Whose blo-soms love, innocence, beauty and

Were all sweetly budded for me.
Both summer and winter I cherished it well, And fondly I gave it my name—
And lo I its fair blossoms ne'er faded or fell, But flourished forever the same!

I sat in its shadow by day—and by night
I slept meath its sheltering boughs;
And I talk'd to its whispering leaves with delight, I paid it my earliest vows.

Its whispering leaves seemed to listen with pride

And murmured low words in reply, Smiling sweet as the bonny young bride— That I kissed them 'twere vain to deny! Its fragrance could charms all my sorrow away,

And heighten to rapture my joy;
And while in its soft, loving shadow I lay,
No care could my spirit annoy.
And now, as I gaze on my blossoming tree,
Still flourishing, loving and fair—
O! joy mid the sweet-scented branches to see—
It has borne mega beautiful pear!

A Fool's Pence--- & Story with a Moral.

In the year 183-, in a handsomely furnished por lor which opened out of that noted London gir shop, called "The Punch Bowl," sat its mistress, the gaudily dressed Mrs. Crowder, conversing with an obsequious neighbor.

"Why, Mrs. Crowder, I really must say you have things in the first style! What elegant papering! what noble chairs! what a pair of fire screens! all so bright and fresh! Then the elegant stone co pings, to your windows, and these beautiful French window trames! And you have been sending your daughters to the genteelest boarding-school; you shop is the best fitted in all this part of London.— Where can you find the needful for these things!— Dear Mrs. Crowder, how do you manage?

Mrs. Crowder simpered, and cast a look of sim ple contempt through the half open door, into the shop, filled with draughty customers. "The fool's pence—tis the fool's pence that does it for us." she said—and her voice rose more shrill and louder than usual, with the triumph she felt. Her words reached the ear of one customer, Geo.

Manley, the carpenter, who stood near the counter, Turning his eye upon those around him, he saw pale, sunken cheeks, inflamed eyes, and ragged garments. He then turned them upon the stately apartment; he took through the door into the par-tor, and saw looking glasses and pictures, and gild ng, and fire furniture, and a rich carpet, and Mis Lucy in a silk gown, at her piano; and he thought to himself, how strange it is! how curious it is that all this wretchedness on my left hand, should be made to turn into all the rich finery on my right. "Well, sir—and what's for you?" said a shrill voice, which made the "fool's pence" ring in his

I hope this will be a beginning of better doings on my part, and happier days on yours."

George told his wife, after the children had gone to bed, that when he saw what the pence of the poor could do towards keeping up fine houses and poor count to lowance seeping up the nouses and dressing out the landlord's wife and daughters, and when he thought of his own hardworking and uncomplaining Susan, and the children in want, and almost in rags, while he was sitting drinking night afferinght, destroying his health and strength, he seemed to come to himself at last. He determined from that hour never again to put the intoxicating glass to his lips.

More than a year afterwards, on a Sunday afternoon, as Mrs. Crowder of the Punch Bowl was walking with her daughters to the tea-gardens they waiking with ner daugniers to the tea-gardens they were overtaken by a violent shower of rain, and had become at least half drenched, when they en-tered a comfortable looking house, distinguished by its comforts and tidiness from all others near it.its good natured mistress and her two girls did all child was dead! they could to try and wipe away the rain drop and mud splashes from the ladies' fine dresses and

"I used to be in ragged clothes and out of health," said George Manley, smiling; "now, thank God, I am comfortably clad and in excellent health."
"But how is it," said Mrs. Crowder, "that we never get sight of you?"

"Madam," said he, "I am sure I wish you well: nay, I have reason to thank you, for words of yours first opened my eyes to my own foolish and wicked course. My wife and children were half-naked and course. My wife and conform were nationated and half-starved, only this time last year. Look at them, if you please, now—for sweet contented looks, and decent clothes, I'll match them with any man's wife and children. And now, madam, I tell you as you told a friend of yours one day last year -'tis the FOOL'S PENCE that have done all this fo us. I ought to say, the pence earned by honest industry, and spent so that we can ask the blessing

The bustle of the fight was over; the prisoner The bustle of the light was over, the hostiest had been secured, and the decks washed down, the watch piped, and the schooner had once more relapsed into midnight quiet and repose. I sought my hammock and soon fell asleep. But my slumbers were disturbed by dreams, which, like the visions of a fever, agitated my life, and a thousand that these minuted treather as fingers in a phanother things mingled together, as fingers in a phan-tasmagoria. Suddenly a hand was laid on my shoulder, and starting up, I beheld the surgeon's nate.

"Little Dick, sir, is dying," he said.

