Sunshine and Shadows.

BY FINLEY JOHNSON.

Within this changing world of ours Are griefs and pleasures blended; And bright and sunny days are oft By darker ones attended. And therefore man should never grieve,
Though overcast with sorrow;
For though the sun shall be obscured;
'Twill brightly shine to-morrow.

Man should not weep though round his heart But with an iron nerve he should

Gaze on the tempest proidly;
For raging storms shall surely cease,
And bring serener weather;
The sun again shall shed its light,
And all be peace together. Then when dark clouds obscure thy path,

And storms are loudly roaring; Let thy sad heart on wings of faith, Still up, still up, be soaring. Then shall the sun burst through the clouds, And change thy grief and sadness;
Then shall Hope's rainbow round thy heart.
Afford the joy and sadness.

> The Seasons. BY W. C. BENNETT.

A blue-eyed child that sits among the noon, O'erhung with laburnum's drooping sprays, Singing her little songs, while softly round Along the grass the chequered sunshine plays.

All beauty that is thronged in womanhood, Pacing a summer garden's fountained walks, That stoops to smooth a glossy spaniel down To hide her blushing cheek from one who talks. A happy mother with her fair faced girls, In whose sweet Spring again her youth she sees. With shout and dance and laugh and bound and song, Stripping an Autumn orchard's laden trees. An aged woman in a wintry room—

Frost on the pane, without the whirling snowReading old letters of her far-off youth,
Of sorrows past and joys of long ago.

Violence to Woman.

The sentiment of Tobin, put into the mouth the Duke Aranza, in the "Honey Moon,"-"He who would lay his hand upon a woman, Save in the way of kindness, is a wretch, Whom 'twas base flattery to call a coward," has been echoed with applause by all the civilized

Speaking of this passage, a certain actress was once playing Juliana to the Duke Aranza of her husband, who was in the habit of beating her.—
The lady watched eagerly for her husband's delivery of the passage above quoted, wishing to hear the condemnation of his conduct from his own lips. But in coming to the sentence, he adroitly substituted the following:

He who can lay his hand upon a woman,
Save in the way of chastisement, is a wretch, Whom 'twere base flattery to call a coward. It is said that a Russian wife feels very seriously aggrieved if her husband neglects to beat her at least once a day, fancying he is growing indiffer ent if the diurnal infliction is discontinued. The scandalous chronicle asserts that a blow was the cause of the separation between Bulwer and his wife. When he came home after his signal failure in Parliament, the lady, instead of sympathizing with his misfortune, taunted him with his want of success. In a moment of passion, he raised his hand and struck her. Hincellie Lachnime. Very different was the conduct of Lord Castle-

-perhaps less generally known. This man the prime minister of England, though hated and denounced by the liberals, yet stood at the head of the British Government, and enjoyed the full confidence of his sovereign and the Tory party. His suicide has generally been attributed to the despair which the denunciation of his conduct by the elo quent friends of liberty inspired. But it was not. Against the grouns of Ireland, against the course of France, against the anathemas of Europe, his of France, against the anathemas of Europe, his heart was steeled and proof. We must look elsewhere for the solution of the riddle of his suicide. In his old age, Lord Castlereagh espoused a beautiful lady, young enough to be his daughter. The incongruity of their union soon inspired him with doubts and suspicions. He thought it impossible that he could fix the attentions of his wife, and smalls impossible that the total departments of the suppossible that the could remain insensible. equally impossible that she could remain insensible to the attention of the young men. Thinking the Duke of Cambridge not indifferent to her; he forbade her receiving him, and absurd prohibition which it was impossible for her to obey.

