When the time for starting arrived, the bull and the horses took their places. The horse racers were out of humor at being bothered with the bull, and at the burlesque which they supposed was intended, but thought that it would be all over as soon as the horses started. When the signal was given did start. Hays gave a blast with his horn and sunk his spurs into the bull's sides, who bounded off with a terrible bawl, at no trifling speed, the dried ox-hide flapping up and down, and rattling at every jump, making a combination of noises that never been heard on a race course before.-The horses all flew the track, every one seeming to be seized with a sudden determination to take the shortest cut to get out of the Redstone country, and not one of them could be brought back in time to save their distance. The purse was given to norn and the ox-hide, which he ought not to have been permitted to bring on the ground, the thing would not have turned out as it did. Upon this, Hays told them that his bull could beat any of eir horses any how, and if they would put up a hundred dollars against the purse he had won, he would take off the hide and leave his tin horn and run a fair race with them. His offer was accepted and the money staked. They took their places at the starting post, and the signal was given. Hays gave the bull a touch with his spur, and the bull gave a tremendous bellow. The horses remem-bered the horrible sound, and thought all the rest was coming as before. Away they went again, in spite of all the exertions of their riders, while Havs ed around the track again and won the money. From that time they nicknamed him Sham Hays. He afterwards removed to Ohio, but his mame stuck to him as long as he lived. DECAT OF PEACH TREES .- A singular fact, and one worthy of being recorded, was mentioned a few days since by Mr. Alexander Duke, of Alber marle. He stated that, whilst on a visit to his neighbor, his attention was called to a large orch-ard, every tree in which had been totally destroyed The only cause of their superiority known to his host, was an experiment made in consequence of observing that parts of worm eaten timber, into which nails had been driven, were generally sound. lected three of them, and driven a ten-penny nail through the body, as near the ground as possible the balance of the orchard had gradually failed, and finally yielded to the ravages of the worms, these three trees, selected at random, treation of the nailing, had always been vigorous and healthy, furnishing him at that very period with the greatest profusion of the most luscious fruit. It is supposed that the salt of iron afforded by the nail is offensive to the worm, whilst it is harmless or even beneficial to the tree.-Southern Planter.

JENNY LIND: BY FREDERIKA BREMER.

There was once a poor and plain little girl, dwelling in a little room, in Stockholm, the capital of Sweden. She was a poor little girl indeed then; she was lonely and neglected, and would have been very unhappy, deprived of the kindness and care so necessary to a child, if it had not been for a very than the state of the kindness and care so necessary to the little girl had a fine voice and necessary to a time, it is precular gift. The little girl had a fine voice, and in her loneliness, in trouble or in sorrow, she consoled herself by singing. In fact, she sung to all she did;, at her work, at her play, running or resting, she always sang.

The woman, who had her in care, went out to work during the day, and used to lock in the little girl, who had nothing to enliven her solitude but the company of a cat. The little girl played with her cat, and sang. Once she sat by the open window and stroked her cat and—sang, when a lady passed by. She heard the voice, and looked up and saw the little singer. She asked the child several questions, went away, and came back several days later, followed by an old music master, whose name was Crelius. He tried the little girl's musical ear and voice, and was astonished. He took her to the director of the Royal Opera at Stockholm, then a Count Puhe, whose truly generous and kind heart was concealed by a rough speech and a morbid temper Crelius introduced his little pupil to the Count, and asked him to engage her as 'eleve' for the opera. "You ask a foolish thing!" said the Count, gruffly, looking dis dainfully down on the poor little girl: "What shall we do with that ugly thing? See what feet she has! And then her face! She will never be presentable. No, we cannot take her! Away with her!"

The music master insisted, almost indignantly. · Well," exclaimed he at last, "if you will not take her, poor as I am, I will take her myself, and have

as she has for music is not to be found in the world."
The Count relented. The little gîrl was at last tted into the school for eleves at the opera, and with some difficulty a simple gown of black bom-bazine was procured for her; The care of her musical education was left to an able master, Mr. Albert Berg, director of the song-school of the opera.

