YOU WILL FORGET ME.

A few short years will pass, and you'll forget
That I was once a dweller upon earth;
A few short years, perhaps you may regret
Her whom you once thought full of truth

You may regret the low, yet happy voice, That breathed a fond heart's welcome v met; But still a few short years, and you'll forget.

You will forget me! other arms will wreathe You will forget me! other arms will wreathe
Around your manly form in loving joy;
A balmy breath may o'er you softly breathe;
A snowy hand amid your dark locks toy;
The nestling of that soft hand within yours,
May then, perchance, a thought of me beget,
You'll think of long past scenes and happier hours,
And sigh perhaps—but then you will forget.

You will forget me! you will turn to eyes Swimming in liquid radiance, jetty black, Or brightly blue as heaven's own azure skies; And then your memory will wander back
To her you once adored; to those fond eyes,
Wherein a depth of untold love was set.
A dream of your poor early love will rise,
A tear may fall—but then, you will forget.

But years may pass—long weary years may roll, 3 Mountains may build up space 'twixt thee and me;

But, oh! my love will cling around thy soul,
Like vied tendrils round a withered tree.
All other feelings may give way with tears,
Leaving us nought but memory and regret;
We build to these an altar with our tears,
For woman's hely love can ne'er forget!

Life In Mexico. SPORTING SCENES AND ANECDOTES.

By a Member of the Mexican I undary Commission The Quails. There is a driety of this bird, which resembles the Northern quail, very common in Lower Texas, and found wherever the prairie fowl is. They seem to enjoy each other's company, and run together. One day I fired at a couple of prairie fowls standing near each other, where they were partially concealed by the high grass. On going to pick up my birds, I found I had killed. s, several quails which were running with They belong to the same family of birds, and as their habits are also the same, it is not so singular that they should sometimes run together.

The brown speckled quail just spoken of, disappears as you approach the Rio Grande, where an other and more beautiful variety makes its appearance. This quail is of a bluish color, with a red top knot on its head. In plumage, it is a superblittle bird; and, as to eating, it is as delicate as its form and color are beautiful. Its habits are much the same as other birds of the same family. are always found in flocks of from ten to thirty and upwards. They run rapidly among the low musquit bushes, and do not fly unless closely pur sued. I have often seen them teeding, among the black birds and crows, directly under my window are dropped from the wagons. Quail shooting is very pleasant sport, as one need not go far from home to find an abundance of them.

There was a general turn of these people, amounting to about two hundred, embracing men, women and children. They formed a line, or rather the arc of a circle, taking in a large tract of country. Many were mounted on horses or mules. The women and children on foot carried poles and sticks, with which they beat the bushes, driving before them all the rabbits. The men were armed with bows and arrows, and some few may have had guns. But ammunition is too costly here for Indians to use in killing rabbits As they approached the river or some point on it, they gradually contracted their circle, thus bringing the rabbits within a small compass. Now began the hooting and yelling, the women and children contributing their share. The poor rabbits attempted to escape, and some few were successfu but the greater number, alarmed at their singular predicament, fell an easy prey to the arrows or sticks of their pursuers, as they vainly made an effort to escape from the ring, or sought shelter among the bushes. Many women were mounted on mules, with their game suspended at their sid In some instances I noticed four or five rabbits suspended to one mule. Of the Puebla Indians I have much to say, but I am now engaged on some inquiries respecting those at Isletta, and at a village near El Paso; and will therefore leave the subject until I obtain ad-

The Fandango. - This is not an animal, a bird or fish; neither is it an Indian tribe, but the univer sal amusement of the Mexicans, both of high and degree. A fandango is a dance, generally free to all, though sometimes the gentefina, i. e., the up-per crust or aristocracy give one, and invite all shom they wish to be present. These, however are stiff. To see a real Mexican fandango, you ist go among the people, where every one goes and where there is no restraint. Here you will se the aristocracy alike with the mobocracy and the so fond are the Mexicans of this lance, and so few are the amusements, that all go without regard to where the fandango may be, or one it may consist. You may see one of the first ladies of the place, her servant, or perhaps a peon, her slave, and a fashionable courtezan, dancing side by side. No conversation takes place between gentlemen and ladies when dancing; fact, I believe it is considered impolite. The ladies being uneducated, possess little conversational powers, hence it would be impolite to lead a lady into

At these fandangoes the ladies are well and gen teelly dressed. Elegant silks, sating and are as common as in the United States. The ladies are also very graceful in their manners, and go through a dance as well as pupils from our fash-ionable dancing schools. I wish I could say as much of the gentlemen, or those calling themselve such. The male portion of these assemblies is as mixed as the female. I have seen present, the officers of the post in their uniforms, the Catholic priest, and the most respectable own, and aconsideable sprinkling of low fellows You may see long tailed coats and short jacket tails; and some with no coats at all .-Frock coats, and blanket coats and flannel wrappers, are equally conspicuous. There you see also the Mexican in full dress with his short velvet jacket, and pantaloons open at the leg, fro hip to the ankle, showing an inner pair of white

