HOPE FOR THE FUTURE.

The reader will find in the annexed lines, written for the New York Atlas, by our gifted young townsman, Mr. EDWARD M. KLINE, much of that poetic fire which characterizes the writings of the carlier English poets. The versification is easy, the sentiment noble, and the design such as to win the approbation of the Philosopher and Christian. A HOPE FOR THE FUTURE.

Gop! speed the time When ERROR from its envied height shall fall, And TRUTH shall be enshrined upon its pail In every clime;
When all shall hate the one and love the other,
And in each fellow man, behold a-brother.

There is in MAR,
Though poor and trod, upon by wealth and pow
A something soaring far beyond the hour
Which marks life's span 7
A spirit teeming with the eternal thought,
That out of Evil.—Good is ever wrought.

III. Let the free Thought Of man, go out upon the awaken'd ear
Of toiling millions—who will gladly hear,
The Tauru unbought;
But who, with conscious right—by word and deed
Refuse allegiance to the churchman's creed.

Behind the PRESS! And let its many iron tongues proclaim— Throughout the world in Manhood's name, GOD'S HOLINESS! Its tones far reaching as the ambient air, Shall wake to hope, minds wrapt in dark despair

v. Then, without fear ! Speak out, whate'er you think—where'er you find One listening ear among your fellow kind, Inclin'd to hear This truth, engratted on Creation's plan—
The Fatherhood of Gop, and Brotherhood of Man

And boldly pray!
The time may hasten—when no more on earth,
The mother, joyous at her first born's birth,
Yet fears a day,
When Envy—Hate and Error—all combined, Foo often crush the Freedom of the Mind!

"SALLY'S SWEETHEARTS" We make the following amusing extract from

Mrs Gaskill's new book, entitled "Ruth," which has just been reprinted from the English copy: Well, you see, I don't know as I could call them sweethearts, for, excepting John Rawson, who was shut up in a mad house the next week. I never had you might call a downright offer of mar-but once. But I had once; so I may say I had a sweetheart. I was beginning to be aleard though for one likes to be axed; that's but civility; and I remember, after I had turned forty, and afore Jeremiah Dixon had spoken, I began to think John Rawson had perhaps not been so very mad, and that I had done ill to treat lightly his offer, as a madmelted from the hilly hollows—yet on you bare

I had done ill to treat lightly his offer, as a mad-I had done ill to treat lightly his offer, as a mad-man's, if it was to be the only one I was ever to twig, that quivers at so light a touch, sits a fair have: I don't mean as I'd have had him, but I thought was to come over again, I'd speak respectful to folk, and say it were only his way to go about on all fours, but that he was a sensible man in most things. However, I'd bave my laugh, and so had others, at my crazy lover, and it was too late now I thought it would be no bad thing to be tried again; but I little thought the trial would come when it did. You see, Saturday night is a leisure night in counting houses and such like places, while its the busiest of all for servants. Well, it was a Saturday night, and I'd my baize apron on and the tails of my bedgown pinned together behind, down on my knees, pipe claying the kitchen, when a knock comes to the back door.

"Come in." says I; but it knocked again, as if it were too stately to open the door for itself; so I got up rather cross, and opened the door; and there stood Jerry Dixon, Mr. Holt's head clerk—only he So I stood, stopping at the door, fancying he wanted to speak to master; but he kind of pushed past me, and telling me summat about the weather, (as if I could not see it for myself,) he took a chair and sat down by the oven, "Cool and easy!" thought I; meaning hisself, not his place, which I knew mu

Well, it seemed no use standing waiting for my gentleman to go; not that he had much to say, either; but he kept twirling his hat round and round and smoothing the nap on't with the back of his hand. So I squatted down to my work, and thinks I, I shall be on my knees all ready if he puts up a prayer, for I knew he was a Methodee by bringing up, and had lately turned over to master's way ot thinking; and them Methodees are terrible hands at unexpected prayers when one least look for 'em; I say I can't like their way of taking one by surprise, as it were; but then I'm a parish clerk's daugh-ter, and could never demean myself to dissenting fashions, always save and except Mr. Thurstan's bless him. However, I'd been caught once or twice unawares, so this time I tho't I'd be up to it, and moved a dry duster wherever I went, to kneel upor in case he began when I was in a wet place

By and by I thought, if the man would pray it would be a blessing, for it would prevent his send-ing his eyes after me wherever I went; for when they takes to praying they shuts their eyes and quivers the lids in a queer kind of way—them dis senters does. I can speak pretty plain to you, for you're bred in the church like myself, and must find it out o' the way as I do to be among dissenting folk. God forbid that I should speak disrespecful of Master Thurstan and Miss Faith, though think of them as church members or di senters, but just as Christians.

But to come back to Jerry. First, I always tried to be cleaning at his back; but when he wheeled round so as always to face me, I tho't I'd try a different game. So, says I, "Master Dixon, I ax your pardon, but I must pipeclay under your chair.

will you please to move. Well, he moved; and by and by I was at him again with the same words; and after that, again and again till he were always moving about withis chair behind him, like a snail as carries his house on his back. And the great gaupers never seed that I was pipe-claying the same place twice over. At last I got desperate cross, he were so in my way; so I made two big crosses on the tails of his brown coat; for you see, wherever he went up or down, he drew out the tails of his coat from under him, and stuck them thro' the bars of the chai and flesh and blood could not resist pipeclaying them; for him, and a pretty brushing he'd have, reckon, to get it off again.

