Song ... I Think of Thee.

[The following poetic gem; from Graham for November, is evidently from the polished pen of Prentice of the Louisville Journal:] I think of thee when eve's last blush, Ay, thine—forever thine—my life Is but a living thought of thee.

I think of thee 'mid spring's sweet flowers And in the summer's brighter glow,
Of thee in autuma's purple bowers,
And glo my winter's waste of snow;
My thoughts are thine when juys depart,
And thine when all life's sorrows flee—

Ay, thine—forever thine—my heart Is but a throbbing thought of thee. THE INCONSOLABLE.

How rapid is the progress of oblivion, with respect to those no more! How many a quadrille shall we see this winter, exclusively made up from the ranks of inconsolable widows. Widows of this order exist only in the literature of the tomb-In the world, and after a certain period there is but one sort of widows inconsolable—these who refuse to be comforted, because they can't get married again! One of our most distinguished sculptors was summoned, a short time since, to the house of a young lady, connected by birth with a family of the highest grade in the aristocracy of wealth, and united in marriage to the heir of a title illustrious in the military annals of the Empire.

The union, formed under the happiest auspices had been, alas! of short duration. Death, unpity-ing death, had ruptured it. by prematurely carrying off the young husband. The sculptor was summoned by the widow. He traversed apartments silent and deserted, un til he was introduced into a bed-room, and found himself in the presence of a lady, young and beauiful, but habited in the deepest mourning, and with a face furrowed with tears.

"You are aware," said she with a painful effort and a voice half choked by sobs, "You are aware of the blow which I have received!"

The artist bowed with an air of respectful condolence.

"Sir," continued the widow, "I am anxious to have a funeral monument erected, in honor of the husband whom I have lost." The artist bowed again.

"I wish that the mounument should be superb worthy of the man whose loss I weep, proportioned to the unending grief into which his loss has plunged me. I care not what it costs. I am rich, and will willingly sacrifice all my fortune to do honor to the memory of an adored husband. I must have a temple-with columns-in marble-must have a temple—with continue—in manute—and in the middle—on a pedestal—his statue."

"I will do my best to fulfit your wishes Madam," replied the artist; "but I had not the honor of acquaintance with the deceased, and a likeness of him is indispensable for the execution of my Without doubt you have his portrait?' The widow raised her arm, and pointed despairingly to a splendid likeness painted by Amaury

"A most admirable picture?" observed the artist, "and the painter's name is sufficient guarantee tist, "and the painter's finance is stincted guarantee for its striking resemblance to the original."

Several letters echoed these injunctions, during the few days immediately following the interview. At the expiration of three months the artist called again. He found the widow still in weeds, but a little less palid, and a little more coquetishly dressed in her mourning garb.

there is time yet to cut down!"
"Well, then, suppose we leave out the temple and the columns, and all the architectural part, and content ourselves with the statue? It seems to me that would be very appropriate?"

" Certainly it would." "So let it be then, just the statue alone." Shortly after this second visit, the sculptor fell desperately ill. ## Despair of Disappointed Love. A SAD SCENE IN A TELEGRAPH OFFICE.

The Cleveland (O.) Plain Dealer furnishes the following account of a pitiable scene which occurred a few days ago in the telegraph office of that city:

(we torbear names although known) arrived here from the State of New York, on her way into the southern part of the State, whither she was going to consummate a marriage contract entered toto some ten years since. Her intended was a young man who had been born and reared near her fath er's residence, but who in all things did not suit the "old folks," and consequently the latter opposed the match. The result was, the young man left the country, but has kept up a most intimate correspondence with the lady ever since, until last summer he informed her by letter that as she could not be married at home she had better meet him at ......, in this State, in the month of August, and be married. To this she consented; but it was found inconvenient for her to leave home at that time, and she did not arrrive on her mission of love until a few days since. She stopped at one of our best hotels, preparatory to her voyage South. She appeared cheerful, was exceedingly well dressed, sported a gold watch and other paraphernalia peculiar to the "gentility."

Previous to her departure, she stepped into the Telegraph Office to inform her lover, who by the The widow, at taese words, spring e parties, sing e bound throwing herself towards the picture, way was an operator himself, stationed in a Southwith arms stretched out as though to defend it ern office on the same Line, that she had got so far "Take away this portrait! carry off my only consolation! my sole remaining comfort! never! ver!"

