For the Lancaster Intelligencer A Halo of Glory round Washington's Name.

Written to music, and respectfully dedicated to my young friend JAMES S. McMAHON, Esq., whose friendship for the writer through good and ill report, during a period of fourteen years, has known no compromise; and whose patriotism and devotion to the political institutions of the country. try pre-eminently fit him for a dedication.

While the muse of the world her memorial was keep Of all that the dark hand of destiny weaves, ling, The Genius of Liberty stood by her weeping, And sigh'd, for no glory illum'nd the leaves; And sign'd, for no giory fittin no the feater,
But, oh! how the tears in his eye-lids grew bright,
When after whole pages of sorrow and shame,
He saw history write with a pencil of light,
A halo of glory round Washington's name.

Hail Chief of mankind! said the spirit all sparkling, With a radiant glow from American sparsing.

With a radiant glow from American skies;

Through ages of sorrow descrited and darkling,

I've watch'd for a Washington's name to arise;

Though Napoleon's I've number'd and Wellington's

Int,
They in silence repose in the by-ways to fame;
But of thee there is not one dishonoring blot,
On the halo of glory round Washington's name. And now, noble chief! all thy honor maintain, In the scabbard of peace sheath thy sword once again;

Thy glory is full in thy country unchaining,
And gratitude lingers around thy loved name:
No more shall the strife of the battle confound thee, No more with thy steed wilt thou sweep o'er the plain; But where I first found thee, I still will surround

With a halo of glory round Washington's name. THE OPPRESSED SEAMSTRESS. A TRUE TALE.

BY MRS. E. WELLMONT

Some people seem to have an idea that they pay too much for everything; and it is a positive duty to employ those who will work the cheapest.

Mrs. Ellsworth lived very sumptuously and her daughter dressed very elegantly. We wont call them extravagant, because people who have plenty of money are not obliged to give an account to their neighbors of their expenditures. They were, however, discussing this very subject themselves upon the damask lounges, when the servant man entered and presented the seamstress's bill. Such a nicely folded paper always attracted the family's attention, and having looked at the bottom and the amount, and exclaimed " dear me, how high," they proceeded to examine the contents of the bundle which accompanied the bill.

The work is done beautifully," said Miss Hen rietta: "how superbly this lace is set on. How plendidly this is hemstitched. I declare, mother never mean to do any work myself, again, it is so much-better than I can make it look. "But you forget," said the mother, "it costs a a great deal to hire all our sewing for a large family, if it be done ever so cheap;" yet she felt ber-self that it was very pleasant to have garments "I wonder, said Sophia, a tall, graceful girl of sixteen to the little waiting seamstress in the entry, "what you would charge to make papa ten shirts? I have engaged to have them done by the first day of May, and it is a long job, and so vexa-tious, I wish I could transfer them to you to The child was sent home to inquire of her mother what she would charge to make ten shirts with full bosoms, hemstitched each side, and ruf-The little girl returned and artlessly replied "Mother says how she shall charge a dollar; but if the young folks said they would'nt give it, rather than lose the job, she would say seventy-five

Amused with the simplicity which ought to have excited sympathy rather than merriment, Sophia pretended that seventy-five cents was all she expected to give; she had hoped to get them done for fifty cents. Mrs. Fuller gave only that: but she did not add Mrs. F's shirts were unbleached, and very common work was put in them. After some hesitancy she brought them down, and doing despatched it to the Seamstress un'a large b adding:

"Now my poor head and my eyes are relieved." But let us see to whom this burden was transferred. The same seamstress once had a husband who was a prosperous merchant, but he speculated unwisely, died suddenly and left a widow with two small children to grapple with the hard fate of poverty and remembrance of "better days." They occupied but one room, and as her only employ ment was sewing, it was difficult to make ends meet with the most untiring industry.

"Don't you think, mother," said the little Ellen. who brought home the work, "the young lady thought she ought to get the shirts made for fifty cents apiece. But, mother, she surely could not have known what a slow process it is to gather, and hemstitch, and ruffle, and do all the sewing just for a half week's rent or she never would have The mother brushed a tear away. "No child she never worked for a living!"

"And, mother, she told her sister that she was so glad to get rid of the tiring work, and she said that her father would never know but she did it all, and she should have fifty cents clear, on every shirt: what could she mean ?"

Mrs. A. had heard of such deception before, but she cared not to inform her daughter that the young lady was probably to receive one dollar and quarter for each shirt. only to finish the whole number as soon as possi She immediately set about the task of cu ting them by the pattern, assorting them into piles and getting the plainer parts ready for Ellen to hem as she was very nice in needle work as fa near "school time," and the poor child but little relieved her mother.

