Sallie St. Clair.

Sallie St. Clair was a beautiful, dark-eyed Creol The whole treasury of her love was lavished upon Sergeant Jasper, who on one occasion had the good fortune to save her life. The prospect of their separation almost maddened her. To sever ng jetty ringlets from her exquisite head, to dress in male attire, to enrol herself in the corps to which he belonged, and follow his fortunes in the wars, unknown to him, was a resolution no sooner conceived than taken. In the camp she attracted no particular attention, except on the night before the bittle, when she was noticed bending over his couch, like a good and gentle spirit, as if listening to his dreams. The camp was surprised, and a ferce conflict ensued. The lovers were side by side in the thickest of the fight; but en deavoring to turn away a lance aimed at the heart of Jasper, the poor girl received it in her own, and tell bleeding at his feet. After the victory, her name and sex were discovered, and there was not a dry eye in the corps when Sallie St. Clair was laid grave, near the river Santee, in a green shady nook that looked as if it had been stolen out of Paradise .- Tales of Marion.

SONG OF MARION'S MEN. ' BY GEORGE P. MORRIS. In the ranks of Marion's band
Through morass and wooden land,
Over beach of yellow sand,
Mountain, plain and valley,
A southern maid in all her pride,
Marched gaily at her lover's side,
In such disguise
That e'en his eyes

When returned from midnight tramp, Through the forest dark and damp, On his straw-couch in the camp, In his dreams he'd dally
With that devoted, gentle fair,
Whose large black eyes and flowing hair So near him seem, That, in his dream, He breathes his love for Sallie.

Oh! what joy that maiden knew, When she found her lover true— Suddenly their trumpet blew, Marion's men to rally!

To ward the death-spear from his side,
In battle, by Santee, she died!

Where sings the surge
A ceaseless dirge
Near the lone grave of Sallie.

From Arthur's Ho Lilly Dale: Or, Village Life.

BY CARBIE MERTON

Among all the members of our little band at Lilly Dale, there are none who are loved better than Harry Hill and his sweet wife.

Never is time passed more pleasantly than at their pretty cottage, where though, all in humble life (for Harry has not an over abundance of this world's goods.) still the gentle spirit of contentment sheds a halo over all, and makes even what is poor

Harry was born and bred in our village. His country. father one of the earliest settlers in the country, was a farmer, whose whole happiness consisted in raising corn and potatoes.

His mother, a woman of more than extraordinary past life and his character for his opinions:

and earnest desires after knowledge. She encouraged him as much as possible, even against the wishes of her husband, who thought too nuch book learning a poor thing for a farmer's

But Harry needed little encouragement to urge him onward. His thirst for information increased, as he grew older, and every draught he poured own only stimulated him to a longing for more. He obtained books in every possible way; and, the midnight hour often found him poring over some volume, too much fascinated with its contents to mark the flight of time. tasteful to him became the life and labors of a as well as the long series that would inevitably fol how little Harry was fitted for the station to which he wished to place him, he consented, telling him, nowever, that he must work his way through the world, as his farm did not yield him much pecuassistance. To this condition Harry joyfully consented, and passed through college by performing manual labor during the vacations He graduated with high honors, and having decided upon the profession of law, entered, as student, the office of one of the ablest advocates at There he met and loved Kate Wilson, the daughter of a gentleman who had been one of the most prosperous of merchants, but under the pressure of hard times had failed; and, being an honorable man, had given up every thing to his creditors. Mrs. Wilson was an invalid, unable to assist her husband to retrieve his broken fortunes; and his increased its beauty.

Harry met Kate at the house of a mutual friend, and pleased with her gentle, unassuming manner spoke of and was told her history.

It touched his heart—he called to see her watched her untiring devotion to her parents, her unwearied exertions for them, and thought how he should love to relieve her of her labors, and transplant the sweet flower to his native bosom.

