The estimates for special objects under the cor trol of this Department amount to $2,684,220.89, against $2,210,980 for the present year, the increase being occasioned by the additional mail service on the Pacific coast and the construction of the dock in California, authorized at the last session of Congress, and some slight additions under the head of improvements and repairs in navy yards, buildings and machinery.

I deem it of much importance to a just economy, and a correct understanding of naval expenditures, that there should be an entire separation of the appropriations for the support of the naval service proper from those for permanent improve ments at navy yards and stations, and from ocean steam mail service, and other special objects as signed to the supervision of this Department. The report of the Postmaster General, herewith communicated, presents an interesting view of the progress, operations, and condition of his Depart-At the close of the last fiscal year, the length of mail routes within the United States was 196, 290 miles; the annual transportation thereon 53,

The annual cost of this service is $1,472,187, of which $448,937 is paid by the Post Office Department, and $1, 023,250 is paid through the Navy Department. The annual transportation within the United

The reduction of postage, under the act of March last, did not take effect until the commencement of the present fiscal year. The accounts for the first quarter, under the operation f the reduced rates, will not be settled January next; and no reliable estimate of th receipts for the present year can yet be made. It is believed, however, that they will fall far short of those of the last year. The surplus of the revenues now on hand is, however, so large that no further appropriation from the treasury in aid of the revenues of the Department, is re in aid of the revenues of the Department, is required for the current fiscal year; but an additional appropriation for the year ending June 30, 1853, will probably he found necessary when the receipts of the first two quarters of the fiscal year are fully ascertained

In his last annual report the Postmaster General recommended a reduction of postage to rates which he deemed as low as could be prudently adopted, unless Congress was prepared to appropriate from the treasury, for the supnort of the Department, a sum more than eani valent to the mail services performed by it for the Government. The recommendations of the Postmaster General, in respect to letter postage, except on letters from and to California and Oregon, were substantially adopted by the last Congress. He now recommends adherence to the present letter rates, and advises against a further reduction until justified by the revenue of the Department.

He also recommends that the rates of postage on printed matter he so revised as to render

The public statutes of the United States have now been accumulating for more than sixty years, and, interspersed with private acts, are the cost of the whole, have become almost in-accessible to the great mass of the community. They also exhibit much of the incongruity and imperfection of hasty legislation. As it seems to be generally conceded that there is no "com-mon law" of the United States to supply the defects of their legislation, it is most important that that legislation should be as perfect as pos-sible defining every power intended to be con-ferred, every crime intended to be made punshable, and prescribing the punishment to be isnable, and prescribing the punishment to be spicken of more at length, the whole criminal code is now lamentably defective. Some of fences are imperfectly described, and others are entirely omitted; so that flagrant crimes may be committed with impunity. The scale of punishment is not in all cases graduated according to the degree and nature of the offence. ding to the degree and nature of the offenceand is often rendered more unequal by the dif, confinement, in the different States.

Many laws of a permanent character have been introduced into appropriation bills, and it been introduced into appropriation bills, and it is often difficult to determine whether the particular clause expires with the temporary act of which it is a part, or continues in force. It has also frequently happened that enactments and provisions of law have been introduced into bills, with the title or general subject of which they have little or no connection or relation. In this mode of legislation so many enactments have been happed upon each other, and often with but little consideration, that, in many instances, it is difficult to search out and determine what is the law. determine what is the law.

The Government of the United States is emphatically a government of written laws.— The statues should, the refore, as far as practiable, not only be made accessible to all, bu cable, not only be made accessible to all, but be expressed in language so plain and simpleas to be understood by all, and arranged in such method as to give persbicuity to every subject. Many of the States have revised their public acts with great and mahifest benefit; and I recommend that provisions be made by law for the appointment of a commission to revise the the appointment of a commission to revise the public statutes of the United States, arranging them in order, supplying deficiencies, correcting incongruities, sumplying their language, and reporting them to Congress for its action.

The great object to be accomplished was to make such an addition as would afford ample and convenient halls for the deliberations the two Houses of Congress, with sufficient accommodation for spectators, and suitable a partments for the committees and officers of the two branches of the Legislature. It was also desirable not to mar the harmony and beauty desirable not to mar the harmony and beauty of the present structure, which, as a specimen of architecture, is so universally admired.— Keeping these objects in view, I concluded to make the addition by wings, detached from the present building, yet connected with it by corridors. This mode of enlargement will leave the present Capitol uninjured, and afford great advantages for ventilation and the admission of light, and will enable the work to progress without interrupting the deliberations of Congress without interrupting the deliberations of Congress. To carry this plan into effect I have appointed an experience and competent architect. The corner-stone was laid on the 4th day of July last, with suitable ceremonies, since which time the work has advanced with commendable rapidity, and the foundation of both wines are now nearly complete.