Some years later, at a comedy given by the

by the spirit and life with which a very young eleve acted the part of a beggar girl in the play. Lovers of genial nature were charmed, pedants almost frightened. It was our poor little girl, who had made her first appearance, now about fourteen years of age, frolicsome and full of tun as a child. A few years later still, a young debutante was to sing for the first time before the public in Weber's Freischitz. At the rehearsal preceding the representation of the evening, she sang in a manner which made the members of the orchestra ouce, as' by common accord, lay down their instruments to by, common accord, isy down their institutions to clap their hands in rapturous applause. It was our poor, plain little girl here again, who had now grown up and was to appear before the public in the role of Agatha. I saw her at the evening representation. She was then in the prime of youth, fresh, bright and serene as a morning in May, per-fect in form—her hands and arms peculiarly grace-ful—and lovely in her whole appearance through the expression of her countenance, and the noble the expression of ner contenance, and the note simplicity and calmness of her manners. In fact she was charming. We saw not an actress, but a young girl full of natural geniality and grace. She seemed to move, speak, and sing, without effort or art. All was nature and harmony. Her song was distinguished especially by its purity, and the power of soul which seemed to swell her tones.—Her "mezzo voice" was delightful. In the night scene were Agatha, seeing her lover come breathes Sham Hays and his Bull-y Race.

One dusky October night, crowds of people (the most part, by their dress, seeming to belong to the upper class of society,) thronged on the shore of the Baltic harbor at Stockholm. All looked toward the sea. There was a rumor of expectance and pleasure. Hours passed away, and the crowds still gathered and waited and looked out eagerly toward the sea. At length a brilliant rocket rose joyfully, far out at the entrance of the harbor, and was greehot one of them could to save their distance. The purse was given to Hays, under a great deal of hard swearing on the part of the owners of the horses. A general row ensued, but the fun of the thing put the crowd all the flocks of ships, and boats lying in the harbor, towards the shore of the "Skeppsbro." Flashing rockets marked its way in the dark as it advanced. The crowds on the shore pushed forward as it to meet it. Now the leviathan of the waters was heard thundering nearer and nearer, now it relented, now again pushed on, foaming and splashing, now it lay still. And there, on the front of the deck, was seen by the light of lamps and rockets, a pale, graceful young woman, with eyes brilliant with tears, and lips radiant with smiles, waving her handkerchief to her friends and countrymen on the shore.

It was she again-our poor, plain, neglected lit tle girl of former days—who now came back in triumph to her fatherland. But no more poor, no rich; she had become celebrated; and she had in her slender person the power to charm and inspire

Some days later, we read in the papers of Stockholm, an address to the public written by the be-loved singer, stating with noble simplicity that, "as she once more had the happiness to be in her native land, she would be glad to sing again to her counrymen, and that the income of the operas in which she was this season to appear, would be devoted to raise a fund for a school where eleves for the theatre would be educated to virtue and knowledge."-The intelligence was received as it deserved by the ravages of the worm, with the exception of three; and these three were probably the most thritty and flourishing peach trees he ever saw.—

The first time she again appeared in the "Sonambula" (one of the favorite roles,) the public, after the curtain the favorite roles,) the public, after the curtain the favorite roles, after the curtain the favorite roles. her favorite roles,) the public, after the curtain was dropped, called her back with great enthusiasm, and received her, when she appeared, with a roar of "hurrahs." In the midst of the burst of pplause a clear, melodious warbling was heard. hurrahs were hushed instantly. And we saw he lovely singer standing with her arms slightly kiended, somewhat bowing forward, graceful as a ird on ir have bird on its branch, warbling, warbling as no bird ever did, from note to note; and on every one a clear, strong, soaring warble—until she fell into the retournelle of her last song, and again sang that joyful and touching strain: "No thought can conceive how I feel at my heart."

She has now accomplished the good work to which her latest songs in Sweden have been devoted, and she is again to leave her native land to even beneficial to the tree.—Southern Planter.

