- A COUNTRY HOME FOR ME. I do not ask that city spires May round my mansion rise, But that my home may be where trees
- Are pointing to the skies; Where flows the silvery mountain rill With a sweet and merry sound, nd echoes of the hunter's gun Shall through the woods resound.
- I cannot love the city's pomp.
- Its fashion and its pride,
 I had rather dwell in an humble cot
 Upon the mountain side;
 Where sweetly blooms the Acacja tree,
 The tulip and the rose,
- And where, beside the rivulets The early violet grows.
- I would not give my quiet home,
 Its happiness and health,
 For all the city palaces,
 Its pleasure and its wealth;
- I love to breathe the me And roam where all is free, Let others choose a city life— But a country home for me!

An Eccentric Old Bachelor.

We find in the New Orlean's Picayune of the 10th ult, a letter dated Woodbridge, N. J., July 4th, in Some account of the origin of the Danish war eccentric old bachelor :---"An old bachelor has lately died in this place, occasionally intemperate in his habits, and head over ears in debt. Besides this, he has a violent temper. I beseed you, Caroline, do not give way further to this infatuation of yours."

As Mr. Warren spoke, he approached his daughter and took her hand. She burst into tears, looked un in his face, and said—"Oh, but. Papa. I love ter and took her hand. She burst into tears, looked up in his face, and said—Oh, but, Papa, I love him, and he loves me; he says he will throw him self away, if I do not marry him. Surely, surely, surely, if I do not marry him. Surely, surely, surely, surely, surely, surely, surely, if I do not marry him. Surely, should chance to fly upon him. The village belles this respect differ from the remainder of Denmark, severely, "this is sheer folly, miserable infatuation! No woman ever reformed a man whose principles were so loose as those of Collins, a wretch, who in his own words will throw himself away if you do not marry him. Listen to my words, child, for you are weaker than I thought, and I must rule where I would prefer to persuade; if ever you marry Collins, from that hour this house is closed against you."

The tears of Caroline flowed faster. Mr. Warren, after a turn or two across the room, softened again, and addressed her in kinder tones—

"My child," he said, "I speak thus for your own good. I know, if you marry Collins, that you will jegret it; and I would by interdicting it, spare you much future sorrow. I will not urge you to unite with any man you do not fancy, however excellent I may think him to be. This I promise you; and on your part, I shall expect you to give up this acquaintance.
