MY SISTER SALLIE.

BY S. K. D.

I wish you knew our brown-eyed Sallie
With her hair so black and lips so red;
Whose ev'ry smile is a daring rally
To kiss her cheek 'ere the blush has fled.

I plague and tease, nor cease in vexation,
Till I force both a sob and a sigh,
Wishing naught but the gratification
Of seeing the tear-drop dim her eye.

But she is kind, and she is forgiving,
Loving me better for what I do—
And in a moment forgets the teasing
That caus'd her eye to sparkle with dew.

There's richness in her soft, musical voice,
When her more than merry laugh rings out;
I gaze with pride on her beautiful face
When darkling 'neath a frown or a pout.

She's learned to lisp her morning prayer,
And nightly raises her voice to God—
Sweetly asking in tones of love and faith,
Guidance at home—protection abroad.

Men and Women Now-a-days.

Somebody is reporting for the Boston Journal certain speeches of "Father Langley," who is a very sensible old gentleman. The following is his opinion of the present generation:—

"Failed, has he! I wonder they don't all fail! For what with the extravagance and good-for-nothingness of the men and women now-a-days, where is it all to end? Call themselves the "Sons of the Pilgrims" do they? I wish to mercy their old grandfathers could see them? They were true grit—real hearts of oak—but these popinjays are nothing in the world but veneering! When I was a boy; it used to be the fashion for boys to be apprenticed till they larnt their trade; but now, they are all bosses! They ain't no boys now-a-days! They set up for themselves as soon as they are weaned; know enough at sight more than their fathers and grandfathers—you can't tell them anything—they know it all! Their fathers sweated and tugged in the corn field at the tail of a plow, or else over an anvil; but they can't do it! They are far too grand to dirty their fingers! They must wear fine cloth, and shirt collars up to their ears—be made into lawyers; larn doctoring; set themselves up as preachers, telling us we ought to do this or that; or else get behind a counter to measure off ribbin and tape! Smart work for two-fisted men! MEN, did I say? They ain't worth mor'n half men! If we go on at this rate, the race will run out by another generation—we shan't have nothing but a mixture of coxcomb and monkey! The women, too, are no better—it is just even. They are brought up good-for-nothing under the sun, but to put in a buffet! When I was a boy, it wasn't so—the spinning-wheel stood in the kitchen, and the dye-tub in the corner! They were put to work as soon as they could walk; they didn't have no nursery-maid to run after them; their mothers warn't ashamed to tend their own babies! They could sew on a patch, and rock the cradle beside. The gals were worth something in those times, they could spin and weave woolen, linsey-woolsey, red and blue, and wear it, too, after it was done. They could eat bean-porridge with a pewter spoon, and they were enough-sight happier, and better suited, than the gals are now, with their silk gowns, their French messes, and silver forks; yawning and moping about; silly, pale-face things, with nothing to do!—SET THEM TO WORK! Set them to work! Put them at it early! Idleness is the Devil's foreman; and no chain is so strong, as the iron chain of habit! Watts was nobody's fool, I can tell you. He knew what was what! Folks don't stand still here in this world; they are going one way or t'other.—If they ain't drawing the sled up hill, they'll be sliding down! Adam was a farmer, and Eve hadn't no "Irish son," nor "nigger wench," to wait upon her! What do these popinjays say to that? Ashamed of the old folks. I'll warrant! Adam wasn't nobody—Eve wasn't nobody, they know it all!

But they can't work—they are so delicate—they are "so weekly!" What has made them weakly?—Send off your chamber-maids, your cooks, your washer women; and set your own gals about it!—It made smart women of their granmothers, if the old blood ain't run out, they be good for something yet.

It used to be the fashion to be honest; if a man got in debt, he tried to pay; if he didn't, public opinion set a mark upon him; but it ain't so now, he tries not to pay; he'll lie, cheat and steal; (for what better is it than stealing;) and the one that can cheat the fastest is the best fellow! It is astonishing how slippery these fellows are! Slip through the smallest holes—don't make no more of it than a weasel! Just as soon think of catching a flea napping, as one of them! They drive fast teams without bit or curb; buy all they can; pay for as little as possible; pocket all they can carry; then fail; make a smash; snap their fingers at their creditors; go to Californy, or to grass; nobody knows where; and begin again! Good gracious, if some of these fellows lived forty years ago, the'd have clapped them in a prison and shaved their heads!