One evening, Lord Castlereagh, on entering his wife's salooon, felt convinced that she had not been entirely alone, and asked if she had received no visiter. Terrified at his earnestness, Lady Castle-reagh was weak enough to resort to a falsehood. t unluckily, a riding whip, with the arms of the uke of Cambridge, was lying on the arm chair. Castlereagh caught it up and raised it against his wife. "But here," says the narrator of the oc-currence, "his wrath halted. His fury had carried him so far that he was at once ashamed of it. It was the hand of a ruffian that was lifted-the hand of a gentleman descended lightly, and opened tremblingly, ta drop the odious weapon, that had mena-ced a woman on the floor," Without uttering a word, Lord Castlereagh drove to the Parliament and took his seat. A violent invective launched against the ministry by one of the oppos bers, found him, commonly so prompt and fiery in debate, silent and motionless. From the Parlie ment he went to the royal levee, and there the strangeness of his conduct was noticed. Returning strangeness of his conduct was noticed. Returning home his mind disordered by remorse for his ungentlemanly action, he seized a snarp penknife, and the hand raised against a woman terminated his own

THE TRUE GENTLEMAN.—He is a true gentleman who adds most manhood to his gentility; he depends not upon his riches, not upon the fineness of his cloth, but upon his intellect, his honesty and his truth. You may always recognise him. Though he may wear different aspects—as the painter, the poet, the sailor, the pill-vender, the lawyer—the man rises superior to all circumstances. You never think of the true man, but of the man himself You never eat his dinners and think but of the viands the table, not where the roast beef and decanter are placed. He is alwayes true to others and to him -earnest in all his manly purposes. Is he rich —he has no more or less dignity than were he poor.

Kossuth—the poor editor in Budah Pesth, the hated of the government, the loved of the poor—was none the less a gentleman than when he held us all en-raptured with his eloquence, with this fine land his forum, and the stars of America for his sounding board. The true gentleman treats all men as it they were his equals; his manners are for the poor as well as for the rich, and those manners well proportioned for all men. One day the elder Adams was driving a southern gentleman through Quincy in a gig. On the road he met a negro, who raised his hat and bowed to the gentleman. The President returned dent returned the salute, much to the horror of his companion, who remarked that he never expected to see such an act. "Why not," answered the Pres ident, "the man bowed and spoke first; would you have me exibit less manners than a negro?" Thus is it always with the true gentleman, and the true lady is but a sweeter copy of the same thing—a diamond from the same mine, but a purer, brighter gem, worthy of being borne upon the breast of the Affecting Anecdote.

On one of the many bridges in Ghent, stand two large brazen images of father and son, who obtained this distinguished mark of their fellow-citizens, by the following incidents:

"Both father and son, were for some offence against the State, condemned to die. Some favorable circumstances appearing on the side of the son he was granted a remission of his share of the sentence, under certain provisions; in short, he was offered a pardon, on the most cruel and barbarous condition that sure natered into the mind of even tered a parton, on the most cruet and out of even condition that ever entered into the mind of even monkish barbarity; namely, that he would become the executioner of his father! He at first resolutely refused to preserve his life by means so fatal and defestable. This is not to be wondered at; for I hope for the honor of our nature, that there are but fond father, who represented to him, that at all events, his (the father's life) life was forfeited, and events, his (the lather's life) life was forfeited, and that it would be the greatest possible consolation to him in his last moments, to think, that in his death, he was the instrument of his son's preservation.he was the instrument of his son's preservation.—
The youth consented to adopt the horrible means of recovering his life and liberty; he litted the axe—but, as it was about to fall, his arm sunk nerveless, and the axe dropped from his hand—Had he as many lives as hairs, he could have yielded them all one after another, rather than again conceive, much less perpetrate such an act. everything vanished before the dearer interests of filial affection—he fell upon his father's neck, and embracing him, triumphantly, "My father! my lather! we will die together!" and then called for nother executioner to fulfil the sentence of the Hard must their hearts indeed be, bereft of every sentiment of virtue, every sensation of homanity, who could stand insensible spectators of such a scene. A sudden appeal of involuntary applause, mixed with groans and sighs, rent the air. The mixed with groans and sighs, rent the air. execution was suspended; and, on a simple repre-sentation of the transaction, both were pardoned, high rewards and honors were conferred on the son; and, finally those two admirable brazen images were raised to commemorate a transaction so hon-orable to human nature, and transmit it for the instruction and emulation of posterity. The statue represents the son in the very act of letting fall the

The Good Wife.