He was soon admitted to the bar, and was de termined to return to Lilly Dale to practice his

How he won the fair gi know not, but cer tain it is he did win her, an orought her to the happy home where they now dwell. Rumor says that at first she refused him, because, she urged she could not leave her parents desolate, but Harry overruled that objection, by telling her of the advantages of quiet and retirement to aged people and invalids, and assured her that he had already chosen a room for her father and mother in the cottage to which he wished to bear her. Then she a ced her hand in his, and promised to go whither he would lead her. They lived with us but a few that his, yet all love dear Kate Hill and her pa Yenti. The flower garden, too, always seems to look more beautiful than any other in the village, and whenever you pass it in the early morn, you may see the light, graceful form of Kate bending over the flower beds, and hear her happy voice carolling some sweet maledy while Harry is by her side some sweet melody, while Harry is by her side, ready to perform any little services for her, and old Mr. and Mrs. Wilson are seated in their large, comfortable arm chairs on the piazza, watching their children with loving eyes.

"Do you never tire of the monotonous life of our village, and long to return to your city home, dear Kate," I asked her the other day.

No—never do I wish to exchange the pure, sweet air of the country, and the happy independence of a country life for the close confinement ann formal ceremony of the city. Dear Carrie! my most fervent prayer to my Heavenly Eather is that my days may mass ever in this Father, is that my days may pass ever in this calm, pure and peaceful manner.

Her face wore such a holy expression of thanklulness and content, while she was speaking thus, that it left me the same influence that a still, moonlight evening does, and as I wandered towards out own little cottage, I prayed God to bless Kate, and ever permit her life to be as ifull of calm happi

Harry's father having found the care of the farm too much for him, sold it, and purchased a small house near to Harry and his wife, whom old Mr. and Mrs. Hill idolized. Harry, being the only lawyer in the neighborhood for some distance round, has quite a good practice, and his father has come to the conclusion that his boy never was destined to follow the plough.

The old couple are fast sinking into the grave, but their journey thither is made more pleasant by the devotion and love of their children, and the thought that their son-the darling of their heart is thus honorably settled in life.

Every evening finds Harry and Kate wending their way towards the house where his parents their way towards the house where his parents dwell, and always with some little delicacy of Kate's preparation, or boquet of flowers from the garden—then returning with happy faces to minister to the happiness of the other dear ones waiting for

Too Good to be Lost.

A friend of ours relates the following story, which s a good one: A traveler, whom we afterwards knew, once ar rived at a village inn, after a hard day's travel, and being very tired requested a room to sleep in, but the landlord said they were entirely full; and it was utterly impossible to accommodate him—that his wife had to sleep on the sofa, and himself on the floor; but that he would see what his wife could do for him. The good woman, on being applied to, said there was one room which he might occupy provided he would agree to these conditions, viz: to enter the room late, in the dark, and leave it early in the morning, to prevent scandal, as the room was occupied by a lady. This he agreed to About 2 o'clock that night, an awful noise was heard in the house and our friend, the traveller, was found tumbling heels over head down stairs.— On our landlord's arriving at the spot, and enqui-ring what the matter was, the traveller ejaculated as soon as he was able to speak. "Oh, Lord, the woman's dead!," "I know that," said the landlord, "but how did you find it out."

Some few months since, a gentleman of Pennsylvania, at the request of eight members of the State Senate, wrote a letter to Gen. Winfield Scott, adsheds a halo over all, and makes even what is plant and plain possess a certain degree of beauty.

The Presidency.

Easton, Sept. 26, 1851.

DEAR FORNEY: I see in the last Keystone, a let-Dean Forner: I see in the last Reystone, a letter purporting to be from a prominent Democrat in Allentown, claiming that the Lehigh Delegates are anti-Buchanan men—that Packer, the Senatorial Delegate from Carbon, Monroe, &c., voted against Buchanan in 1844, and that Beardsley, the Delegate from Wayne, is an anti-Buchanan man. The recklessness of the assertions which these men make in order to deceive the public, is amazing.