☞ Alderman Bangs remarked to his wife, one day, "I can't imagine why my whiskers turn grey so much sooner than the hair on my head." "Oh la," said Mrs. Bangs, "it is because you have worked so much harder with your jaws than your brains.'

☞ Squeezing the wrist is said to be a certain remedy for hiccough. This mode of cure will be quite popular among the ladies, who will not believe the cure efficacious unless it is squeezed by a gentleman.

The Fat of the Land.—The Albany Dutchman defines this term, as being girls whom you have to hug twice to make a complete circle of their waist. Let those girls get hold of the calumniator and they'll make him one of the "lean-kind."

A Thrilling Sketch.

AN ADVENTURE IN A BARBER'S SHOP.

In the month of October, 1826, my vessel was lying at Mobile. I went ashore one bright morning, to do some business with the house to which I was consigned, and as I passed along the street, it occurred to me that I might as well have a beard of a week's growth reaped before I presented myself at the counting room. I stepped into a barber's shop and told the barber to proceed.

He was a bright mulatto, a good-looking young fellow, not more than two and twenty years of age, it appeared. His eyes were large, black and unusually lustrous. His manner at first was quiet and respectful. I thought he was a long while lathering my face, and I told him he must have bought his soap at wholesale price. Laughing, he replied that mine was a long beard, and that he knew what he was about.

"Are you the boss here, my man?" I asked.

"Yes, he answered, "my master set me up, and I pay him twenty dollars a month for my time."

"That is a good interest on the capital invested," I remarked; "can you pay your rent and live on the balance of your savings?"

"Oh, yes! and lay up something beside. Some times I receive thirty bits a day."

"Then I suppose you will buy your freedom one of these days."

"As for that he replied, I care but little. I have all the liberty I want, and enjoy myself as I go along."

By this time he laid down the brush, and commenced running his razor over the strop, looking at the blade every time he drew it across the leather. His hand trembled a little, and his eyes absolutely burned like coals of fire. I did not feel uneasy, but I could not avoid watching him closely.

At last he commenced shaving me. My head being thrown back, I was able to keep my eyes fixed directly on his own. Why I did so, I cannot tell; certainly I apprehended nothing, but I did not remove my gaze for a single instant while the razor was passing over my neck and throat. He seemed to grow more and more uneasy; his eyes were as bright, but not so steady as when I first observed them. He could not meet my fixed and deliberate look. As he commenced shaving my chin he said abruptly—

"Barbers handle a deadly weapon, sir."

"True enough, my man," I replied, "but you handle yours skilfully, although I notice that your hands shake a little."

"That's nothing sir—I can shave just as well.—My hand shakes because I did not have much sleep last night. But I was thinking just now, he added, with a laugh, "how easy it would be to cut your throat."

"Very likely," I replied, laughing in return, but looking sternly at him—"very likely, yet I would not advise you to try the experiment."

Nothing more was said. He soon finished, and I arose from the chair just as an elderly gentleman was entering the shop. The last comer divested himself of his coat and cravat, and took the seat I had vacated.

I went to the glass, which did not reflect the chair, to arrange my collar. Certainly I had not stood before it a single moment, when I heard something like a suppressed shriek, a gurgling, horrible sound, that made my blood run cold. I turned—there sat the unfortunate gentleman covered with blood, his throat cut from ear to ear, and the barber, a raving maniac, dashing the razor with tremendous violence in the mangled neck.

On the instant the man's eye caught mine, the razor dropped from his hand, and he fell down in a fit. I rushed towards the door and called for assistance.

The unfortunate man was dead before we could reach the chair.

We secured the barber, who I subsequently learned, had been drinking deeply the night before, and was laboring under mania potu. His fate I never heard.

Premature Burial.

