of about one and three quarter miles, and the upper part of the tract is but a short distance from Quantico creek. About six hundred acres are CLEARED LAND, well adapted to agriculture, and the residue is in wood, of which it is estimated there are from 65 to 70,000 cords, mostly of oak and pine, to which the facilities of water carriage add great value.

The buildings consist of seven or eight LOG HOUSES, such as are common to that part of the country. The land is abundantly watered with fine springs, and it is supposed to be especially adapted to the raising of early fruits and vegetables; and as two steam boats pass the place daily, and sailing vessels constantly, these productions may be profitably and speedily sent to market.
