For the Intelligences TO MARY. BY H. A. H.

We parted in silence, we parted by night, On the bank of that lonely river, Where the willows wild, their boughs unite We met-and we parted forever.

The night bird sarg, and the stars above Told many a touching story, Of Friends long past to a haven of love, Where the soul wears its mantle of glory. We parted in silence—our cheeks were wet

With tears that were past controlling ; We vowed we would never-no never forget And these vows were then consoling. We parted in silence, we parted in tears, On the banks of that lonely river, But the color and bloom of by-gone years,

Shall hang o'er its waters forever. "THE FREEDOM OF THE PRESS."

Around her waist I put my arm, I felt as soft 's cake; " Oh dear !" says she " what liberty You printer-men do take !" "Why yes, my Sal, my charming gal; (I squeezed her some, I guess,) Can you say 0, my chick against

The freedom of the Press ?" I kissed here some-I did, by gum-She colored like a beet ; Upon my living soul she, looked, Almost too good to eat ! I gave her another buss, and then Savs she, I do contess,

I rather sorter kinder like " The freedom of the Press?"

Curious Railroad Adventure.

When the night train from New York was within three-fourths of a mile of the Falls Village Depot, Canaan, Ct., an obstruction was felt by Mr. Bridgman, conductor, who, upon questioning the engineer found that he had discovered an object on the track but was so close upon it, and under such headway, as to be unable to escape it. On examining th cow-catcher, on the arrival at the depot, the interstices were found filled with the tragments of a wagon body, presenting the appearance of a crow's nest.—With much anxiety, the conductor, with attendants and lights, passed back over the track.---Some eighty rods from the depot, a broken jug was found, which sustained the observation of one of the temperance hands immediately previous, that there was rum somewhere" Some dozen rods further, discovered a shirt, without owner and with out blood. Soon the broken spokes and hubs, and tires, wrenched and broken, brought them to the scene of the disaster.

In a deep excavation adjacent was found a valuable horse, upon his back, stiff, and with faint signs of life. In the meantime no human forms were discovered, until the loud call of the conductor was heard, when the unsteady voice of an equally un-steady man was heard in the thicket, near at hand, who clambered down the bank as directly as cirsumstances would admit. He was accompanied by two interesting boys, one four and the other six or eight years of age.

or eight years of age. To the question of Mr. Bridgman, "what are you doing on the track of the raiload?" the answer returned was in the memorable style of the army in Flanders, of which Uncle Toby spoke some time ago. It seemed the poor man had no conception that he had been rode down by the iron horse, or that he was on any other but a shocking bad public road, of which fact alone he seemed to be fully sensible; for the smallest boy remarked, that papa said as they were coming along, that he should not ride over the road again till they had repaired it. The upshot of the matter is this : The man was engaged in looking up a farm for purchase. A gentleman in a neighboring town had lent him a valuable family horse, with which he had made a journey to his former residence. He was on his eturn. He had drank something stronger than water, which confused either his eyesight or his judgment; that where the public road crossed the upon the track, tiers of which a good portion of the way, protruded from 4 to 8 inches above the passed no less than five " cattle guards." one or two of which were of double width The horse, with the buggy, jugs, &c., safely leaped them all, unaccountable as it may seem. The noise of his own conveyance was such as to conceal the approach of the locomotive in the rear, which demo shed the buggy, threw the horse into the ditch, and safely depositing the "interesting stranger" and his fine boys upon a high bank, some 14 feet in as cent. What is remarkable, is this-the man affirmed that the horse had run away and smashed the bug-gy; the horse was turned over and helped to rise, d not a bone or even the skin was found broken The person of the man and of his two boys were nmutilated—no other marks were received than a fine coat stripped in the back from from waist to collar, and a somewhat comical expression give collar, and a somewhat comical expression given to the rear of his hat. A pretty good commentary, this, upon temperate drinking. We ought to add, further, that another jug was found in the road, safe and sound, and full, which was duly smashed be there in the sound of the second se by those in attendance, to the no small chagrin o

THE MAGIC OF KINDNESS-----Who will deny there is a magic in kindness, a magic by which every grief may be dispelled, and every tear be brushed away-many a heart sad and sorrowing has been made light by a single kind word or deed, and many a person has been by its gentle influence raised from shame and misery. Yes! it has instill-ed the seeds of virtue in the bosom of many who were fast sinking to ruin and degradation. Those seeds have taken root and flourished vigorously making happy and honorable those who would otherwise have been outcasts of society. A kind instead of a harsh word has led the degraded back to the path of virtue, and shown him there is something bright to be attained by following honor's course. Then who would refuse a kind act, or a gentle word; it costs nothing, and may be a jewel of great price to the children of sorrow and mis-
