CRADLE SONG. BY ALFRED TENNYSON.

Sweet and low, sweet and low, Wind of the western, sea, Low, low, breathe and blow, Wind of the western sea! Over the rolling waters go,
Come from the dropping moon, and blow,
Blow bim again to me;
While my little one, while my pretty one, sleeps

Sleep and rest, sleep and rest, Father will come to thee soon; Rest, rest, on mother's breast, Father will come to thee soon Father will come to his babe in the nest. Silver gails all out of the west Under the silver moon:
Sleep my little one, sleep my pretty one, sleep

IMAGINARY EVILS.

Let to-morrow take care of to-morrow Leave things of the future to fate; What's the use to anticipate sorrow? Life's troubles come never too late; If to hope over much be an error, 'Tis one that the wise huv-spreferred, 'And how often have hearts be 'n in terror Of evils—that never occurr'd!

Let to-morrow take care of to-morrow; Short and dark as our life may appear, We may make it still darker by sorrow— Still shorter by folly and fear. Half our troubles are half our invention,
And often from blessings conferr'd,
Have we shrunk, in the wild apprehensi Of evils-that never occurr'd

Adventure With a Robber.

Prince Frederic Schwarzenburg, the son of the celebrated Marshal Schwarzenburg, used often to elate his encounter with the notorious robber Haburak. The Prince once accompanied a lady from Hungary to Vienna. They journeyed on the roads between the counties of Gomor and Torna. Heavy showers had greatly damaged the roads; evening approached; the tired horses had reached the ridge of the woody height, but could not be urged on further; and the travellers were thus compelled to seek shelter for the night in the inn of Agglelek, a hiding place of ill note for robbers. The carriage halted before the house, and the servant inquired whether room could be afforded. The publican replied, that there was one room for the lady, but that the gentleman could room for the lady, but that the guest room being over filled. After some visible reluctance, he owned that the gang of Haburak were drinking there.—The lady-became terrified, and entreated the Prince not to remain; but it had grown dark, the rain vas pouring down, the horses were worn out, and that it was most hazardous to proceed. The Prince tried to reassure the lady; so she locked hersell up in the room assigned to her. Her companion, wrap-ped in his white officer's cloak, under which he kept his pistols in readiness stepped into the apart-ment where the robbers were assembled and sat ter should want any aid.

ly arrived guest. The Prince mixed in their conversation, took wine with them, and listened to their coversation until it had grown late. Suddenly he rose, called the publican, threw a gold coin on the table, and said: "This is for the wine these ood folks have drank; they are my guests. But time to sleep. In the adjoining room is a sic or disturb the lady's rest by noise.

At this imperative command, one of the robbers jumped from his seat, and contemptuously laughing cried out:- "Does the gentleman fancy that because he has a carriage and four, and plenty of money in his pocket, he has a right to comman

An uproar followed. The men vociferated:-· We are poor lads, and, therefore, we are masters

We are no timorous peasants, who take off our hats to every gentleman' "We have yet money and credit enought to swallow a draught when we are thirsty." "We do not accept any gay gift from people who fancy themselves better than we are."

We will not be ruled." All this was almost simultaneously uttered, with a loud tumult, from all sides. All the robbers had got up. The Prince mechanically caught hold of his pistols, and threw off his cloak.

I am a master of the craft in which you are but apprentices," he exclaimed with dignity.-You are robbers: I am a soldier, and fear neither the mouth of a rifle nor the edge of an axe. During this uproar, a man of middling height and strongly marked features had risen from the bench beside the stove, where he had quietly sat during the whold time, without partaking of the He now said in a commanding tone :-

The robbers grew speechless at this order, and 'Mr. Officer," continued the man, "don't think that you trighten us. I too have been a soldier, and have most probably smelt more powder than you ever did. I am Haburak. If I desire to do you any harm, a single whistle would suffice. The table at which you have sat would be overthrown the candles extinguished, and before aware of what was going on, you would be a dead man, no less than your servant there at the window, who thinks he watches us, whilst we watch him. But I saw you help a lady out of the carnever will disturb a lady's rest; we war with me time for a fortnight that these men have been under roof, and that the couch there below on the damp leaves is by no means comfortable. Fare "Friends, let us go," he called to his men.-They took up their arms and went.

The Prince was greatly struck by the whole ng. He did not entirely trust the robber's word; and relieving his servant, they paced up and down, thus keeping watch the whole night. But no robber again appeared. On the morning, the lady continued her journey on The weather had cleared up. and only the puddles in the lanes, and the drops of rain glistening on the branches, reminded them of the clouds of the previous day. After they had ridden about an hour, they suddenly heard the disof a rifle close to them in the woods.urak stepped forth from the bushes, and bid the

The horses stopped; the Prince drew forth his pistols. But Haburak, without heeding his threatning men, rode close up to the carriage door and

We yesterday sacrificed our comfort that the rest of that lady should not be disturbed. Now I will see whether it was worth the trouble." With these words, he litted the veil which hung down from the lady's bonnet, and looked for an inher face. The lady blushed, and the

Two years later, the newspapers related that the obber Haburak had been caught; that he had been ried at the assizes in Torna, convicted of desertion and highway robbery, and hanged.

An American Grace Darling.

A young intelligent and interesting woman, residing within sixty miles of New York, has, with the assistance of an aged and infirm father, saved twenty-one lives within the last filteen years. Kate Moore is the daughter of Captain Moore, who keeps the light house on Fuirweather Island, situated hetween the Harbours of Black Rock and Bridgeport.