The Albany Register, in the course of an article on this subject, relates the following instance, of which the editor was perfectly cognizant:—

Some years ago, we were perfectly cognizant to an occurrence of this kind, which was of the most heart-rending character. The wife of a gentleman was taken suddenly ill in church, and was carried to her home in a state of syncope. In a few hours she partially recovered, but immediately relapsed, and never again showed any signs of consciousness. She lay in this condition nearly two days, baffling the skill of the physicians, and then, as it was thought, and as there was almost every reason to believe, died. No signs of breathing could be detected, the limbs became rigid and cold, and the eyes remained open with the fixed and glassy stare of death; BUT there was no change in the color of the skin. This was the only reason in the world for supposing that dissolution had not taken place.—The poor bereaved husband, almost frantic at the loss of the young and beautiful wife whom he almost idolized, clung with desperation to the hope limned in her face, and long resisted the unanimous decision of the physicians, that she was certainly dead. They told him, what is doubtless true, that it sometimes, though very rarely, happens, that there is no discoloration for days and even weeks after dissolution has taken place. But still he resisted, and it was not until three days had passed without the faintest signal of change or sign of life, that he finally gave up and suffered the burial to take place. She was entombed in a vault. Months passed. A cemetry having been laid out, the husband purchased and beautifidd a lot, erected an elegant monument in it, and when all was ready, superintended the removal of the body of his wife from the vault to its final resting place. When the vault was opened he remembered the circumstances of her death, above detailed, and a desire suddenly seized him to once more behold the corpse. By his direction the coffin lid was removed. The spectacle which presented itself was inconceivably horrible, for it showed that she had been buried alive. She had turned quite over upon her side, she had clutched her nails into the coffin until her fingers had bled, portions of her grave clothes were torn, and in her horrible struggles she had contrived to carry her hand to her head, and had plucked from it a mass of hair, with portions of the cap that covered it!

The poor man never recovered from the shock of that awful spectacle. He was borne away senseless, and for the rest of his weary life was an utterly broken and miserable being.

LETTERS FROM BAYARD TAYLOR.—The last arrivals from Europe brought the New-York Tribune fresh advices from BAYARD TAYLOR. He had ascended the White Nile five hundred miles above Khartoum into the country of the Shilook tribe of negroes, the most savage people he has found on his journey. Among them he had one or two dangerous adventures, but came off safe and sound with the loss of some trifling articles of apparel. He had returned to Khartoum, from which place he was meditating a speedy departure, though by what route he had not yet decided. After a month or two spent in that part of Central Africa, he had learned all that was possible in a short residence of its peculiarities, and felt himself warned by the approaching heat of the season to be upon the move. Dr. KNOBLECHER'S expedition to the sources of the Nile will not leave Khartoum till November next, and however gladly TAYLOR would accompany it, he could not think of remaining for months in that climate, on purpose. The time passed in Khartoum has, he writes, been full of instruction and amusement. His residence has been with Dr. REITZ the Austrian Consul for Central Africa, the first European diplomatic agent ever sent into those regions. Of this gentleman's activity in his office, and ready kindness for persons of all nations whom he has a chance of serveing we have, in the German journals, the best testimony, in addition to the grateful assurance of our friend. The pets of Dr. REITZ's household are rather peculiar; they are a large lioness and a leopard; the former, as TAYLOR says, was quite docile and sportive; one of her tricks was to take his leg in her mouth by way of morning salutation; both she and the leopard were as playful as dogs. The people of the country are spoken of as kindly and docile. The men, TAYLOR says, are large and splendid fellows, but the women are perfectly hideous.

☞ Bacon says his mother was so fond of walloping the family, that, if all the children had been wash tubs, there would not have been a whole bottom in the house."

Terrible Disaster.

LOSS OF 454 LIVES—WONDERFUL DISCIPLINE OF THE BRITISH TROOPS.—Another terrible disaster has happened at sea. At 2 o'clock in the morning of the 26th of February, her majesty's steamer, the Birkenhead, was wrecked between two and three miles from the shore of Southern Africa. The exact spot at which the calamity happened was Point Danger. Off this point she struck upon a reef of sunken rocks. The ship was steaming eight and a half knots at the time. The water was smooth, and the sky serene, but the speed at which the vessel was passing through the water proved her destruction. The rock penetrated through her bottom just at the foremast, and in twenty minutes time were a few floating spars and a few miserable creatures clinging to them, and this was all that remained of the Birkenhead. Of 638 persons who had left Simon's Bay in the gallant ship but a few hours before, only 184 remain to tell the tale. No less than 454 Englishmen have come to so lamentable an end.

