THE RESCUED CRIMINAL.

A great number of persons who know the celebrated Dr. B_____, a professor of the College of Surgeons, have often heard him relate the following anecdote:

· One day that he had procured the bodies of two criminals, who had been hung, for the purpose of anatomy, not being able to find the key of the dis secting room at the moment the two subjects were brought, he ordered them to be deposited in an apartment contiguous to his bed room. - wrote and re-

During the evening Dr. Bas usual previous to retiring to rest. The clock had just struck one, and all the family slept soundly, when all at once, a dull sound proceeded from the room containing the bodies.

Thinking that perhaps the cat had been shut up there by mistake, he went to see what could be the cause of the unexpected noise. What was his astonishment or rather his horror, on discovering that the sack which contained the bodies was tor asunder; and, on going nearer, he found that one of the bodies was missing!

The doors and windows had been fastened with the greatest care, and it appeared impossible that the body could have been stolen. The good doctor appeared rather nervous on remarking this, and i was not without an uneasy sensation that he began to look about him, when to his horror and amaze ment he perceived that the missing body was sitting upright in the corner. Poor Dr. B------, at this unexpected apparition became transfixed with terror, which was increased by observing the dead and sunker eyes of the corpus fixed upon him—which ever way he moved, those dreadful eyes still followed him.

The worthy doctor, more dead that alive, now began to beat a quick retreat, without, however, losing sight of the object of his terror; he re-treated size by step, one hand holding the candle, the other extended in search of the door, which he at length gained; but there is no escape, the spectre has risen and followed him, whose livid features added to the lateness of the hour and the stillness of the night, seem to conspire to deprive the poor doctor of the little courage he has left; his strength fails, the candle falls from his hand and the terrible scene is now in complete darkness.

The good doctor has, however, gained his apartand thrown himself on his bed-but the At this climax of terror the doctor loudly ex claimed, "Whoever you are, leave me !" At this moment the spectre let go its hold, and moaned feebly these words; —" Pity, good hangman ! have pity on me !" The doctor now discoverd the mysy, and regained by little and little his composure He explained to the criminal who had so narrowl escaped death, who he was, and prepared to call up

"Do you, then, who he was, and prepared to can up some of the family. "Do you, then, wish to destroy me?" exclaimed the criminal. "If I am discovered, my adventure will become public, and I shall be bronght to the source of the second the latter to the scaffold a second time. In the name of humanity, save me from death ?".

The good doctor then rose and procured a light; he muffled his unexpected visitor in an old dressing gown; and having made him take some restoring cordial, testified a desire to kuow what crime brought him to the scaffold. He was a deserter.

The good doctor did not well know what mean to employ to save the poor creature. He could not keep him in his house, and to turn him out would be to expose him to certain death. The only way then use to save the same to be the sam only way, then, was to get him to the country; so having made him dress himselt in some old clothes which the doctor selected from his wardrobe, he left town early, accompanied by his protege, whom he represented as an assistant in a difficult case upon which he had been called in.

When they had got into the open country the wretched creature threw himself at the feet of his penefactor and liberator, to whom he swore an eternal gratitude; and the generous doctor having relieved his wants by a small sum of money; the grateful creature left him with many blessings and prayers for his happiness

About twelve years after this occurrence Dr. ---- had occasion to visit Amsterdam. Having gone one day to the bank, he was accosted by a well dressed man-one who had been pointed ou to him as one of the most opulent merchants of the cultivation of flax, and one which cannot well be resisted by the indomitable spirit of Yankee or American enterprise. Twenty five or thirty years ago, flax was much more extensively cultivated than now; but the labor was abandoned, in consequence of the cheapness of cotton, and the labo required to bring the plant into any useful state of manufacture. The difficulty has now been obviated, and suitable machinery has been invented which will greatly facilitate, and cheapen the cost of such fabrics. Specimens of the finest quality have been sent from England, and are regarded as almost perfect.—so perfect, at least, as to have ex-cited the emulation of some of our heaviest manufacturers. In New Hampshire preparations are in progress for the conversion of a number of the argest cotton mills into linen mills, and the enterprise is not confined to that State. The industry of every part of the country will soon be excited, and we may justly expect a new epoch in the his tory of our manufacturing interests, Statesman.