I have good reason to believe that the letter uestion was written by a citizen of this place, and not by a prominent Democrat, or any other man from Allentown. The Lebigh county delegates are uninstructed, but will both go for Buchanan.— Beardsley, from Wayne, is well known to be a de-cided and determined Buchanan man, and Judge Packer as warm a friend of Buchanan as any in nothing but a lie in disguise. He voted for Van Buren under instructions. He is now instructed by Monroe and Pike in the warmest terms for Buchanan, and will obey his instructions with pleasure because they coincide with his feelings. here are no less than four lies compressed into letter of a few lines. The truth is, that our U.S. Senator having entered into a league with Cameron to carry the State against Buchanan, and having thu far been unable to do anything, and having been leseated as regards every delegate yet elected, in his own Congressional district, has got to be despised as weak and inefficient, even by his coleagues; and these letters are written in order to conceal his pitiful weakness and want of influence

A GREAT UNDERTAKING SUCCESSPULLY Accomplished.-We'witnessed last week, the re moval of a stone house, about 40 by 18 feet, and estimated to weigh four hundred tons, a distance of its whole length, by a city contractor, who accom-plished the work, in the most successful manner in about three days after the building was ready for removal. The force was derived from screws, the ouse having been completely undermined and rest ing upon heavy timbers, which had been laid with exactness, and forming a "way," on which, after being carefully soaped, the structure slid with apparent ease. The house is the dwelling of the late Daniel Pastorius, on the Main street, about a square above Haines; and, we are informed that he contractor is to receive $900 for its remova and restoration to its original condition operated, and cannot be put out of gear.

It is a single conical Wheel Horse Power with four Levers, to be operated by four or eight horses. The bed frame is solid and firmly prevents the gearing from getting out of order, and no danger of breakage.

The muster wheel is cone shaped, having the teeth or cogs on the underside, and the lever loops cast solid with the wheel. The levers are firmly set into boxes in the hub of the wheel, and secured by rods extending to each lever, and regulate the easy motion of the master wheel, so that the power of each horse is regularly divided, and the wheel is prevented from jurring by the sudden starting of the horse. The bed frame is composed of two solid plank forming right angles by being halved together at their centres. The bed plate is formed of a solid iron casting, having a cone shape pivot resting upon the centre of the bed frame and firmly bolted through. The cone shaped pivot has a shoulder upon which the master wheel revolves. Journals or boxes are firmly screwed to the bed plate and secure the regular horizontal motion of the main shaft.

Farmers are invited to call and examine the Machiness, which are warranted to purchasers.

Farmers are invited to call and examine the plac-chines, which are warranted to purchasers.

The undersigned having spent much time and trouble in perfecting this valuable invention, and the machine having been fully tested, and application having been made in March last to secure Letters Patent for said Improved Horse Power: All persons are hereby duly notified and cautioned not the manufacture the same for said or use, as they to manufacture the same for sale or use, as they all appreedly be dealt with according to law. body and mind, unfitting them for either business or society.

These are some of the sad and melancholy effects produced by early labits of youth, viz: Weakness of the back and limbs, Pains in the head, Dimness of Sight, Loss of Muscular Power, Palpitation of the Heart, Dyspepsia, Nervous Irritability, Derangement of the Digestive Functions, General Debility, Symptoms of Consumption, &c. Mentally.—The fearful effects on the mind are much to be dreaded: Loss of Memory, Candusion of Ideas, Depression of Spirits, Evil of Foreboding, Aversion of Society, Self Distrust, Love of Solitude, Timidity, &c., are some of the evils produced: luced: NERVOUS DEBILITY.

Weakness of the system, Nervous Debility and premature decay generally arises from the destructive habit of youth, that solitary practice so fatal to the healthful existence of man, and it is the young who are the most apt to become its Victims from an ignorance of the dangers to which they subject themselves. Perents and Cuardians are fiften misted with respect to the cause or source of disease themselves. Parents and Guardians are then misled with respect to the cause or source of disease in their sons and wards. Alas! how offen do they ascribe to other causes the wasting of the frame,