The power of a wife for good or for evil is irresistible. Home must be the seat of happiness, or it must be forever unknown. A good wife is to a man wisdom and courage, and strength and endurance. A bad one is contusion, weakness, discom-fiture, and despair. No condition is hopeless, while the wife possesses firmness, decision and economy. There is no outward prosperity which can counteract indolence, extravagance and folly at home.— No spirit can long endure bad domestic influence. Man is strong, but his heart is not adamant. He delights in enterprise and action; but to sustain him, he needs a tranquil mind and a whole heart. He expends his whole moral force in the conflicts of the world. To recover his equanimity and composure, home must be to him a place of repose, of peace, of cheerfulness, of comfort, and his soul renews its strength again, and goes forth with fres rigor to encounter the labor and the troubles of the world. But if at home he finds no rest, and these is met with bad temper, sullenness, or gloom, o assailed by discontent, or complaint, or reproaches, the heart breaks, the spirits are cru-hed, hope van-ishes, and the man sinks into despair.

FENCES-On page 615 of the Pamphlet Laws for 1851, we find the following stringent act passed by the legislature, in relation to fences. Persons in the habit of taking down rails from fences for the purpose of crossing, and then leaving them down, had better beware.

"That if any person or persons from and after the passage of this act shall maliciously o voluntarily break down any post and rail or other ience put up for the enclosure of lands, and carry away, break, or destroy any post, rail, or othe material of which such fence was built within this Commonwealth, every person or persons so offending, and being legally convicted before any justice of the peace or alderman within this Commonwealth, shall for every such offence forfeit and pay the sum of ten dollars, one half thereof to be paid to the informer and the other half to the support of the poor of such county, township, borough, or ward where the offence has been committed, together with costs of prosecution; and in default of payment, such person or persons shall be imprisoned in the county jail not exceeding thirty days for the first offence, and sixty days for thirty days for the first offence, and sixty days for the second: Provided, That either of the parties shall have the right of appeal in the same manner are in shall have the right of appeal in the same manner.

IT The Eclipse is the name of a new steam packet-a'monster in size, but a paragon in beauty which has just commenced running between N Orleans and Louisvile:

"She is 363 feet long on deck, with an extreme width of 76 feet, and 9 feet depth of hold. She has two engines with cylinders 36 inches in diameter and 11 feet stroke. She also has two small engines for supplying the boilers with water, and two other small engines for hoisting freight. She has eight forty-two inch boilers 323 feet long, seven vlinder boilers 12 inches in diameter and 35 feet ng, and one other boiler 38 inches in diameter and 14 feet long. She works a forty two-feet wheel in diameter, with buckets 14 feet in length and 26 inches wide. Her furniture and appointments are of the most costly and elegant kind. Each state-room is elegantly fitted up, and contains marble wash-stand, a wardrobe, and all the coneniences for washing from head to foot. Each berth contains a fine spring mattress, with linen sheetings, &c. There are also two life-preservers in each state room. The nursery is beautifully ar ranged and finished, with bath room for the ladies There are also two bath rooms for gentlemen, so rranged as to afford warm or cold baths or shower baths. Her entire cost is estimated at $133,000