It was at the season, too, when storms succeeded each other rapidly, and the heavens-are often overlighted, it began to make sad havoc with her vision Her eyes were weary from continued use, and when the long job was patiently accomplished, who could tell the aches and pains by which it was all the way attended? Miss Landon, speaking of such poor said:

"We little think how wearily

Sophia severely scrutinized them, pulling the ruffles, next looked at the gathers, then the stitching, nally tossing them in a heap, added: "Tell your mother they are worth no more than fifty cents, and I will give her that if she will receipt the bill."

It the one. The child returned with a heavy heart and imparted the information.

The seamstress wept—she looked every now and then upon the portrait upon the wall.

"If he were but alive," said she, "I should have some protector from wrong usage." She could not but exclaim, "how my head does ache!" as not but exclaim, "now my head does ache!" as she untied another budget of work: "five dollars for ten shirts! "I ought," thought she, " to better vindicate my rights—but they who oppress the poor have the worst of it. Here, Ellen dear, take this bill for making the shirts, and bring me back just what Sophia pleases to give, but say, mother has toiled very hard, early and late, upon them.

Ellen did so, and Sophia took her five dollars from her purse, adding:

"This is a great deal of money for poor people to spend—it will buy you a number

Poor girl! Your fan should be used as a screen to hide the hard spot in your heart. Prosperity on the snows of the Province.—Cleveland Plain never long follows in the footsteps of oppression.

A Missouri Farm. The following extract from a letter of a St Louis gentleman to a friend in this vicinity, will give some idea of the scale on which farming is onducted in Missouri:--"Yesterday I took a ride to see one of our fine "I esterday I took a ride to see one of our line. Missouri farms, about eight miles from St. Louis. A Mr. Sigerson and Brothers have one thousand acres fenced in with a rail and post fence which is one mile and a half long in a straight line both sides, and with fine large gates every quarter of a mile. They have 150 acres of corn, 40 acres of strawberries, 50 acres of peaches, about 30 acres flowers, and about 200 acres of fine grass, and 200 acres of fruit treess, 300 acres pasturage, &c. all in the completest order and neatness, and in a high state of cultivation. They have about one hundred of cattle, 600 sheep, &c., 2,500 pear trees. They have a row of these trees set out three quarters of a mile long in a straight line, with a row of arbor vitae trees on one side. I cannot begin to tell you of all the beauties of this place. The ratermelon patch was about the size of half the Boston Common, and completely covered with vines, and melons of the most Juscious description. ou must remember all the land occupied by the ruit trees is also covered with strawberries, grass, &c. This farm has been opened within six years. Can this be beat in the old Bay State any where? If so, let me know. There are fine carriage aven-ues, through the farm, crossing at right angles, the main avenue, bordered with flowers each side about a quarter of a mile. I spent a day in the vicinity, and dined there on the farm, was escorted all over it, and treated in the most hospitable manner."—

Barry Cornwall. Question for Debating Societies. Suppose five men owned a piece of land, having portion of it set apart for pasturage in common out each having a piece reserved for his own use to till. One man owned a horse, another a dog. another a flock of geese, another two goats, and another had his piece of land in meadow. The goats yoked together were trespassing on the meadow. The horse was standing in the common The horse was standing in the common adjoining the meadow, at the foot of a high bank on the top of which were the goats. The dog was sitting on the road. The flock of geese were pass. ing by with the gander at their head, and in to drive away the dog, to make room for the flock voice, ran at the goats, who being frightened, im mediately fled, and as they leaped off the bank, jumped one on each side of the horse standing below, and there hung by the yoke. The horse taking fright, ran away with the goats on his back into a pond of water, and drowned both himself and the goats. The owner of the horse sued the owner of the goats for riding his horse into the pond of water; the owner of the goats sued the owner of the dog for frightening his lipats; and the owner of the dog sued the owner of the geese; and the owner of the goats sued the owner of the horse for drowning his goats; and the owner of the meadow sued the goats for trespass. Who of the persons are entitled to a verdict?

Second Love.

First love is a pretty romance, Though not so lasting as reckon'd; For when one's awake from its trance. There's a great stock of bliss in the second.
And e'en should the second subside,
A lover should never despair;
For the world is uncommonly wide,

And the woman-uncommonly fair The poets their raptures may tell.

Kisses.-The ladies of Troy have introduced a new feature at their fair's, from which they realize a much handsomer sum than from lotteries, viz: that of selling their confectionary to gentlemen, young and old. All the best looking girls wear placards, "Kisses one shilling each," some charging a "quarter of a dollar," and others six cents, according to the beauty of the six they have the continuous to the beauty of the six they have cording to the beauty of those in the market.— Gentlemen are expected to go in according to the The aching head lies down."

Long before the promised time Ellen carried home the pondrous bundle of ten shirts. Miss eyed girl realized sixty-two dollars and a half.— One gentleman purchased eleven dollars worth of
