An Affecting Scene During the recent cholers sickness in the Indiana Penitentiary, the services of the clergynein were often in requisition, who have given several sketches of the last moments of the dying prisoner. The following is an affecting one: "While I was in prison the Warden led me to the bed side of a convict by the name of Shearer. I was informed that he had formerly been one or two years a member of the State Lacieburg. had two years a member of the State Legislature-had stood very high in the estimation of his fellow cit-zens-and at the time of his conviction was surveyor of his county. He had been tried before the United States Circuit Court, and on mere circum-United States Circuit Court, and on mere circum-stantial evidence had been convicted of mail rob-bery and sentenced to four years imprisonment.— The poor man knew me, having heard me preach in the prison. "Sir," said he, "I must die." He was then in a collapsed state—the marks of death were on his countenance. I sat down by his rude couch and held his pulseless hand. Long did I en-deavor to point him to the "Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world." His spirit grew calm, almost joyous, and he professed that the terrible "sting" was gone. Now, said I, "Shearer you are perhaps near death, have you any word to your family?" "Oh!" said he, "I have a wife and two children—L wish I could see them once more." He paused a moment unable them once more." He pansed a moment unable to go on. No doubt his thoughts were at "home. to go on. No doubt his thoughts were at "home, sweet home." He rallied and proceeded—"Tell my family that I am innocent of the charge for which I suffer." I said to him, "Mr. Shearer, you are now in a few minutes to stand before that God who will judge you righteously—there can be noth-ing gained, but every thing lost by concealing the truth—do you utter at this moment an untruth." He replied, 'I know'it all, I am about to go before my judge, and to you, sir, I declare with my dying breath my entire innocence!"

Never had I such emotions. I have stood by many a death bed by the rejoicing christian and the despairing rebel by the rejoicing christian and but this to me was most impressive. He had been one of our law makers, had sent his influence from the legislative hall to the extreme borders of the State, had moved respected and beloved; yet there he lay-a felon! dying a felon's death! about to have a felon's burial! and this with a strong prob-ability of his innocence! and then all he wished his family to know was, that in death—amid the "swellings of Jordan," he perished in declaring his innocence. Was there not a possibility that the men who condemned him were mistaken? Upon Upon them we cast no censure. They doubtless did what hey believed to be right; but if mistaken, oh, what a fatal mistake? What a commentary upon circumstantial evidence !

The Claims of Pennsylvania. We extract the following paragraph from the Washington correspondence of the Harrisburg Union. Alluding to the next Presidency, the wri ter says. By the by, talking of Presidents, reminds me that it is time the old Keystone should have a say in the matter. She has borne the heat and burden of every political contest without the Democracy ever saying "turkey once" to her. We have had thir teen presidents sworn into office, all of whom I have seen and with twelve of whom I have shaken hands. Of this number Virginia furnished five: Massachusetts two; Tennessee two; Ohio one; and Louisania one, if we give them Taylor. Thus of the whole number, eight were from the slave hold-ing states, so that our southern triends have but little cause to complain on that score. The South, I have some reason to know, would be very glad to give her entire support to one of Pennsyl to give her entire support to one of Pennsylvania's sons, not only in justice to the claims she has to that distinguished honor, but from the well known merits of the individual, who in estimation of the southern people, is at least a head and shoulders taller than any northern candidate that could be