Quakerism is favorable to longevity, it eems. According to late English census returns, the average age attained by members of this peaceful sect in Great Britain, is fifty-one years, two months and twenty-one days. Half of the population of the country, as is seen by the same returns, die before reaching the age of twenty-one, and the average duration of human life in the world, is but thirty-three years; Quakers, therefore, live a third longer than the rest of us. The reasons are obvious enough. Quakers are temperate and prudent, are seldom in a hurry, and never in a passion.— Quakers in the very midst of the week's business (on Wednesday morning.) retire from the world, and spend an hour or two in silent meditation at the meeting house. Quakers are diligent; they love me another, and the fear of want does not corrode one another, and the lear of want does not corrode their minds. The journey of life to them is a walk of peaceful meditation. They neither suffer nor enjoy intensely, but preserve a composed demeanor always. Is it surprising that their days should be

COTTON CULTURE EXTENDING WESTWARDLY .-COTTON CULTURE EXTENDING WESTWARDLE.—
A correspondent, writing from Cannelton, Indiana, suggested that "the year is not very far distant when a single state (Arkansas) will give a yearly product of three million bales of cotton, if its price olds up to an average of seven cents per pound This year the product of many plantations on the Mississippi river, and on the side of Memphis, was s high as 3000 pounds of seed cotton. Arkansas as several millions of acres of the very best cotton unds, that will be protected from overflow in a few ears. The very low price and great fertility of hese lands will bring them into market and use. Cotton from that district will be taken up, and not own stream. It will be taken to eastern mills theaper by the Ohio river, than by the gulf and cean route. Whether eastern machinery and operatives will meet half way, remains to be seen."

THE VERNAL SEASON.—The snow at the Cats-The SEANAL SEASON.—The snow at the Cats-kill Mountain House on Wednesday, April 28, was three feet deep, and it was with the utmost diffi-culty a carriage and horses ascended the mountain, owing to the deep snow drifts. From the river the range has the appearance of mid-winter.

TAKE PARTICULAR NOTICE. TAKE PARTICULAR NUTICE.

Dr. J. addresses all those who have injured themselves by private and improper indulgencies, that secret and solitary habits, which ruin both body and mind, unfitting them for either business or society.

or society.

These are some of the sad and melancholy ef-These are some of the sad and melancholy effects produced by early habits of youth, viz: Weakness of the back and limbs, Pains in the head, Dimness of Sight, Loss of Muscular Power, Palpitation of the Heart, Dyspepsia, Nervous Irrivability, Derangement of the Digestive Functions, General Debility, Symptoms of Consumption, &c. Mentally.—The fearful effects on the mind are much to be dreaded: Loss of Memory, Confusion of Ideas, Depression of Sprins, Evil of Foreboding, Aversion of Society, Self Distrust, Love of Solitude, Timidity, &c., are some of the evils produced.

NERVOUS DEBILITY.

Weakness of the system, Nervous Debility and prenature decay generally arises from the destructive habit of youth, that solitary practice so fatal to the healthful existence of man, and it is the young who are the most apt to become its Victims from an ignorance of the dangers to which they subject themselves. Parents and Guardians are often misled with respect to the cause or source of disease in their sons and wards. Alas! how often do they ascribe to other causes the wasting of the frame, Palpitation of the Heart, Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Derangement of the Nervous System. Cough and Symptoms of Consumption, also those serious Mental effects, such as loss of Memory, Depression of Spirits or peculiar fits of Melancholy, when the truth is they have been caused by indulging Pernicious but alluring practices, destructive to both Body and Mind. Thus are swept from existence thousands who might have been of use to their country, a pleasure to their friends, an ornament to society. NERVOUS DEBILITY.

WEAKNES OF THE ORGANS immediately cured and full vigor restored.

Oh, how hoppy have hundreds of misguided youths been made, who have been suddenly restored to health from the devastations of those terrific maladies which result from indiscretion. Such persons, before contemplating MARRIAGE, should reflect that a sound mind and body are the most necessary requisites to promote connubral happiness. Indeed, without this, the journey throlife becomes a weary pilgrimage; the prospect hourly darkens to the view; the mind becomes shadowed with despair, and filled with the melancholy reflection that the happiness of another becomes blighted with our own. Let no talse delicacy prevent you, but apply immediately.