I sprang from my hammock. Little Dick was a sort of protege of mine. He was a pale, delicate a sort of protege of inine. He was a pale, delicate child, said to be an orphan, and used to tender nurture; and from the first hour I joined the schooner, my heart yearned towards him, for I too had once been friendless and alone in the world. He had often talked to me in confidence of his mother, whose memory he regarded with holy reverence, while to the other boys of the ship he had little to say; for they were rude and coarse, he delicate and sensitive. Often when they jeered him for his melangebut, he would go anant by himself and weep.

sensitive. Often when they jeered him for his metancholy, he would go apart by himself and weep. He never complained of his lot, though his compations imposed on him continually. Poor lad! his heart was in the grave with his lost parents.

I took a strange interest in him, and had lightened his task as much as possible. During the last fight I had owed my life to him, for he had rushed in just as a sabre stroke was leveled at me, and by interposing his cutlass had averted the deadly blow. In the hurry and confusion I had forgotten to in-In the hurry and confusion I had lorgot quire if he was hurt, though, at the time, I inwardy resolved to exert all my influence to procure him midshipman's warrant in requital of his service. that I leaped to my feet and exclaimed—
"You don't mean it? he is not dying?"

"I lear, sir," said the messenger, "that he can-ot live till morning."

The sufferer did not lie in his usual hammock for it was hung in the very midst of the crew, and the close air around it was too stifling; but he had been carried under an open batchway, and laid there in a little open space about four feet square. From the sound of the ripples I judged the schooner was in motion; while the clear, calm, blue sky, doted with myriads of stars, betokened that the fog had broken away. How calm it smiled down on free wan face of the dying boy. Occasionally a light current of wind—oh, how deliciously cool in that "Well, sir—and what's for you?' said a shrill voice, which made the "fool's pence" ring in his ears.

"A glass of gin, ma'am, is what I am waiting for; but I think I've paid the last fool's pence that I shall put down on this counter for many a long day."

His wife smiled, and said, "Working does not affect my eyes;" and she beekoned to her little boy, who was standing apart in a corner—evidently as a culprit.

"Why, John, what's this I see?" said his father.

"Come and tell me what you have been doing."

"The baker came for his money to-night, and would not leave the loaves without it; but though he was cross and rough, he said mother was not to blame, and that he was sure you had been drinking away all the money: and when he was gone, and that he was sure you had been drinking away all the money: and when he was gone, hand; "dont you know me, Dick?"

He smiled faintly and said: most people are to an orphan boy. I have no way show my gratitude, unless you will take the Bi ble which you will find in my trunk. It's a small offering, I know, but it's all I have."

in the highest degree curious and remarkable.

SCIENTIFIC EVIDENCE!

Baron Liebig in his celebrated work on Anima
Chemistry, says: "An artificial Digestive Fluid, analogous to the Gastrie Juice, may be readily prepared from the muccous membrane of the stomach of the calf, in which various articles of tood, as meat and eggs, will be softened, changed, and digested, just in the same manner as they would be in the human stomach."

Dr. Pereira, in his tangents treating on the World and orgested, Just in the same manner as they would be in the human stomach."

Dr. Pereira, in his famous treatise on "Food and Diet," published by Fowler & Wells, New York, page 35, states the same great fact, and describes the method of preparation. There are few higher authorities than Dr. Pereira.

Dr. Combe, in his valuable writings on the "Physiology of Digestion," observes that "a diminution of the due quantity of the Gastric Junce is a prominent and all-prevailing cause of Dyspepsin," and he states that "a distinguished professor of medicine in London, who was severely afflicted with this complaint, finding everything else to fail, had recourse to the Gastric Juice, obtained from the stomach of living animals, which proceed com-the stomach of living animals, which proved completely successfull." Dr. Graham, author of the famous works of Dr. Granam, author of the lamons works on Wegetable Diet," says: "It is a remarkable fact in physiology, that the stomachs of antinals, macerated in water, impart to the fluid the property of dissolving va. one articles of food, and of effecting a kind of artificial digestion of them in nowise different are the natural digestive process."

AS A DYSPEPSIA CURER, Dr. HOUGHTON'S PEPSIN has produced the most marvellous effects, in curing cases of Debility, Emaciation, Nervous Decline, and Dyspeptic Consumption. It is impossible to give the details of cases in the limits of this advertisement; but authenticated certificates have been given of than Two Hundred Remarkable Curcs, in I delphia, New York and Boston alone. delphia, New York and Boston alone. These were nearly all desperate cases, and the cures were not only rapid and wonderful, but permanent.

It is a great Nervous Antidote, and particularly useful for tendency to Billious disorder, Liver Complaint, Fever and Ague, or badly treated Fever and Ague, and the evil effects of Quinine, Mercury and other drugs upon the Digestive Organs, after a long sickness. Also, for excess in cating, and the too free use of ardent spirits. It almost reconciles health with intemprance. reconciles health with intemprance.
