DISTRUST;

OR, THE VICTIM OF VOLUNTARY WIDOWHOOD

The following touching little tale is taken from a miniature newspaper, edited and published by the Ladies connected with the Second Presbyterian bidding her farewell, asked me to take a turn with Church, Mobile.]

List and I will tell you a story of real life as it occurred in our very midst. The heroine of my story lived many years in Mobile, and was a nae, I think, of this place; at all events, her lot in life must early have been cast among us. Many in this Fair Room have taken her by the hand; for, at every hearth-stone she was a welcome guest, rendered so by her brilliant manners, and engaging, lovely disposition. Everybody loved Dora Hammersley, for she loved everybody. She engaging, lovely disposition. Dora Hammersley, for she loved everybody. She had been a widow nine years when I first made her acquaintance, and a more lovely woman in every point of view it has never been my lot to to free wondered at her perversity in with the world. but Dead Sea Irun. After your utter rejection of all overtures on my part, I went to the West Indies, obtained a divorce from worreelf and married a Spanish woman, who could the more for my daughter, who must go forth to the your utter rejection of all overtures on my part, I went to the West Indies, obtained a divorce from to worself and married a Spanish woman, who could that she had it so largely in her power not only to become an interesting wife, but a most useful member of society. She always parried my per spasions, by saying that she dreaded the dominion bless you, madam." a step-father over her only child, a sweet girl of ne ten summers. I noticed at the time, despite her effort to conceal it, that the poor woman was immeasurably wretched. She was not in love, for she was a woman of too finely a balanced mind ever to sit down and mope on an unrequited pas sion. Her beautiful blameless life was and had been passed among us, with the exception of the five years of her married life, which had heen spent elsewhere. It was during a brief visit she paid Mobile in 18-, while at her father's house, she heard of her husband's death. I shall never forget the shock it occasioned me, more for Dora's sake, women of the nation. who I knew to be so ardently attached to him ----Time heals every wound, and I knew, in the common course of things, she must long since have ceased to grieve for her husband's death. The an nouncement, at last, that she was about to leave Mobile forever and settle in the west, filled the large circle of her friends with the most unbounded astonishment. What! leave the dear friends, where she had been so petted, so caressed, for a home in a strange land-far from the scene of her childhood! ell might we all wonder. I determined, with my husband's permission, to ask an explanation of this strange resolve. She was to perform her last pil grimage, to the graves of her parents, who were merred in the old grave yard, at the head of Church street. Thither we went together, and after sauntering through the old arenas—anon stopping to listen to the wind as it event in the stopping to listen to the wind the stopping to the stopping to the stopping the stopping the stopping to the stopping the stoppin

"I want to tell you a secret. The way to make yourself pleasing to others, is to show that you care for them. The whole world is like the miller at Manfield, "who cared for nobody—no not he,-because nobody cared for nobody—no not he,-because nobody cared for him." And the whole world will serve you so, if you give them the same cause. Let every one, therefore, see that you do care for them, by showing them what Sterne so happily calls, "the small sweet courtesies of life" —those courtesies in which there is no parade; ADVERTISEMENTS.—Accompanied by the Cronversation.
