time favored with banks, but these institutions have failed and gone out of existence, and I cannot perceive that such counties are less flourishing that they were when their respective banks were in full remembered, is not without its advantages. The people of such regions are perhaps fully rewarded for what they suffer in inconvenience, by the pro-tection they thus enjoy from the force of the com-mercial revulsions. What they lose at the time mercial revulsions. What they lose at the time of a bank expansion is more than made good to them by their escape from the full force of the contraction. A little reflection on the occurrences during the periods to which I have repeatedly made reference, will satisfy any one that this is no mere fanciful idea but a clear practical truth.

I have thus, gentlemen, performed what I regard as an imperative duty. Should subsequent events demonstrate that I have erred, I shall at least have the consolation to know that such error is of the head and not of the heart. WM. BIGLER. EXECUTIVE CHAMBER, Harrisburg, April 20, 1852. •

Maryland Institute

ANNUAL MEETING.—The fifth annual meeting of the Maryland Institute for the election of officer was held April 14th, and the attendance of the members was the largest ever yet gathered on a similar occasion. Joshua Vansant, Esq., was unan-imously re-elected President of the Institute; Wm. imously re-elected President of the Institute; Wh. Keigler and Adam Denmead were elected Vice Presidents after the first ballot; Sam'l. Sands, Esq., was re-elected Recording Secretary; Wm. Prescott Smith, Esq., Corresponding Secretary, and J. J. Clare, Esq., Treasurer—all without opposition—an honor to which their long and arduous labors in belief of the president of the second president honor to which their long and arduous labors in behalf of the Institute well entitled them.

The following gentlemen were then elected to the Board of Managers for the ensuing year—their names appearing in the order in which their votes numbered; the first nineteen named being elected on the first ballot, the next three on the second ballot, and the two last named on the third and last ballot. John H. Barnes and Wm. P. Dukehart, Esqs., were appointed tellers, assisted by Messrs. Geo. A. Lovering and John Rogers, ir. The seven names in ttalics are the newly elected members, the other seventeen having been re-elected: the other seventeen having been re-elected:

The above is a most excellent selection of officers The above is a most exceitent selection of olders—embracing a strong representation of all the best interests of the community, the mechanical, manufacturing and mercantile being particularly well reflected. The number of candidates was very large, and many excellent names were before the meeting, from which to make the selection.

Upon the announcement of the result of the balloting, Joshua Vansant, Esq., who has been elected President for four successive terms returned his acknowledgements for this renewed proof of the con knowledgements for this renewed proof of the confidence of the members, and followed in a brief but eloquent address, adverting to the past and present condition of the Institute, and the unparalled success which has attended its efforts in developing the ingenuity of our artizans.

The success of the Institute is, truly, a proud triumph to our city, and is the result of the judicious selection, by the members, of energetic, public spirited officers, who have ever proved themselves fully competent to merit the confidence of the public and advance the Institute to its present enviable standard of efficiency and usefulness.—Baltimore Argus.

The Maryland Institute has accomplished much. It has deservedly received the countenance and patronage, not only of its own State, but its magnificent exhibitions have been ornamented and promoted by very valuable contributions, and useful articles deposited, by some of the most enterprising Inventors of the Union. We have been assured by several who attended the Exhibition last November, that the officers of the Maryland Institute acted with much kindness and generosity towards the Depositors from other States; their articles were placed in the most conspicuous locations and the utmost attention and politeness were shown by each and every officer-and at the close of the Exhibition, a sumptuous banquet was prepared in the Hall, and given by the officers and managers to the Depositors. No exertion, expense, or enterprise was omitted to make the occasion one of extreme pleasure and satisfaction. The presence of many who had received worthy testimonials at the World's Fair, and their entertaining descriptions of the splendor of the Crystal Palace, together with their eloquent addresses in favor of the improvement and extension of the Mechanic Arts, and es pecially the prosperity of the Maryland Institute were conducive to the appreciation of the true in terests of the Institute, and elicited the heartiest demonstrations in its favor. The success of the last Maryland Institute Exhibition has surprised its most sanguine friends, and in the history of similar and kindred Institutions it has had no paralle in the esteem of the community. The enterprising spirit of its officers points unerringly to a brillian future. We are pleased to congratulate our Lancaster friends Messes. HENRY C. LOCHER, J. FRANKLIN REIGART, JOHN BAMBOROUGH, DAVID EPERLE LEVI SUMMY and GEORGE WINTERS, in having re' ceived handsome Medals and Diplomas for their useful Inventions deposited for competition at the Maryland Institute.
