imore in 1844 and 1848, and believe their strict observance to be not only conducive to the prosperity, but essential to the preservation of the Union.

Resolved, That the Democratic party, in view of the present critical condition of the country, should ow, more than ever, resort to the principles of its glorious founders, as furnishing the safest and surest uides and landmarks; and that among the guiues and ianomarks; and that among those of primary importance in the existing position of public affairs, we may enumerate: a strict construction of the powers granted by the several States to the Federal Government under the Constitution of the United States, and a denial to Congress of all doubtful powers; a sacred regard for the

to the States respectively, and to the people; an absolute non-interference by the several States and their citizens with the domestic institutions of each other; and a rigid economy and strict accountabil other; and a rigid economy and since accommanding in the expenditure of the public money drawn from the pockets of the people by taxation, confineing the appropriations made by Congress to nationablects plainly authorized by the Constitution.

Resolved, That the corner stones of the Democratical Constitution and despite haid during with party were securely and deeply laid during reign of terror," by the immortal patriots and statesmen, Jefferson and Madison, in the Virginia and Kentucky resolutions, and in Mr. Madison's report; and that whenever the government departed from the spirit of these resolutions and this report, dans dissensions and injurious consequences to the ountry were the result.

Resolved, That the Democratic party is the true Union party of the whole country, and we recog-nize no other. We rejoice to witness that Demo-crats in other States, who disapproved the compro-mise measures of the last Congress, have, for the sake of the Union, resolved to acquiesce in them as a final settlement of the vexed and dangerous quesions arising out of domestic slavery; Democratic party throughout all the States, are now re-uniting in solid phalanx upon the principle that these measures must and shall be maintained and executed, and with the firm determination that the party shall be restored to its former ascendancy and power in the administration of the Federal Gov ernment.

Resolved, That the Democracy of Pennsylvania will maintain, with fidelity and energy, the faithful execution of the fugitive slave law; and that we ledge ourselves to exert our best efforts to secure pleage ourselves to exert our best efforts to secure the speedy repeal of such portions of the "State ob-struction law" as deny the use of our jails for the detention of fugitives from labor while awaiting their trial, or in any manner interfere with the con-stitutional rights of our sister States in reclaiming their property.

Resolved, That the Democracy of the old Key stone Commonwealth having deferred their claims to a Presidential candidate to the appeal of her sister States for more than half a century, do now, b an unprecedented majority, earnestly and energet-ically assert their strong and long-deferred right to the honor of furnishing a President for the Union, in the person of their fellow-citizen, James Buchanan. They have no second choice; and they firmly believe that, should he be nominated by the Democratic National Convention, he will receive a riumphant, old-fashioned Jackson majority in the

Resolved, That we present James Buchanan as our candidate for the Presidency, with the full confidence that the Democracy of our sister States will concede to the Keystone State the honor to which she has so long generously yielded. That the fame of our candidate, as a sound statesman and sealonof our candidate, as a sound statesman and zealous advocate of republican principles is not surpassed.

He is a consistent and uncompromising Democrat; an able defender of the Jeffersonian doctrine of State rights, a foe to the unconstitutional doctrine of centralization—the advocate of universal suffrage—the early, long tried and confidential friend and adviser of the immortal Jackson—the leading and successful opponent of dangerous national monied monopolie the supporter of the economical administration of government—the friend and promoter of agriculture and commerce, of domestic manufactures and The services of Mr. Buchanan in the cause of the party and of the country, are recorded in the hearts of the people, and we believe that, with the executive branch of the Government in his heads and institute would be accepted.

with the executive branch of the Government in his hands, equal justice would be awarded to all the great interests of the country, and our beloved Union be safe against the inroads of foreign aggres-sion, and the dangers of intestine commotion. Resolved, That this Convention has full confidence in the integrity and talents of the Delegates just selected to the Baltimore Convention, and we believe that they will triumphantly advocate the nomination of Pennsylvania before the Convention.

Resolved, That we congratulate our fellow citizens upon the successful termination of the late Gubernatorial contest; the election of his Excellency, William Bigler, as the Chief Magistrate of the Commonwealth, has secured to the people an able, enlightened, honest and economical administration of the government, and redeems our glori-ous old Commonwealth from the disgrace which has been brought upon her by the late reckless and extravagant administration; that for the personal and untiring exertions of Gov. Bigler to secure the and untiring exertions of yov. Digier to secure the ascendency of Democratic principles during the late canvass—for his eloquent and statesman-like discussion before the people, of the national issues, which made the late contest memorable and critical for the country, and which conduced to the glorcal for the country, and which conduced to the glorious result, the Democracy of Pennsylvania and of the United States owe him a debt of gratitude equally difficult to be estimated or discharged.

Resolved, That all vacancies that may exist in the delegation at Baltimore, now selected, shall be filled by a majority of the whole number there present, and that the said delegation shall have full power and authority among themselves to regulate