When the dance is over you conduct When the dance is over, you conduc her to her seat again, without saying a word. It lished at Seneca Falls, N. Y. She is the daughter she is pretty, agreeable and a good dancer, you hold on to her for the next dance or waltz. I have of Senator Stanton, of New York, and, as will be seen an American gentleman get an agreeable partner, and retain her for every dance. There is no such good fortune for the Senoritas here as at the North, where they are engaged half a dozen

There is another custom which I have not mendances ahead. You will ask how are these dances supported, when they are free? It is this: After you have danced with a lady, it is expected that you will take her to the bar of the room adjoining, and treat her to a glass of wine, and some cakes or sugar plums. It would be considered the height of rudeness not to do this; not to the lady alone, but to the host, whose hospitality you have been enjoying. Reckoning, therefore, twenty-five or fifty cents spent after each dance, and the expense of an g at a fandango is nearly as much as one of your Northern balls. I would not omit to mention that all smoke, at these dances, both ladies and Just imagine a gentleman after gentlemen. I have spoken of the presence of the cure or priest at the fandangoes. There seems no harm in this, as his presence tends to keep the party in subjection, and mothers feel more confidence in etting their daughters attend, if he is there, than they otherwise would. This gentleman, the cure, they otherwise would. Inis gentleman, the cure, Oritz, is the most intelligent and agreeable man in the town of El paso. He is the same that Kendell speaks so highly of in his "Narrative of the Santa Fe Expedition. Although he was badly treated by Col. Doniphan, who took him prisoner, and sent him to Chihuhua, he is much attached to all A margane who conduct themselves properly all Americans who conduct themselves properly. I say properly, because there is but a small portion visiting. El Paso who do. American gentlemen are scarce here; emigrants to Calfornia plenty.— The latter are perfectly lawless, committing depredations on the inoffensive Mexicans, and other wise maltreating them.

Extraordinary Escape.

The last Abingdon Virginian contains the following account of one of the most remarkable escapes probably on record. It was almost mi-

The children of Mr. George Hickan a citizen of Scott county, were playing together in a field and in crushing many generous impulses, high resolves, near the mouth of a lathomless sink hole. In their and noble deeds. Women are said to have excessnear the mouth of a lathomiess sink noie. In their gambols one of them, a boy about eight or ten years of age, pushed his little brother, about four years old, headlong over the edge and down into the deep dark pit below. It was sometime after the child had been missed before any certain infor-mation could be drawn from the others as to what had become of him; and it was only threats of severe punishment that finally overcame their fear and extorted from the boy a conlession of what had happened. An effort was made immediately to ascertain the situation of the little fellow, and afford him relief if he was not beyond its power. Ropes were tied together with a stone attached to one end, and an attempt was made to fathom the depth beneath, but more than sixty feet of rope were employed in vain, & no bottom could be reached. A lighted candle was then put down, but its light gave no hopeful indication except that the pit was free from choke damp or impure air as far down as the candle descended. Night came on and all further efforts had to be for the time abandoned.

depth of the pit, but with no better success. In despair the frantic parents were about to give up all hopes of recovery or of relieving their little innocent, and preparations were being made to close up the mouth of the pit to prevent a like occurrence in the future, when it was suggested and agreed upon that another and final effort should be made by letting some individual down by ropes to examine the nature of the abyss, and ascertain if there was any encouragement for further efforts to be found below. A brother of the lost child undertook the tearful task. Cords were fastened around his waist and limbs, and one to his wrist by which he might indicate to those above, his wishes either to decend or to be drawn up. He was swung off and slowly lowered, until having was swing on and slowly lowered, and they gone to the depth of about fifty feet, he slooked below him, and there shone through the thick darkness two glistening eyes intently looking upland the doctor was summoned. In another moment he was standing on a shelf or angle in the shaft with the child clasped to his bosom. He fastened the little fellew securely to his own body, and bidding him to take given to draw up.

The child clung convulsively to the rope, and, in a few minutes they arose within view of the hundred anxious spectators who had assembled to witness the result: and when the first glimpse of screams and shouts of joy from the excited multi tude filled the air, and big tears of sympathy started from the eyes of every beholder.

