Address of Kossuth.

The address of Kossuth "to the People of the United States," has been published in several papers, and is a most interesting document in every partic The style, though somewhat singular to Americans, is yet lofty and sublime. The New tooth-tread out their grain with cattle and win-now it with the wind. Wagons, except as used York Herald, speaking of the address as a fine specimen of composition, well and truly says, that "it has the sonorous ring of the echoes of a trumpet among the mountains, and the solemn vibrations of thunder along the horizon where the tempest has rolled away. It blends the brilliancy of the Orient with the strength of the Saxon-it is a combination of the poetry of inspiration, the eloquence of monscientious rectitude, and the solid argument of truth. The ornaments he uses give strength to the structure, and his reasoning adds on $1,800. $5 per bushel, coffee 75 ets. per pour beauty to his figures of illustration. Patriotism is the paramount feature of the production, for all the sympathies of the heroic writer are for the people, and his country, and their cause; and never were a people, a country, or its cause, more ably vindicated before the world." In a practical view, the narrative embodies a connected and consistent statement of that succession of great historical circumstances and events, which, beginning with a demand for the rights of Hungary, under the crown of Austria, resulted in an issue between absolute subjection and independence. The address is interesting and important from the fact that it will serve to enlighten the people of our country-who are now waiting with in conducting business, and many other firms, that anxious solicitude to welcome the noble Hungarian have been rotten for a long while, are seizing upon the present tight times as a glorious opportunity for them to make known an honorable insolvency Patriot to our shores-as to the true causes and objects of the revolution of which he was the In such a condition of affairs a great many credu leader. Oh! that Hungary had received but a slight token of moral support from the European powers —from those powers whose dreams are troubled with fear at the advance of the Cossack. Had mission? Sure enough,—what are they doing?-Why, simply taking care of themselves,—flounde ing to keep their own hulks from the threatening ware,-demonstrating conclusively how utterly useless they are as a reliance for relief when busionly an English or a French agent come to us during our struggle, what might he not have done! Had these two powers permitted a few ships to come to Ossara, laden with arms for the noble pa-triots who had asked in vain for weapons, the Hungarians would have now stood a more impregnable barrier against Russia than all the arts of a miserable and expensive diplomacy. There was a time when we, with the neighboring

There was a time when we, with the neighboring Poles, saved Christianity in Europe. And now I hesitate not to avow before God, that we alone— that my own Hungary—could have saved Europe from Russian domination. As the war in Hungary dupped it a character became character. In the dvanced, its character became changed. In the end, the results it contemplated were higher and far more important—nothing less<sub>in</sub> in fact, than universal freedom, which was not thought of in the beginning. This was not a choice; it was forced upon us by the policy of the European nations, who, disregarding their own interests, suffered Russia to invade and provoke us. Yes, we were martyrs to the cause of freedom, and this glorious and that the Cossacks from the shores of the Don will water their steeds in the Rhine, unless liberty be restored to Hungary. It is only with Hungarian freedom that the European nations can be free, and the smaller nationalities especially, can have no future without us. Nor could the united Russo-Austrian forces have conquered my heroic countrymen, had they not found a traitor to aid them, in the man whom, beieving in his honesty, and on account of his skill, I raised from obscurity. Enjoying my confidence, the confidence of the nation and the army, I placed him at the head of our forces, giving hi he mos What an immortality was within his reach, had he been honest! But he betrayed his country.— Cursed be his name for ever. I will not open my bleeding wounds by the sad remembrance of this event, and will merely mention that the surrender at Vilagos was the crowning act of a long system of treachery secretly practised—by not using the advantages which victories put in his hands—by act follow under cunning preter not fulfilling my commands ces—by destroying national feeling in the army— by weakening its confidence dand by the destruct ion through unnecessary exposures and dangers o hat portion of the army that he could not corrupt in his base designs to make himself military dic-tator. God, in his inscrutable wisdom, knows why the traitor was permitted to be successful. In vair fell the bravest of men in this long war-in vain were the exertions of my brave countrymen-in vain did the aged father send with pious heart, his only son, the prop of his declining years and the bride her bridegroom—in vain did all private interests yield to the loftiest patriotism—in vain arose the prayers of a suffiring people—in vain did the ardent wishes of every friend of freedom ac comnany our efforts—in vain did the genius of company our efforts-in hope for success. My country was martyred. Her rulers are hangmen. They have spoken the impious words that the liberty loving nation "lies at the jeet of the Czar." Instead of the thankful prayer of faith, of hope, and of love, the air of my native land is filled with the cries of despair; and I, her chosen leader, am an exile. The diplomacy of Europe has changed Turkish hospitality to me and my companions into hopeless bondage. It is a painful existence. My youthful children have be-gun the morning of their life in the hands of my country's destroyer, and I-but no: despondin become me for I am a man-I am not permitted, or I would say, I envy the dead. Who is unfortunate? I am in Broussa, where the great once lived an exile, homeless like myself. but rich in services performed for his country while I can claim only fidelity to mine. Th ingratitude of his nation went with him in his banishment, but the sorrowful love of my countrymen follows me to my place of exile. my God, I offer thanks that thou didst deem me worthy to suffer for dear Hungary. Let me suffer afflictions, but accept them as propitiatory sacrifices for my native la And thou Hungarian nation, yield not to despair Be patient; hope, and wait thy time! Though all men forget thee, the God of Justice will not. Thy sufferings are recorded, and thy tears remembe The blood of thy martyrs-thy noble sons-which moistened thy soil, will have its fruits. The victims which daily fall for thee are like the evergreen cypress over the graves of the dead, the f thy resurrection. The races whom the destroyer excited against thee by conning lies wil be undeceived; they will know that thou dids not fight for pre-eminence, but for the common liberty —that thou wast their brother, and bled for them also. The temporary victory of our enemies will but serve to take the film from the deceived people The sentiment of sympathy for our sufferings will inspire among the smaller States and races the wish for a Iraternal confederation-for that which I always urged the only safe policy and guarantee of freedom for them all.

The realization of this idea will hurl the power of the haughty despots to the abyes of the past; And Hungary, free surrounded by free nations, will are great, glorious, and independent.