But Madam, you will only be deprived of it for that the man to whom she had sent her message had fallen into a "streak of luck." observed to startle considerably, and asked what he meant by a "streak of luck." He told her the young man was married. She fell back in her chair and fainted, almost instantly. The operators and clerks were much frightened, but managed to bring her to by the use of water, &c. She could not believe the report, and requested them to tele-graph again and ascertain the truth. The operastepped to his key, called the office where the clerk in the office, however, answered the message saying Mr. — was actually married on the 17th of October, and was then "keeping house."— When this was read to the weeping lady she in stantly swooped away again, and for a time seem quite lifeless. She was resuscitated and taken to he notel in a most frantic condition, where for the whole day she remained entirely insane.

"Oh, grief beyond all other griefs, when fate

First leaves the young heart desolate In the wide world, without that only tie, For which it wished to live or feared to die. Kind care and time, that curer of most heart diseases, have now nearly restored her. She exhibits letters showing with what fidelity she had trusted in one now false to her; that during the ter years of their engagement she had refused severa offers; had furnished her betrothed money, he parents being rich and he poor; had endured the contumely of her friends at home opposed to the match; and all for his sake. She is now in our city, among strangers, alone, as it were in the world, having clandestinely left her father's roof to meet her lover here, and now deserted by him; her con stitution shattered and spirit broken. Earth seldom roduces in human form so miserable an object.-No wonder she went mad.—

" Her wretched brave gave way, And she became a wretch at random given, Without one glimpse of reason or of heaven." She is now better, but the picture of desolation Young men can here see the danger of trifling with such affections, yes, the dark sin of creating hopes or raising expectations in a heart too true and con iding to survive such disappointment. CALIFORNIA HENS .- The Rev. Walter Colton the late Alcade of Monterey, finding it difficult to procure eggs when required, either for love or money, bought some hens. We give his description of them:

"I purchased six bens of an Indian woman for six dollars, and a rooster for fifty cents. On asking the woman why she charged only half price for the rooster, she replied that the fellow laid no eggs, and as for his crowing, that did nobody any good. Sounder reasons than these could not be furnished in a much higher place than a hen coop. The habits of these hens are a little singular. They selves much about a nest but deposit their eggs where they find it most convenient; one takes a tray, another the ironing table, a third the oven and there is one that gets into the cradle. She is not at all disturbed by the tossing of the little fellow, on whose premises she is intruding. Neither she or any of her feathered sisters cackle when they leave the control of the contro they leave their nest. They don't seem to think that anything worth making an ado about has come to pass. The rooster, it is true, picks up a little, and, perhaps, feels a feather taller. But this is the vanity of his sex. There are a great many who crow over what others have done."

Hon. James Pollock is appointed by Governor Johnston, to fill the vacancy in the Eighth Judicial District occasioned by the death of Judge Anthony.

WISE ADMONITION WELL EXPRESSED.—In the biography of Fisher Ames, written by the late rofessor Kirkland, the following just and beautiful entiment occurs:

"When vice approaches the youthful mind, in the seductive form of a beloved companion, the ordeal becomes threatening and dangerous in the extreme. Few possess the prudence and unyield ing firmness requisite to pass it in safety. Those who have been accurately observant to the dependence of one part of life on another, will readily dence of one part of life on another, will readily concur with us, that Ames' future character derived elevation, from the untainted purity and irreproachableness of his youth. AN UNEXPECTED TERMINATION OF AN ELOPE-MENT.—A few days ago, a young married man eloped from the neighborhood of Manchester, Eng. and, with a female relative, intending to proceed to America in one of the packet ships. The passages were taken, and every arrangement made. Unfor tunately for the schemes of the faithless husband, an intimation of the circumstances was sent to the wife, who sold her goods and came over to Liver-pool immediately. Having communicated her story to the captain of the vessel in which her hus band was about to sail, she was allowed to go on board just at the time of sailing. The young woman who had run away with the husband, was sent on shore, and when the husband retired to his berth, he found, in place of his paramour, his lawful wife

SPLENDID ASSORTMENT OF GOODS SPLENDID ASSORTMENT OF GOODS, he has just received from New York and Philadelphia. The immense amount sold from day to day is the best evidence of their superior quality and cheapness, while the happy looks of his customers as they leave his establishment with their well filled parcels of clothing, speak more plauly than words, their satisfaction. It is a fixed principle of his, to receive no money for which he cannot give a full equivalent, and render the most perfect satisfaction. He takes pleasure in referring to the fost of his equivalent, and render the most perfect satisfaction. He takes pleasure in referring to the fact of his having been engaged for ten years as foreman in the largest and most celebrated Clothing-house in Philadelphia, and is well known through Lancaster county for his superiority as a cutter, and his unapproachable style in getting up splendidly made and fitting Clothing, he trusts that those in want of good garments, cut and made expressly as the purchaser desires it, will give him a call.