A Beautiful Little Story.

A few weeks since, in coming down the North River, I was seated in the cabin of the magnificent steamer Isaac Newton, in conversation with some riends. It was becoming late in the evening, and one after another, seeking repose from the cares and toils of the day, made preparations to retire to their berths. Some, pulling off their boots and coats, lay themselves down to rest; others in the attempt to make it seem as much as possible like home, threw off more of their clothing—each one as his comfort, or apprehension of danger dictated.

I had noticed on deck a fine looking little boy of about six years old, following around a man evidently his father, whose appearance indicated him to be a foreigner, probably a German—a man of medium height, and respectable dress. The child was unusually fair and fine-looking, handsomely featured, with an intelligent and affectionate expression of countenance; and from under his lit-tle German cap fell his chesnut hair, in thick, clustering, beautiful curls.

After walking about the cabin, for a time, the father and son stopped within a few feet of where we were seated, and began preparations for going to bed. I watched them. The father adjusted and we were seated, and began preparations for going to bed. I watched them. The father adjusted and arranged the bed the child was to occupy, which was an upper berth, while the little fellow was un-dressing himself. Having finished this, his father tied a handkerchief around his head to protect his curls, which looked as if the sunlight from his young happy heart always rested there This done, I looked for him to seek his resting place; but instead of this, he quietly kneeled down on the floor, put his little hands together, so beautifully childlike and simple, and resting his arms on the lower berth, against which he knelt, he began his esper prayers.

The father sat down by his side, and waited the conclusion. It was, for a child, a long prayer, but well understood. I could hear the murmuring of his sweet voice, but could not distinguish the w he spoke. But what a scene! There were men around him—Christian men—retiring to rest with-out prayer; or, if praying at all, a kind of mental desire for protection, without sufficient courage or piety to kneel down in a steamboat's cabin, and efore strangers, acknowledge the goodness of God for his protecting love.

This was the training of some pious mother.—
Where was she now? How many times had her kind hand been laid on those sunny locks, as she had taught him to lisp his prayers!

A beautiful sight it was, that child at prayer, in the midst of the busy, thoughtless throng He, alone, of the worldly multitude, draws nigh to heaven.— I thank the parental love that taught him to list his evening prayer, whether Catholic or Protestant, whether dead or living, whether far off or nigh.— It did me good; it made me better. I could scarce refrain from weeping then, nor can I now, as I see again that sweet child, in the crowded tumult of a steamboat's cabin, bending in devotion before his Maker.

But a little while before I saw a crowd of admir ing listeners gathering about a company of Italian singers, in the upper saloon—a mother and two sons, with voice, and harp, and violin-but no one cared for the child at prayer.

When the little boy had finished his evening de votion he arose, and kissed his father most affec tionately, who put him into his berth to rest for the night. I felt a strong desire to speak to them but deserred it till morning. When morning came, the consusion of landing prevented me from seeing them again. But, if ever I meet that boy in his happy youth, in his anxious manhood, in his declining years, I'll thank him for the influence and example of that night's devotion, and bless the name of the mother that taught him to pray.

