania to proceed for an injunction against a nuisance to her citizens without her own territory, is a new question; but if she could not on that ground, yet by reason of the injury to her own public works, it is probable she may proceed in this court.

The Lover Star.

A Legend of the Chippeways. I obtained the following legend from the lips of at the meeting of the American Association for an Indian trader whom I met at the Island of La the advancement of Science, held recently at Pointe, in Lake Superior. He said it was related to him by a hunter of the Chippeway nation, and that he had heard a singular story among the Chippeways: There was once a quarrel among the stars; when one of them was driven from its home in the heavens and descended to the earth. It wandered from one tribe of Indians to another, and had been seen hovering over the camp fires of one thousand Inhovering over the camp fires of one thousand Indians when they were preparing themselves to sleep. It always attracted attention, and inspired wonder and admiration. If often lighted upon the heads of little children, as if for the purpose of play, ing with them, but they were invariably frightened, and drove it away by their loud crying. Among all the people in the world only one could be found who was not afraid of this beautiful star, and this was a little girl, the daughter of a Chinpeway war. was a little girl, the daughter of a Chippeway warrior. She was not afraid of the star, but rather than this, she loved it with her whole heart, and was very happy in her love. That she was loved by the star in return, there could be no doubt, for wherever she travelled with her father through the wilderness, there as the night came on did the star ollow; but it was never seen in the day time.-When the girl awoke at night, the star floated just above her head, and, when she was asleep, it was constant in its watchfulness that she never opened ber eyes, even at midnight, without beholding its brilliant light. People wondered at this strange condition of things, but how much more did they wonder, when they found that the father never returned home without an about 100 me. turned home without an abundance of game. They therefore concluded that the star must be the soul of the Good Spirit, and they ever after spoke of it with veneration. Time passed on, and it was midsi Indian girl had gone into the woods for the purpose of gathering berries. Those of the wintergreen were nearly all eaten up by the pigeons and deer, she wandered into a large marsh with a view of filling her willow basket with them. She did so, and in the tangled thickets of the swamps she lost her way. She became frightened and cried aloud for her father to come to her assistance. The only creatures that answered her cries were the frogs and lonely bittern. The hight was rapidly coming, and the farther she wandered the more in-tricate became her path. At one time she was compelled to wade into the water even to her knees, and then again would she fall into a deep hole, and almost became drowned among the poisonous slime and weeds. Night came, and the poor girl looked up at the sky, hoping that she might see the star that she loved. A storm had arisen, and the rain fell so rapidly that a star could not live in it, and therefore was there none to be seen. The storm continued the waters of the country are said. continued, the waters of the country rose, and in rushing into the deeper lake, they destroyed the Indian girl, and washed her boily away so that it never could be found.

Many seasons passed away and the star continued to be seen above the watch fires of the Chippeways; work.

The greatest thickness of any mass cut through at the Cliff mine has been about three feet. Their occurrence through the vein is not regular. Barren spots alternate with productive portions. The same is the case in all the mines. The total product of the Cliff Mine for the year 1848 is estimated at $30 tons, averaging 60 per cent. During the pressure of the palf this amount has been allowed. Additional years passed on, and with the leaves of autumn, it finally disappeared. A cold and long winter soon followed, and then the hottest tit led into such dangerous places that he gave up the pursuit, and returned to tell his people what he had seen. And then it was that the oldest men of the tribe told him that the light he had seen was the star that had been driven from heaven, and that it was now wandering over the earth for the pur-pose of finding the beautiful girl it had loved. And that same star is still upon the earth, and is often seen by the hunters as they journey at night thro'

Minesota.

The message of Governor Ramsey appears in the Minesota papers. He proposes a revision of the the electoral law, and the appointment of a committee to frame a code of laws, to be submitted to the legislature at its present session, as the laws of Wisconsin are not only insufficient, but are not. very well known among the people. He advises in organization of the militia of the Territory with a view to future Indian difficulties, with a special care for the formation of a corps of Mounted Rangers; suggests that great good might be done by the General Government's opening a military road from Fort Snelling to the Missouri river, and marching a considerable force over it every year, there being 25,000 warlike Indians in the Territory, some of them discontented; urges the formation of a system of finance simple and expansive enough to serve in the present and future; earnestly advises a memorial to Congress to extend the preemption privilege to all settlers on public lands to which the Indian title has been extinguished whether surveyed or not; insists with force on first Monday of December, the complainant will have an opportunity of moving the court for an injunction on bill and answer.