After the first paroxysm of delight had subsided the child was examined to see if it has sustained any injury, and extraordinary to tell, with the exeption of a little bruise on the back of its head it was perfectly sound and unbart. The only com plaint it made was that it was nungry, one nearly twenty-seven hours under the ground. To inquiries made of it, it replied that it saw a light, and heard it thunder. From the nature of the pit, it appeared that the little fellow had fallen a perpendicular distance of forty feet, upon a slope or bend plaint it made was that it was hungry, being dicular distance of forty feet, upon a slope or bend in the shaft, and from that place had slided down twenty feet further to the spot where he was found, leaning against a sort of pillar or wall, and gazing How he escaped instant destruction is

Matrimony Made Easy.

The editor of the Portland Transcript, who must be a bachelor, from the way he talks, makes the and jovial set of creatures than they appeared to following suggestions relative to the united state of matrimony:

> GETTING MARRIED.—This very interesting even in a woman's life must be very trying to the nerves of some of our delicate young ladies! No doubt your buxom widow, who has buried her third husband thinks it a very trifling affair, but she has lost the freshness of her feelings, and is not to be spoken of in the same breath with a blooming maiden.-As the result of much philosophical investigation (for like Washington Irving, we have "speculated much about matrimony," but never experimented,) we incline to the opinion that a person can experience the sensation of getting married but once!— However this may be, we are glad to be able to state to those who have serious thoughts of committing matrimony, that it is in our power to give them a valuable hint as to the best mode of getting through the ceremony. We have heard of getting married by steam and by telegraph, but we have now to propose a most original plan, which may be called marriage made easy. We recently overbe called marriage made easy. We recently over-heard two young ladies talking on this subject.— One said she was sure to faint, but the other said when she got married she intended to take chro-from! This is decidedly better than the bashful man, who wanted to slip into matrimony by degrees. A white handkerchief applied to the moment passed in a blissful dream, and yo a moment passed in a pursuit dream, and y-awake in the promised land! Getting married by chloroform will undoubtedly become very popular > with sentimental young ladies A Posen.-We were handsomely "tripped up" in a discussion the other day, with a pretty young Miss of our borough, on the proposed change in ladies' dresses. After putting in our "biggest lick," as we thought, against the contemplated inr young lady very naivly knocked the noise out of us by saying—"Ah, if you men would only per-mit ladies to adopt the Turkish costume, we in turn would allow you to adopt the Turkish custom of having as many wives as you please." We incontinently threw up our cap in favor of the short skirts and trowsers.—Carlisle Dem.

The following article on the new costume of the adies is by the editor or editress of the Lilly, published at Seneca Falls, N. Y. She is the daughter seen, is as independent as a wood-sawyer;

Our Costume.-Let the silk worm stay in its co coon, until its own wants compel it to throw aside. Let every woman stay in her long petti-coats until she feels the necessity of a change; ther no opposition or trivial objections will detain her en she will not doubt or hesitate as to what she shall do; she will not heed the remarks of rude men and boys, and unmannedly women. Though I do not wish to convince any woman against her will of the reasonableness of this change; yet would answer some of the objections I have heard. Some say the Turkish is not graceful. Grant it .-For parlor dolls, who loll on crimson velvet couches, and study attitudes before tall mirrors for those who have no part to perform in the grea drama of life, for whose heads, hearts and hands there is no work to do, the drapery is all well; let them hang on, thick and heavy as they please, though to the highest artistic taste, the human form is most beautiful, most graceful, indraped and unadorned. Are not the Graces hemselves thus represented? I have seen a gallery of beautiful paintings and statuary, in the old world, but nowhere is the ideal form to be found in a huge whalebone boddice and bedraggled skirt. If the graceful is what you aim at, study the old painters and sculptors, and not Godey's Lady's Book of Fashion. But for us, common place, every day, working characters who wash and iron, and brew, carry water and fat babies up stairs and down, bring potatoes, apples and pans of milk from the cellar, run our own errands, through mud or snow shovel paths, and work in the garden; why "the man so criminal an offence that we must be doom ed to this everlasting bondage? "But," say some "it is not the fashion!" Neither is it the fashion to be honest and virtuous, to lead simple, pure, and holy lives. The true and earnest soul is always odd. Again, "some women of doubtful character oud. Again, "some women of doubtful character are proposing to wear the short dress." Well, have they not also worn a long one? "But men and boys laugh at us." That is a strong reason in its favor. It is good to be laughed at. The more ridicule you encounter the better. It strengthens and developes the character to stand alone. "What will the repole says" has been a new full the repole says." will the people say?" has been a powerful weapon

"There is an endearing tenderness," says Wash ington Irving, 'in the love of a mother for her son that transcends all other affections of the heart."— We have just heard a touching illustration of the fact, that the love of a son for his mother may also transcend and swallow up all other affections, at a moment, too, when he might well be pardoned for remembering only his great trials.