(Ct.) The island contains five acres of land, and is about half a rule face the chart of land, and s about half a mile from the shore. Many disasters, it is known, have occurred to vessels dri en round Montauk Point in a storm, and sometimes in the Sound to homeward bound, and this lady's ear is so accurate, it is said, she can distinguish the hricks of the drowning mariner, and direct her barque in the darkest night. She can frim a boat, and manage as well as any man, and seems to make up in tact what she lacks in strength, and never reluses to turn out in the darkest night to the relief of the sufferers. Our informant adds that she is a highly accomplished and literary lady and perfectly feminine in her manners, and that although she occasionally visits New York and other places in the vicinity, and has a large and most respectable acquaintance, many of whom know of these facts, they have never come to the knowledge of the public before. The late lament ed Major Noah, who was remarkable for collecting ed Major Noah, who was remarkable for collecting the most interesting facts, by some means became acquainted with them. We also understand that Captain Moore and his worthy help mate have resided upon the island over twenty years, and brought up a family of-five children, upon a salary of three hundred dollars a year, all of whom have an excellent education, and that they entertain a great many persons who visit the island, with true old fashioned hosnitality.—Tribune. fashioned hospitality.-Tribune.

Amin Bey.

This personage seems to have been an outrageous numbug after all, and we think Mr. Brown ough to be dismissed from the United States service for his share in the imposition. The New York Ext ress has the following from a highly respectable ource in Constantinople: "As to the embassy, it appears that dragoman (interpreter) Brown took it into his head, all of a sudden, to visit the United States; but, in doing so, must be in a style somewhat extraordinary, a exhibit some diplomatic skill. To accomplish this he goes to the Admiralty, tells his friends there a long story about the many new inventions got up in the United States, and concludes by saying that he would consider himself highly honored by having a person from that establishment to accompany im, to see the wonders of that great nation, and its wonder working people, and thus with some importunity he succeeded in getting the Captain Pasha to lay the matter before the Sultan, and to get his majesty's consent to the arrangement, which he did, with the provision that it be conducted vithout ostentation, and by no means to be considred political or diplomatic; and with the distinct understanding that whoever should leave the naval school at the Admiralty, should do so in the char-

Post Office Abuses -We much doubt whether our Post Office Department was ever more subject to depredations, losses and failures than it is now. and has been for the last two years. Our merchants and business men are continually complaining, and down at the table, facing the window, whilst his servant, likewise armed, kept watch outside the house, close to the window, on the alert in case his complaints to the head of the department at Washington. Since the time of the administration of the Post Office Department by the Hon. Wm. T. men. Their rifles leaned against the wall; their axes lay upon the board, upon which stood the wine jugs. They drank, sung, and talked over their adventures, and did not take any notice of the new-layerived guest. The Prince mixed in their conas any other office in the country. Since the in duction of Postmaster White, there e has been two public accusations against clerks for robberies. with any amount of suspicion and indoor crimina-tions. Watches are instituted, and traps set to catch the guilty parties evidently believed to be in the office, but as yet nothing conclusive has been discovered—nothing demonstrated, except, perhaps, lady; the entertainment has lasted long enough; I that the Postma ter here is wholly unfit for his place, and for the selection, control and government of a large establishment, like that of the Philadelphia Post Office. He made, we understand, a very good clerk in the office, but a different sort of talent is requisite for the management of the office, from that, which would serve to fill a clerkship. We have no unkind teeling personally towards our ostmaster, but we have seen enough to know that his office wants a thorough renovation, and before we can hope to have an end to complaints, and the isgraceful scenes that have recently emanated from those under him, there mus, be a new head to the office-a man of intelligence and decision of char acter .- Dollar Newspaper.

> A Word to LITTLE GIRLS .- Who is lovely ?-It is the little girl who drops sweet words, kind remarks, and pleasant smiles, as she passes along; who has a kind word of sympathy for every gi or boy she meets in trouble, and a kind hand to help her companions out of difficulty, who never scolds, never contends, never teases her mother, nor seeks in any way to diminish, but always to increase her happiness. Would it not please you to pick up a string or pearls, drops of gold, diamonds, or precious stones, as you pass along the street?— But these are the precious stones which can never Take the hand of the friendless. Smile on the sad and dejected. Sympathize with those in trouble. Strive-everywhere to diffuse around you sunshine and joy. If you do this, you will be sure to be beloved.

ALARMING INTELLIGENCE.—There seems to be a determined movement among the fair sex to en-force a privilege, which, from time immemorial they have claimed, that of wearing breeches .-Heretotore, they have contented themselves assembling in town meetings and conventions, delivering denunciatory speeches and passing pugnac-ious resolutions. They have tired of words and resorted to action. Already several females have appeared in public with short Roman skirts, reveal ng to the vision of the dismayed lords of creation the distinct outline of breeches. This mode of anparel gives a new weapon of offence to those fo not with women. For the present we shall leave this shelter; yet, remember sir, that it is the first scratch but kick, as they now have free and unencumbered use of the lower extremities. We think that this change will be followed by the most disastrous consequences.

> ATTEMPT TO MURDER AN EDITOR .- A woman, aged about 45 years of age, named Jane Young, entered the office of the Athens (Geo.) Banner, and fter inquiring for the editor; and being info that he was not in walked up to the publisher Mr. Thomas S. Reynolds, and drawing a pistol shot him-the ball entering his side, and leaving him in a dangerous condition. On being questioned as o the motive of her conduct, she had been told that an article had appeared in the Banner, or in an extra of the banner, speaking of her as "a man dressed in woman's clothing going oing mischief"-that she had been unabl it in the paper, although assured by several friends that it had been published. She had two pistols and a bowie knife in her possession. The editor thinks, as she came from South Carolina, that she was made the instrument of some of his disunio enemies across the State line, to get him out of the way.

There is nothing purer than honesty; noth ing sweeter than charity; nothing warmer than love; nothing brighter than virtue; and nothing mind, form the purest, the sweetest, the richest, the brighest and most steadfast happiness.
