Miscellaneous.

'Twas far into the night.

The hours were passing on swift wings and how Like fleet and shing angels did they pass Fanning the flame of love! We gazed upon The beauty of the dark blue heaven. It was A mirror to the beauty in our hearts. Its stars were the reflected radiance Of love thoughts; its far depths the deep and soft Expansion of the canopy hung over Lile's glorious Eden, as it swept away— All cloudlessly away into the light Of coming years. Her bosom rose and fell Within the narrow circle of my arm,
And round each nerve deliciously there went And round each nerve deliciously there went The missions of her throbbing heart to mine. for hand drouped over my shoulder and it drow My check toward it unconsciously. She leaned Her head upon my bosom and looked oil. Into the starry beauty of the sky.

There was no cloud upon the blue heaven, There was no cloud within our radiant hearts, and we were hence; in onch others love. And we were happy in such others love. Our burning thoughts were almost audible In the charmed stillness, yet we spoke no w Oh no! we spoke no word. It needed not The utterance of words on that sweet night, As we stood there alone beneath the tree That had so often thrown its waving veil
Of pleasant shadows over us before,
With not a single voice but the sweet sigh
Of nature's wandering zephyrs to undo The reigning solitude, and with no eyes
To watch us but bright angel eyes—I say
It needed not the utterance of words On that sweet night to 'ell the holy love
That had come down from heaven and taken up
Its dwelling place forever in our hearts.

Every-Day Life of Woman.

"QUICKLY. "Look you, I keep his house, and I wash, wring bake, scour, dress meat, and drink, make the beds, and do all mysell."
"SIMPLE. "Tis a great charge to come under one body's hand.\(\frac{1}{2}\).

Kind reader, it is no fancy sketch that I am going to give you. It is drawn from life in all its reality; and in every city, village, country town-and neighborhood, its truthfulness will be recogni, zed. It is the every day life of woman—woman in her domestic character—we intend portraying. Yes, woman, it is here, where thou art true to the nature thy Maker hath given thee, thou excellest, and art honored; long suffering, full of humble and generous affections, sacrificing thyself to the happiness of those thou lovest, and grateful to Heaven that of the two penalties the severest falls upon thee. Thy love is, indeed, the synosure of life; never wandering from the one point, never faltering, never failing.

She is intelligent, loves books, possesses a refined and delicate taste, and is in all points, well fitted to be the mistress of a cheerful, happy home. She becomes his women to engage in this reform—for I fear wife; is industrious, and ambitious to do as that many of you are deeply in the fault of much as she can toward a living. May be avarice—and show husbands that life can they are not very well off as to the things | be enjoyed more truly by the proper presof this world, and both are equally ambi- ervation of the health and beauty, accomenough to allow the woman of his love to gent, orderly children, neat houses, good ting toil. It is nothing but cook and bake. wash dishes, thrash about among pots and kettles, wash and iron, churn, pick up chips, draw water, and a thousand other things "too tedious to metion."

house he lives in, and something besides, takes his ease when he chooses, reads and improves his mind, and becomes important in community. But the cares of his faded, broken down wife know no relaxation .-The family enlarges, and she, poor woman, has enough to do without finding time to increase her stock of knowledge, or to er suffers to be run over without a word of children. It is, therefore, no fault of hers tics and habits of a doubtful tendency .-There is always the measles, the hoopingcough, worm fever, or summer complaint, or something of that sort, in the family; and bruising his knees, and cutting his finlittle, noisy, mischievous, yet beloved flock are safely tucked away for the night in trundle beds and cribs, how many stockhow many jackets out at the elbows, and trowsers out at the knees! What a variety of cross grained holes in frocks, and how many buttons, and hooks, and eyes off-all to sigh over, and be mended! The only wonder is, that the mother does not sink within this circle of everlasting drudgery, which deprives her of the privilege of relaxation for a day, and the time which she would gladly devote to the maternal education of her children. She is occupied, from morning till night, in one unending round of duties and cares-mis tress, mother, and maid of all work. Her mind, though craving knowledge, can not seek it; for she is generally too much fatigued by the exertions of the day to seek it after the noisy little group are out of the way, and she has done darning and patching. Husband comes in now, and reads from some book or newspaper. He wonders why she is so little interested, and, may be, very gently, hints at her deficiencies in this respect. Yes, amid all these cares and this drugdery, he would have her satisfied and happy, sit by his side like Klopstock's Metal "looking so still in his sweet face." In the morning as soon as the birds begin their songs, the little flock are out of bed. Then come washings and dressings; the busy mother needs twenty hands, since as many wants are poured in upon her distracted ears. It's "Mother, where's my jacket?" "Mother, I can't get the knot out of my shoe string," or "I've broke my shoe string;" "Mother, I want a pin;" "Mother, Ned is spatting me with soapsuds;" "Mother, mayn't I wear my pink dress or new apron?" By this time the baby wakes, and opens his infantile battery of screams. In scolding Ned-the naugh ty rogue, so full of fun and frolic-and helping the rest, and quieting the baby, the minutes fly. Husband comes in, with, "Goodness, wife ain't breakfast ready yet! It's ten minutes past eight. I've been vaiting for more than an hour." "You forgot that I have all the children o see to, and the baby is very fretful this morning," replied the wife.

