Miscellaneous. HYMN FOR MAY. BY PARK BENJAMIN.

It is the spring, the soft delicious spring, Weathing a garland of budding flowers...

The fields put on their verdure; the small rills Dance merrily along with about and glee...

Welcome! thrice welcome! favorite of the year; Ethereal milkmaids have you toting lasses...

A California Bride. A SKETCH FROM LIFE. Some months past, an advocate's clerk, placed in one of the first offices of Paris...

"Now," quoth he, "I have no longer need to marry an heiress..."

"I accept," rejoined the milliner, with an intrepidity belonging to her social intuition...

"It was arranged that the young clerk, who had already secured his passage on a vessel about to sail..."

"I fully expected one to arrive," replied the clerk, who started on affright at this new subject of expense in a country where every thing is incredibly dear...

"Not at all. First listen to me and have the goodness to answer me. How much do you calculate to spend on this country?"

"I always thought that about ten thousand francs a year would suffice to create my happiness..."

"I will give it to you," exclaimed the bewildered student.

"I resumed the nabob, 'I already have some millions, and I will desire more. Two hundred thousand francs are a mere trifle, and I am charmed to purchase a wife at such a price.'

ONE OF THE SNAKE STORIES.

Near fifty years have past since I was first heard to cry—many changes have come over the city since that time...

"I'm making o'er my many days, all long since, for something to amuse me, I found myself in the midst of a trick 'I played a young room-mate...

"I told aunt Polly that I would give her a half dollar if she would clean out the snake, and having found it full of wind, it at the other end, then take it to my room and place it in a pan of water, and put it in the closet."

"I was ever looking about for that snake. Our times," he was ever looking about for that snake. Our times, he was ever looking about for that snake...

"I was ever looking about for that snake. Our times, he was ever looking about for that snake. Our times, he was ever looking about for that snake..."

"I was ever looking about for that snake. Our times, he was ever looking about for that snake. Our times, he was ever looking about for that snake..."

"I was ever looking about for that snake. Our times, he was ever looking about for that snake. Our times, he was ever looking about for that snake..."