Some two years ago, a young man belonging to Philadelphia, was returning by railroad to that city, from the town of Reading, Pennsylvania. By an accident which happened to the train, while it was approaching town, and while he was standing upon the platform, he was thrown off and fell partly under the wheel of the succeeding car, and his right arm, "marrow, bones and all," was crushed to a jelly, dropped uselessly by his side. This, however, was fortunately his only injury. He was a young man of determined nerve, and of the noblest spirit. 'He uttered no complaint—not even a groan. When the train arrived at the depot, a carriage was immediately called, when attended by a friend, he said to the coachman, "Drive 'at once to Dr. - s in Walnut street."

"Well, my dear fellow," said the Surgeon, for he was well acquainted with his patient, "you know I suppose, what must be done?" "I do," he replied, "and its for the purpose of having it done that I am here." "My surgical table," said the Doctor, "is below," "Can it not be done without that!" asked the sufferer. "I cannot be tied—I cannot be held. Amputate my arm bere, Doctor." he continued holding out the dangling limb over the back of this sofa. "Do it here, Doctor; I shall not flinch; I shall not interfere with your operations."

The limb was bared; two attendants, medical students in the house, were summoned; the arm was taken off above the elbow, while the patien satas he had requested, uttering no groan nor speaking a single word, while the opera-tion was being performed. The dressings were applied, and, attended by his friend the patient and reached the door, on his way to his own house which was very near by, when he turned surgeon, and said, "Doctor, I should like to look at my arm once more; pray let me see it." The surgeon raised the mangled limb; the patient glanced at the bloodless hand and said "Doctor there is a ring upon the middle finger of that hand, won't you take it off for me? My Mother gave won't you take it out in the way Mother gave me that ring when she was on her death bed.— I can part with my arm, but while I live I can't part with that ring." The ring was slipped from e cold white finger. Mr. Buchanan.—The malignant onslaughts against this upright man and great statesman, by few disorganizing democratic papers in the State, ave caused his friends to rally around him in strength and numbers that defy all opposition in Pennsylvania. In some instances, resolutions, designed covertly to injure Mr. Buchanan, have been smuggled through County meetings. The democracy of Jefferson county were misrepresented by a rick of this character a few months since, and at their late mass meeting rescinded the anti Buchan-an resolution and wheeled into line in support of the "favorite son" of the Keystone State.

James Buchanan is stronger to day in Pennsyl-vania than he has ever been before. He commands more strength at the South than any northern man living. Not because he has "truckled to the South," as the abolitionists say of every man who is no ready to join them in their crusade against the Union, but because he is national in his politics—an American statesman, faithful to the Constituon-with a soul capacious enough to love his whole country. Such a man must command the espect and esteem of the whole country. North Buchanan.— Venango Spectator.

JAMES BUCHANAN.—We are gratified to see so many of the most influential papers, in and out of the State, speak in terms of unqualified praise, of the distinguished and favorite of Pennsylvania.— We are daily, more of of the opinion, that he will our standard bearer in the next Presidential eampaign. # Paddy and his Plea in Court.

Some years ago, a huge, strapping son of the Emerald Isle, by the name of Patrick O'Fallagan, who had gone his rounds as an unvanquished boxer," in the "ould country," came to "Ameriky," with a view of "tachin" the sublime and refine art of pugilism. Landing at Boston he proceeded up 'Long wharf," and recollecting that he was in a free "country," where he imagined every one pos-sessed the right to amuse himself as he pleased, and desirous of introducing himself and his "iligent science to the due notice of the yankees, without any unnecessary and expensive delay, he resolved to exhibit at once a few specimens of his profes-sional skill, by knocking down several of the most formidable specimens of humanity he might chance to meet, and which he accordingly did in the mos approved and scientific manner.

The result of this experiment was, that he soon found himself in a Court of Justice, to answer an indictment for assault and battery. His attorney advised him, that when called on to "plead" to the indictment, which, in that State is done orally, by the prisoner, to plead "nolo contendee." "What's the meaning o'that," said the pugilist. "It means," re-"What's the plied the Attorney, "that you will not contend against the country. The case being called, the prisoner was ordered to "stand up," when the indictment having been read, the clerk put the usual interrogatory, "Patrick O'Fallagan, what say you to this indictment, are you guilty?" Placing himself in puglistic position, with both fists brought up before him, in an attitude of defiance, with a look of terrible omen at the three judges, Patrick "put in" the following, "plea," with a sort of comical emphasis of which some of the elderly members of the Suf-lolk bar still retain a vivid recollection: 'Plase your lordships, I'll not contind wid the whole country, but be the howly St. Patrick, I kin lick 'aither two ov ye ony day. - Washington (Pa.)