Silenced but not convinced, the husband is quite as apt to take the newspaper and sit down, as he is to take the baby from the shades of arms of his oppressed and tender wife, so that she hurry his breakfast. When it is ready, and they are seated at the table, wife must, as usual, pour out the coffee with the baby in her arms, too much fatigued to enjoy her breakfast. "My dear, says husband, "it seems to me the coffee is not quite as clear as usual, the steak is a little too rare or overdone, or the hash is not seasoned quite right." Not that he means to complain; for he knows show desirous she is to please him, even to say a word intentionally to would her feelings, But these slight hints to an overtasked woman, amid her gentle but imperious demands, are often irritating to the feelings, and call out many a sharp, caustic reply, of which she repeats in five minutes after.

Thus many a woman breaks and sinks beneath the wear and tear of the frame and the affections. She rallies before the world, and "her children rice up and call her blessed," and she is blessed in conscious attempts to discharge her duty; but cares eat away at her heart; the day passes on her with new toils; the hight comes, and they are unfulfilled; she lies down in weariness, and rives with uncertainty; her smiles become languid and few, and her husband wonders at the gloominess of his home.— When he married, he thought the chosen of his heart his equal in intelligence, but now she is far his inferior Poor soul! I wonder she ever had courage to even think of a book-she who must care for body and soul, day and night; who must pray for, teach, guide, and rule her own household, while her busy hands and feet are ever active in giving meat in due season, and seeing to it that their garments wax not old.

Now, this is certainly wrong; and the foundation of all this wrong is principally in that avaricious spirit which makes the dollar the standard of respectability. The money expended for help in the household looks so large to some men, that, so long as their meals are cooked, their shirts, cravats and collars are in order; not a button off, their stockings darned, etc., they don't trouble themselves about the circumstances under which these things have been done. Their wives may do the most menial drudgery, toil early and late, if they do not complain too much, and become old, with-A young ma narrives at an age when he thinks ered, sallow, nervous, broken down women it time for him to marry and settle down. This attracted the Court's attention, and caused the speaker to halt.

"Mr. Sheriff, bring that belligerent into Court," said the judge. The sheriff obeyed, and brought in by the sleeve a liberal specimen of Nature's works in the shape of a man about six fee four inches in his brogans, not a bad face but indicative of an inordinate passion for fat beef and "busthead."

have published a brief work on Consumption, which contains an invaluable recipe for the cure of these prevalent diseases, even in their worst stages, when friends and physicians have given up all hopes. The hints on diet, dress, oxercise, &c., &c., are very valuable. The LUNG BALSAM prescribed in this work cures without the expensive aid of physicians or injurious use of patent medicines. In adopting this system of cure the patient knows what he is using—knows that he is not shortening his days by the use of anodynes or mercurials, which may seem to relieve but never cure. He knows when using this Life-saving Balsam, that he is taking mild, pleasant, efficacious remedies, such as Nature prescribes for the ills her children suffer. The ingredients composing the Lung Balsam are obtainable, (cheaply too.) wherever consumption exists, proving that every ill has its antidote. The subscriber respectfully informs the public that he has lately completed a TRIPLE POWER, which outrivals any other in use. It is made entirely of Iron, both Frame and Gearing. The Journals are Cast-Steel—its weight is 600 lbs. On trial it has proved itself capable of performing from 50 to 100 per cent. more work than other Powers with the same labor of the team. It is warranted to hold 8 horses.

I have also completed a combined THRESHER AND CLEANER, which is capable of Threshing and Cleaning from 300 to 500 bushels of wheat per day, with from 6 to 8 Horses, and an equal number of hands. 4 horses can thresh with it from 100 to 200 bushels per day of wheat, and 400 to 500 of oats. It is very convenient for those who follow Threshing, and for two-or more farmers to own in machine in use. The Machine stands on the wagon while threshing—the Power is loaded on the same wagon in moving—two horses are sufficient to move it; it will save enough labor in threshing time the field or by a stack as conveniently as in a barn. The cylinder and concave can readily be adjusted so as to thresh with equal facility both tough and dry grain. It is free from the complication and liability to get out of order of other machines of the kind, and of less cost—price $100,00.