Scarcely any passing incident of my life ever made a deeper impression on my mind. 1 went to my room, and thanked God that I had witnessed it, and for its influence on my heart. Who prays on a steamboat? Who train their children to pray, ven at home?" Rissell's Retreat at Buena Vista We have been told by one who was there, the minutiæ of this proceeding. When the aid on duty (who was Col. Churchill) gave Col. Bissell the order to retreat, the Indiana regiment was in rapid flight, in rear of Bissell's, scattered over a half mile f ground, each man evidently thinking the battle lost, and trying to save himself; and as soon as Bissell's men should be faced about to fall back, those flying men would be in full view, and of course the panic they were under must naturally influence somewhat those who stood. Six thousand Mexican infantry were pouring down upon the de-voted regiment, in steady advance by column, in front and flank, assailing them, within point black distance, with a steady hail storm of fire and lead columns of infantry, waiting for a favorable mo And then the young girl went abroad and sang ment, at the least sign of wavering on our part, to n foreign shores and to foreign people. She charge, and complete the work of destruction, three pieces of artillery were thundering on them thei death messengers of grape and canister, tearing and they seemed to stand alone, exposed to all this oncentrated attack, determined on their annihila To the aid, Col. Bissell replied: "I am not ready to retreat yet," whilst his regiment continued re turning the fire of the Mexicans. In a few mo ments, the Colonel ordered, "cease firing!" "should er arms!" "dress!" The Mexican fire was abated and then for at least two minutes did that noble ody of men stand under a steady, galling and raking fire of artillery and musketry, with an over whelming force of infantry and cavalry advancing ipon them, unblenching and unwavering, withou áring a gun. Not a man moved, while their Colonel's eye ran along the line to see if any one quailed—"About face!" "dress!" "forward march!" they moved off n common time. "Quick time-march!"-and State. the regiment retired under circumstances which have never failed before in the history of war in ausing a panic. The Mexicans considered themselves certain of victory, and with "vivas" and "hurrahs," on came their splendid cavalry, surging in their green and scarlet, their plumes waving and their lances gleaming in the sun, with the thousand gay streamers catching the glistening eams as every breath of air fluttered glittering leaves of a fairy forest, upon that appaently devoted body of men. Two hundred yards quickly passed, Bissell's mer eached the spot designed for them to hold. ancers were preparing for the last charge, which was to hurl our brave fellows into the ravine be-low them. "Halt!" dress!" Coolly and calmly as if on parade, did those Suckers obey the com-mand, whilst the thunder of squadron after squad-ron on the slope they had just left, told that the enemy was upon them. They could not see them, but they could hear the horse's hoofs, the jingle of sabres and the clatter of lances, the inspiriting charge of the bugle and the "vivas" of the men, a they rushed on to the seemingly easy victory; an no doubt many a heart fluttered, and many an eye glanced involuntarily around—for it is a fearful hing to know that an enemy is upon your back, but not a muscle swerved.

"About face!" "commence firing!" and a volley of musketry rolled upon those huzzaing cavaliers, which silenced their cheering; and as column and ank went down before that deadly and steady fire —as their numbers lessened and their chargers swerved from this serried line of men who knew no defeat; their column wavered, trembled, as it were, slackened in speed, and broke in confusion.— Rallying back in tumultuous retreat upon the in fantry, the whole division was involved in inextri cable confusion, and in disorder left the field. Thus was the tide of battle turned on that eventful day, and less than half a full regiment in numbers de-feated ten thousand of the flower of Santa Anna's army; and that, too, when the enemy was rushing in, flushed by victory, and encouraged by the flight of one regiment, saving the credit of our arms and the lives of the thousands who stood there with them.—Illinois Argus.

MACHINE SHOP AND IRON FOUNDRY
REMOVED. AVING removed our Machine Shop and Iron Foundry, from our old stand, at the Railroad, to the place formerly occupied by Mr. John Baker, Coachmaker, in East Orange street, Lancaster, Pa. we tender our grateful acknowledgements to our kind friends, customers, and the public generally, for the very liberal natronage havetoffee anioused for the very liberal patronage heretofore enjoyed, and that no exertions shall be wanting on our part to merit a continuance of the public support. Our new location has been fitted up recently for the business, affording conveniences not previously possessed for want of room and suitable buildings—besides, the Locomotives passing on the railroad were an inconvenience to our customers that we are entirely free from in our new location. The varieties of THRESHING MACHINE made and repaired as heretofore, Corn Shellers, Wheat Drills, Ploughs, Horse Rakes, &c., made, and kept on hand for sale. hand for sale.

Our stock of Patterns connected with the Iron Foundry, we feel warranted in saying, is fully equal if not superior, to any other establishment in the county, being the kind now generally used, together with skilful Pattern Makers at all times ready or Casting and Fitting with despatch.

Highest price paid for old Castings.