I again commend to your favorable regard the interests of the District of Columbia, and deem it only necessary to remind you, that although its inhabitants have no voice in the choice of representatives in Cohgress, they are not the less entitled to a just and liberal consideration in your legislation. which I would respectfully refer. But there e of more than ordinary interest to which was one of more than ordinary interest to which again invite your special attention. I allude to the recommendation for the appointment of a commeision to settle private claims against the United States. Justice to individuals as well as to the Government imperatively demands that some more convenient and expedi-tious mode than an appeal to Congress should

It is deeply to be regretted that in several instances officers of the Government, in atinstances officers of the Government, un ar-tempting to execute the law for the return of fugitives from labor, have been openly resist-ed, and their efforts frustrated and defeated by lawless and violent mobs; that in one case such resistance resulted in the death of an es-such resistance resulted in the death of an estimable citizen, and in others serious injury ensued to those officers and to individuals who were using their endeavors to susiein the laws. Prosecutions have been instituted against the alleged offenders, so far as they could be identified, and are still pending. I have regarded it as my duty, in these cases, to give all aid legally in my power to the enforcement of the laws, and I shall continue to so wherever and whenever their execution may be resisted.

The act of Congress for the teturn of fugitives from labor is one required and demanded by the express words of the Constitution.

The Constitution declares, "Thot no person theld to service or labor, in one State, under the laws thereof, escaping into another, shall, in consequence of any law or regulation thereim, be discharged from such service or labor, but shall be delivered up on claim of the par-

'but shall be delivered up on claim of the par-'ty to whom such service or labor may be due.'
This constitutional provision is equally obliga-tory upon the Legislature, the Executive, and Judicial Departments of the Government, and upon every c tizen of the United States Congress, however, must, from necessity, first act upon the subject; by prescribing the proceedings necessary to ascertain that the person is a fugitive, and the means to be used for his restoration to the claimant. This was done by an act passed during the first term of President Washington, which was amended by that enacted by the last Congress and it now remains for the Executive and Judicial Departments to take care that these laws be faithfully executed. This injunction of the Constitution is as peremptory and as binding as any other; it stands exactly on the same foundation as that clause which provides for the return of fugitives from justice, or that no bill of attainder or ex post facto law shall be passed, or that which provides for an equality of taxation, according to the census, or the clause declaring that all duties shall be uniform throughout tha United States, or the important provision that the trial of all crimes shall be by inry. These several articles and clausor his restoration to the claimant. This was be by jury. These several articles and clauses of the Constitution, all resting on the same authority, must stand or fall together. Same objections have been urged against the details of the act for the return of fugitives from labor; but it is worthy of remark that the main opposition is aimed against the Constitution itself, and proceeds from persons and classes of persons, many of whom declare their wish to see that Conetitution overturned. They avow their hostility to any law which shall give full and practical effect to this requirement of the Constitution. Fortunately, the number of these persons is comparatively small, and is believed to be daily diminishing, but the issue which they present is one which involves the supremacy and even the existence of the Constitution. but it is worthy of remark that the main oppo

Cases have beretofore arisen in which indi viduals have denied the binding authority of acts of Congress, and even States have proposed to nullify such acts, upon the ground that the Constitution was the supreme law of the land, and that those acts of Congress were repugnant to that instrument; but nullification is now aimed, not so much legainst particular laws as being inconsistent with the Constitution, as against the Constitution itself; and it is not to be disquised that a curit exists and has been e disguised that a syirit exists and has been actively at work to rend asunder this Union, which is our cherished inheritance from our

In my last annual message I stated that I considered the series of measures, which had been adopted at the previous session, in reference to the agitation growing out of the Territorial and slavery questions, os a final settlement in principle and substance of the dangerous and exciting subjects which they embraced; and I recommended adherence to the Adiustment established by those measures until justment established by those measures until time and experience should demonstrate the necessity of further legislation to guard against or abuse. I was not induced to make this recommendation because I thought thore measures perfect, for no human legislation can be perfect. Wide differences and jarring opinions can only be reconciled by yielding something on all sides, and this result had been searghed after an angry conflict of many months, in whic one part of the country was arrayed against another, and violent convulsions seemed to be imminent. Looking at the interests of the whole justment established by those measures until imminent. Looking at the interests of the whole country. I felt it to be my duty to seize upon this Compromis as the best that could be obtained anid conflicting interests, and to insist upon it as a final settlement, to be adhered to by all who value the peace and welfare of the country. A very her new thread eight the comtry. A year has now elapsed since that recommendation was made. To that recommendation I still adhere, and I congratulate you and the country upon the general acquiescence in the measures of peace, which has been exhibited in all parts the Republic. And not only is there this general acquiescenoe in these measures, but the spirit of conciliation which has been manifested in regard to them in all parts of the country, has removed doubts and uncertainties in the mind of thousands of good men concerning the durability of our popular institutions, and giver renewed assurance the core i there is the concerning the durability of our popular institutions, and giver renewed assurance that onr Liberty and our Union may subsist te-gether for the benefit of this and all succeeding
