Miscellaneous.

To S. H. P.,-The young aspirant for Fame.

ВҮ Ј____

Wrapt in a boundless depth of thought, Wrapt in a boundless depth of thought,
O'erwhelmed by Fancy's spell;
Our young aspirant vainly sought
His sentiments to tell.
Around him strewn upon the floor,
Some twenty efforts lay;
With Shakspeare, Byron, Scott and Moore,
To aid him in his lay.

From these he culls with studious care, The substance of his theme;
And with his bold, presumptions air,
And wild, expressive mien,
He twists, he writhes, and tries in vain,
His feelings to indite;

He chides his muse, then tries again,-Then thrusts it from his sight

At length from out his scanty store

He brought material raw,
And scanned and culled it o'er and o'er,
Vith Blackstone's rigid Law.
Then with a tried Mechanic's skill,

And rough plane in his hand, He jacked his senseless lines until They formed a structure grand.

Then pondering o'er his meagre strain, Like Don Quixote of yore, He raised his lance with cold disdain And thrust at Scott and Moore;

And thrust at scott and with But ah, in struggling to remove A mountain from its base, His puny efforts only prove A mouse assumed its place.

ing. What a relief to the hardy sons of toil and poverty is the closing of Saturday night, and the breaking forth of the Sunday's light. The joys of such a season cannot be appreciated by the pampered children of wealth and idleness. To them the children of wealth and idleness. To them the weary days succeed each other in a continuous monotony, their only solicitude being how the heavy winged flight of time shall be accelerated. But, to the children of labor, Saturday night and the succeeding Sabbath bring unspeakable delights. The week's labors are ended, the week's earnings have been received, and round the humble fireside the cheerful little family group are greated. the cheerful little family group are assembled to relate in turn the adventures of the week, to partake of the healthful meal, and to confide to each Mrs. S. thinking this must, of course, be a ghost other their plans for the future. And what a day is the sabbath to the promise are the soothings air is breathed ere the ing streets, or to pass beyond them into the neighing streets, or to pass beyond them into the neigh-boring forests, to look upon the things which God has made. Anon the slow, deep-toned bell announces the hour of prayer and supplication. Hasten-ing to the house of God, the simple minded family listen in awe to the words of divine truth, and join in songs of divine praise. In the evening, tokens of friendship or of kind sympathy renew the warm attachment of social life, and the younger members of the family enter gleefully into innocent pastimes, or plight their truths to each other. Happy indeed, are the children of honest labor. They need not the stimulus of pungent condiments to give them an soothings of narcotics to bring sweet sleep to their eyes. Their simple food tastes sweeter than the fancies of their confectioner, and y dreams fill up the watches of the night:ild that the solid and sober pleasures of such n existence could be comprehended by us all. We should then have more of health and less of crime;

nore of harmony, and less of care.

Short Patent Sermon. I shall give you a sermon to day, drawn from the following text: The lady who before a tub, Is not ashamed to wring and rub; Or on the floor ashamed to scrub,

Her laboring so industriously, Will make a wife for you or me, My hearers-it was ordained by Heaven-no by the devil—that every man should have a wife, and every woman be blessed with a husband. In and the other one negatively; so that when they approximated, their mystical effect would be produced from one to the other. The how, the why, and the wherefore, no mortal has yet been able to understand—neither is it necessary that he should.

The sexes naturally approach and adhere to each ther, through some mysterious influence that admits of no solution. Let it suffice that it is so.-When the Creator made Adam, he saw that it was not good for him to be alone, so he mesmerised the nan-dug a rib from his side with the least particle of pain—and from it he made Eve, to be help-mate for him, as well as a fancy plaything. Now, without knowing what love was, they couldnt help loving the moment they set their eyes upon one another. He cast sheep's eyes at her at a distance, and she threw some killing glances in return, that fired his soul, and set his heart vibrating like a splinter upon a chesnut rail in a sou' wester. They finally came together just as natural as a couple of apple seeds swimming in a basin of water. But situated as they were at first, and having little or no manual labor to perform—Eve could be of little real utility to Adam, and Adam could nt do a great deal for Eve. Still they loved and were ready to assist each other, in case of any emergent casualty, and so when they found that aprons were necessary, they sat to, and with the needle worked together for mutual good. Eve only understood plain sewing—she knew nothing about your embroidery, lace working, and piano playing, and cared not about the same. The couple were perfectly happy in their rude and rough state, until the old sarpint got among bem, and even then explicit to the same of the couple were perfectly happy in their rude and rough state, until the old sarpint got among bem, and even then explicit to a state of the same of the same

My brethren, since you know that marriage is a divine institution, and that every one of you should have a wife, what kind of a rib would you should have a wife, what kind of a rib would you select? A pretty little useless doll, or a woman big and spunky enough to rassel with a bear, and come off first best? I imagine you would care nothing for either extreme; but you would look for personal charms. O you foolish idolators at the shrine of beauty! Know you not that hundreds of husbands are made miserable by handsome wives and that thousands are hanny in the possess. wives, and that thousands are happy in the possession of homely ones? homely without, but beautiful within. We may wander away and mingle in the "world's fierce strife," and form new associations and friendships, and fancy we have almost forgotten and friendships, and fancy we have almost forgotten as we listen perchance to the autumn winds, the remembrance of other days comes over our soul, and fancy bears us back to childhood's scenes, and we roam again the old familiar haunts, and press companions long since cold in the dence of virtue which commands the silent respect grave—and listen to voices we shall hear on earth and admiration of the world. CITY POLICE. July 5.—How Mr. Adonija Miller celebrated the Fourth.—Mr. A. D. J. Miller, (as he writes his name,) is a gentleman of solitary habits. To avoid the risk of quarreling over his cups, like the harbers. Scattle the barbarous Scythians-he drinks all alone, and the barbarous Scythians—he drinks all alone, and keeps a demijohn of good liquor constantly in his room, where, by a tacit agreement between him and his lady he may "carry on" as he pleases, provided he does not make noise enough to disturb Mrs. Miller, in the next apartment. Yesterday, Mr. Miller, prepared himself for a celebration, solus, by procuring a box of good cigars and having his demijohn well filled, resolving on a total abandonment to the fire of patriotism and the smoke of tocharm around the place of one's nativity. It is no wonder that the loftiest pens have been tuned to sing of home, "sweet home." The rose that bloomed in the garden where one has wandered in early years, a thoughtless child, careless in inno-cance, is lovely in its bloom, and lovelier in its decay. No songs are sweet like those we heard among the boughs that shade a parent's dwelling, when the morning or the evening hour found us gay as the birds that warbled over us.
