From the Ohio Cultivator Autumn and Winter. BY FRANCES GAGE.

The Autumn; going with its beauty so glowing, And Winter o'er all things is casting its pall: The rose tree is fading, no longer 'tis shading The arbor of love or the bright water fall.

The dahlias are lopping, the ripe fruit is dropping. The corn-leaves are withered and dry on the stalk The ring-dove is sighing, the grasshopper dying, The fire-fly no longer enlivens the walk. The forests are changing, the wild birds are ranging, To hunt out a hole where the skies are more clear; The stream deeply flowing, the chilly winds blow ing, And tell us that Winter, cold Winter is near. Summer's sweets while we're tasting, away all are hasting The days of the peach and the melon are o'er;

Then let us be trying while Autumn is dying, To lay up for Winter a plentiful store. Work freer and harder, fill the barn and the larder, Then give to old Winter, when'er he shall come, A welcome most willing; we'll heed not his chilling, f there's warmth round the hearth-stone and plenty at home. But while we are cheerful—no cause to be tearful Let us think of the children of Sorrow and Wrong, And give from our treasure, with no stinted meas-

A TRUE STORY.

I was on my way to P——, in the fall of s—; it was towards the cold evenings in the first all month, when my horse stopped suddenly before respectable house, about four miles from N——. There was something strange and remarkable in his action of my horse, nor would he move a step n spite of all my exertions to move him on.

I determined to gratify this whim, and at the ame time, a strange presentiment which came over me, a kind of supernatural teeling indescriba ble, seemed to urge me to enter. Having knocked and requested to be conducted to the lady or gen-tleman of the house, I was ushered into a neat sitting-room, where sat a beautiful girl, about twenty years of age. She rose at by entrance, and seem-little surprised at the appearance of a perfect

"We are not," she replied, "well guarded, 'tis true but in this part of the country we have little to tear from robbers, for we have never heard of any being hear us; we are surrounded by good neighbors, and filatter myself we are at peace with them. But this evening, in consequence of my father's absence, I feel unusually lonesome; and if, it were not bordering on the superstitions, I, might leason as you have, and say I consent to your staying; for simi far feelings had been mine ere you arrived, from what cause I cannot imagine.

The evening passed delightfully away; my hostess was intelligent and lovely; the hours flew so quick that on looking at my watch, I was sur-prised to find that it was eleven o'clock. This was the signal of retiring; and by 12 every nmate of the house was asleep save myself. I ould not sleep—strange visions floated across my brain, and I lay twisting and turning on the bed, in all the agony of sleepless suspense. The clock struck one; its vibrating sound had scarcely died away, when the opening of a shutter and the raising of a sash in one of the lower apartments, conneed me that some one was entering the house A noise followed as of a person jumping from the window-sill to the floor, and then followed the light and noiseless step of one ascending the stairway I slept in the room adjoining the one occupied by the lady; mine was next to the staircase; the step came along the gallery, slow and cautious. I had seized my pistol, and slipped on part of my clothes, determined to watch or listen to the movements seemingly mysterious or suspicious-the sound of steps stopped at my door-then followed one as an plying the ear to the key-hole, und a low breathing convinced me the villain was listening. I stood mo-tionless, the pistol firmly grasped. Not a muscle moved, not a nerve was slackened, for I felt as if heaver had selected me out as the instrument to effect its

I heard the door open softly I also opened unine; and the very moment I stepped into the entry, I caught the glimpse of a tall

An Anecdote The following anecdote from the New Hamp shire Telegraph is too good to be lost: Many years ago there was, in the eastern part of Massachusetts, a worthy old D. D., and although he was an eminently benevolent man and a good christian, yet it must be confessed, that he loved a joke much better than even the most inveterate jokers. It was before church organs were much in use, and it so happened that the choir of his church had recently purchased a double bass viol. Not lar from the church was a large town pasture and in it a huge town bull. One hot Sabbath in the summer he got out of the field, and came bellowing up the stret. About the church there was plenty of untrodden grass, green and good, and Mr. Bull stopped to try its quality, perchance to ascertain it its location had at all improved it flavor; at any rate the reverend doctor was in the midst of his

The people started, and the minister went on.
"Boo-woo-woo." went the bull again, as he ssed another green spot. The parson paused again, and addressed the "I really wish the singers would not tune their instruments while I am preaching, as I remarked before, for it annoys me very much." The people tittered, for they knew by the twinkle of his eye that he knew as well as any one what the real sale of the case was. The minister went on again with his discourse, but he had no

Pearl Powder.

THE object of this Cosmetic is to harmonize and soften the character of the complexion. Being an article entirely different from and much superior to ordinary powder, it requires a small quantity in its application, and yer so identifies itself with the natural appearance as to be imperceptible to the nicest observer. To those ladies particularly who are subject to flushes of the face or neck, to such as are exceeded. are exposed to habitual or occasional agitations, whether nervous or otherwise, the Pearl Powder affords harmless, effectual and most welcome relief; it is also very cool and refreshing in warm weather.

TOILET POWDER.

The Toilet and the Nursery bear equal testimony to the value of this article; in both it is justly esteemed indispensable. To cool the surface of the skim—to conceal the effect of agitation—to allay chafing and irritation, are its functions. The prochafing and irritation, are its functions.