From the moment the ship struck, all appears to have been done that human courage or coolness could effect. The soldiers were mustered on the afterdeck. The instinct of discipline was stronger even than the instinct of life. The men fell into place as coolly as on the parade ground. They were told-off into reliefs, and sent—some to the chainpumps, some to the paddle box boats. Capt. Wright, of the ninety-first regiment, who survives to relate the dreadful scene, tells us:

Every man did as he was driected, and there was not a cry or murmur among them until the vessel made her final plunge. I could not name any individual officer, who did more than another. All received their orders, and had them carried out as if the men were embarking, instead of going to the bottom; there was only this difference—that I never saw any embarkation conducted with so little noise and confusion.

Poor fellows! Had they died in battle-field, and in their country's cause, their fate would have excited less poignant regret; but there is something inexpressibly touching in the quiet, unflinching resolution of so many brave hearts struggling manfully to the last against an inevitable disaster. It is gratifying, also, to find that the women and children were all saved. They had been quietly collected under the poop awning, and were as quietly got over the ship's side, and passed into the cutter.—The boat stood off about 150 yards from the ill-starred Birkenhead, and all were saved. There is not the name of a single woman or child upon the list of persons who perished.

Never was destruction more sudden or more complete. Within fifteen minutes after the vessel struck, the bow broke short off. Five minutes more elapsed, and the hull of the vessel went in two, cross ways, just abaft the engine room. The stern part of the vessel immediately surged, filled, and went down. The only hope of the survivors lay in the maintopmast and maintopsail-yard, which showed above water. There were some fragments of the forecastle deck still floating; there were a few spars, and drift-wood. About forty-five people clung to the yard, and after remaining there until 2 o'clock the following afternoon, were picked off by the Lioness, a schooner which was providentially at hand. Captain Wright asserts, that of the 200 persons, more or less, who were clinging to the drift wood when he got away, nearly every man might have been saved, had one of the ship's boats done her duty. Into this boat the assistant surgeon had got, with eight men. They immediately pulled away, and landed about 15 miles from the vessel.

PHILOSOPHY OF KISSING.—A western editor, who is a bachelor, writes as follows upon the glorious art of kissing:

"The sweetness of kissing depends with us altogether on the slyness of the thing. Take our word for it, the stolen draughts are most delicious. We would rather be 'cut up into cat-fish bait' than to kiss a girl in company. Besides, there is great danger in the promiscuous kissing which is indulged in at parties. Ten to one if your lips do not at the very moment after they have been revelling in the most ecstatic enjoyment, come pop upon those of some old girl, so sour that you cannot get the taste of the acid out of your mouth for a week. No, no! kissing in public is not the way to manage it; it destroys the reverence with which man delights to wrap the female sex, and none but a bungler will resort to it. If you want to enjoy a kiss in all its raciness—a kiss at once delicate, air, and spirituelle, yet one that will cause every pulse in your body to thrill with ecstacy—get your little charmer into a sofa before a cosy fire, of a freezing night—steal your arm around her waist—take her hand gently in your own—and then draw her tenderly towards you, "kiss her a long, sweet kiss, as if you were a bee sucking honey from a flower." There's true kissing for you."

YOUNG MEN

especially, who have become the victims of Solitary Vices, that dreadful and destructive habit which annually sweep to an untimely grave thousands o young men of the most exalted talents and brilliant intellect, who might otherwise have entranced listening Senates with the thunders of eloquence, or waked to ecstacy the living tyre, may call with full confidence.

MARRIAGE.

Married persons, or those contemplating marriage being aware of physical weakness, should immediately consult Dr. J. and be restored to perfect health.

OFFICE, No. 7, South FREDERICK Street, BALTIMORE, Md., on the left hand side, going from Baltimore street, 7 doors from the corner.—Be particular in observing the name and number or you will mistake the place.

DR. JOHNSTON,

Member of the Royal College of Surgeons, London, Graduate from one of the most eminent, Colleges of the United States and the greater part of whose life has been spent in the Hospitals of London, Paris, Philadelphia, and elsewhere, has affected some of the most astonishing cures that were ever known. Many troubled with ringing in the ears and head when asleep, great nervousness, being alarmed at sudden sounds, and bashfulness, with frequent blushing, attended, sometimes, with derangement of mind, were cured immediately.

TAKE PARTICULAR NOTICE.

Dr. J. addresses all those who have injured themselves by private and improper indulgencies, that secret and solitary habits, which ruin both body and mind, unfitting them for either business or society.

These are some of the sad and melancholy effects produced by early habits of youth, viz: Weakness of the back and limbs, Pains in the head, Dimness of Sight,
