An Epitaph.

A farmer named Keezle hired a fellow who had a knack at poetry-making to write his epitaph. He was to give the poet a dinner and supper for the job. After the first meal, he sat down and began thus :---

"There was a man who died of late, For whom angels did impatient wait, With outstretched arms and wings of love, To wath him to the realms above."

Keezle was much pleased with this, and begged the writer to go on : but he declined finishing the epitaph until he had had the supper. That finished he put on his coat, and then wound up the verse in these words :---

"But while they disputed for the prize, Still hovering round the lower skies, In slipped the devil, like a weazle, wn to h-11 he kicked old Keezle." After which he took took to his heels, and Keezie after him with a horsewhip.

The Lesson.

A TALE OF DOMESTIC LIFE. Three young ladies were seated in a rich apart-ment. They were Misses Amanda and Emma Ellis and their cousin, Delilah Carlton. The latter was engaged in the womanly occupation of sewing; the two former in discussing, critically, a ball at which all three had been present the preceding engine evening. "I don't like that Mr. Barton at all," said Miss Amanda, continuing the conversation. "Nor me either," responded Miss Emma who was the eldest. "And why not, cousin," said Delilah, " I am sure he is handsome enough, is he not?"

"Yes; but-" "But what coz?" said she to Emma, who had spoken last. "Surely his manners are pleasing and his language polished, without affectation." 'Yes, yes, but for all that be is vulgar, said Em-ma, petishly, vulgar in his ideas.' 'Yulgar!' exclaimed Delilah, 'you must allow me again to differ from you, coz,' she continued, looking into her cousin's face with a winning smile, 'I think he is quite refined, more so than Mr Rice or Mr Brown and many of the other gentlemen." Only think of comparing Mr. Barton with Mr. Brown, the Gentleman!' exclaimed Miss Amanda Ellis