Well, at length he clears his throat uncomm loud; so I spread my duster, and shuts my eyes al ready; but when dought comed of it, I opened my eyes a little bit to see what he was about. My word! if there he wasn't down on his knees, right facing me staring as hard ashe could. Well I thought it would be hard work to stand that, if he made a long ado; so I shut my eyes again, and tried to think serious, as became what I fancied was coming; but forgive mel but. I thought why couldn't the fellow go in and pray wil Master Thurstan; as bad always a calm spirit ready our prayer interest. a calm spirit ready for prayer, instead o' me, who had my dresser to scour, let alone an apron to iron. At last he says:
"Sally, will you oblige me with your hand?"

So I thought it were, may be, Methodee fashion to pray hand in hand, and I'll not deny but I wish ed I'd washed it better after black leading the kit

But, says he, "My dear Sally, dirty or clean, it's all the same to me, seeing I'm only speaking in a figuring way What I'm asking on my bended knees is, that you'd please to be so kind as to be my wedded wife; week fter next will suit me, it it's agreeable to you." My work! I were up on my feet in a moment.been thinking it would be agreeable to be axed.— But all at once I couldn't abide the chap. "Sir," says I, trying to look shame faced, as become the occasion, but, for all that, feeling a twittering round. "Master Dixon, I am obleeged to you for the com-pliment; and thank ye all the same; but I think I'd refer a single life." He looked mighty taken aback; but in a minute he cleared up, and was as sweet as ever. He still kept on his knees, and I wished he'd take himself up; but I reckon he tho't it would give force to his pretty in the man to say it; and it put me up a bit.

"As for that, neither you or I can tell, Master Dixon. You're not the first chap as I have had lown on his knees, as you know, and maybe you'll not be the last. Any how, I've no wish to change my condition just now."

heumatiz just before winter." With that he got up, stiff enough. He looked as sulky a chap as ever I clapped eyes on. And he was so black and cross, I thought I'd done well (whatever came of the pig) to say no to him.—
"You may live to repent this," says he, very red "But I'll not be too hard upon ye, I'll give you an other chance. I'll let you have the night to think about it, and I'll just call in to hear your second houghts, after chapel to-morrow."

Well now! did you ever hear the like? But this is the way with all of them men, thinking so much of theirselves, and that's but ask and have. They'v never had me, though, and I shall be sixty-one next Martinmas, so there is not much time left for them to try me, I reckon—Well when Jeremiah said that he put me up more than ever, and I says,
"My first thoughts, second thoughts, and third

"My first thoughts, second thoughts, and third thoughts is all one and the same; you've but tempt ed me once, and that was when you spoke of your pig. But of yourself you're nothing to boast on, and so I'll bid you good night, and I'll keep my manners, or else, if I told the truth, I should say it had been a great loss of time listening to you. But Il be civil—so good night.

Birds of Spring.

To those who love nature, there is a heart-thrill differing from every other at the song of the first spring bird. Not a blade of grass has turnedits velvet cheek to the sun, not a bud swollen from the moisture that gives tint and coloring to leaf and tathered thing, pouring out as if he had not enough on give, the first beautiful flute notes of spring.

Seldom we think how much we are depende of those tiny creatures for the most delicious ha piness. It is a joy that is so quiet—steals upon the senses like the dawn of love upon the night of un consciousness. Let the mind be occupied as it will the most delicate thoughts and reveries, fine as the texture of which dreams are woven, is broken not by the gentle music. And often comes the though that this wealth of melody is as free to the lowlis as the greatest of God's children. No lord of the manor can bribe those innocent things to sing alone in his beautiful parks, though he hang a golder cage on every branch of his grand old trees. Hedge, though bordered with flowers of more bloom and brilliance, holds no sweeter honey, for bee and bird, than the straggling limbs of wild rose-bushe and honeysuckle gathered against the homelies cottage. To the untaught ear of the ploughman as he turns the rich black turnow, the far off sounds of music flung from every recees of that thick grov are sweeter than the trained notes of the most skill-nl human voice.

The little rustic bounding through aisles of the fragrant pine woods, looks up with wonder, and reverentially checks her mirth. There, upon the utmost height of the cloud-embracing canopy, sits the feathered warbler; a speck of gold tinged with crimson and blue, with two little wings under which the tiny head is buried at every interval of silence—and from that speck of gold, crimson and blue, come all those wonderful gushes of song, clear and brilliant, filling heaven with its rich melody, Sweet birds of spring, ye can know nothing the deep joy that wakes responsive music in man an humble heart. But He who fashioned you for Paradise, and placed you in the midst of a sinles and glorious world, know how in our sadness a the withdrawal of innocence, we should long to something that spoke through nature of the los Eden. And so in the great temples of the mighty woods, and among the lowliest shrubs and flowers

He has placed ye, beautiful birds, to give blessin

If you perform an act of charity, they question your motives, if you exhibit skill in your profession, they pretend to regard you an over-rated man; if you produce something de-cidedly meritorious, they ridicule and depreciate its worth; and if you originate a thought or machine they declare you a plagiarist. In their estimation your writings are stupid, and full of fautology; you conversation unprofitable; the work of your hands valueless. And yet ask them to do what you aimed at, and failed in, according to them, and they have not even the ability to try. They are all, in fact what they feign you to be, end unfit for everything but fault-finding, crying down people of merit, and slandering worth. They are envious, jealous, and full of cart. Incapable of doing what you do, and therefore envious of your talent; too dull to command respect, and consequently jealous of that you receive; incompetent to produce a thought, and always ready to carn at what you express. They ways ready to carp at what you express re of the race of Diogenes, without his ability leed them not, reader they are harmless, who are to be found, look around you—your circle of acquaintance will furnish one, no doubt, of the class—Com. "Pledge with wine-pledge with wine." cried the young and thoughtles Harvey Wood; "pledge with wine," ran through the brilliant crowd The beautiful bride grew pale—the decisive hour had come. She pressed her white hands together, and the leaves of the bridal wreath trembled on her brow; her breath came quicker, her heart beat wilder. "Yes, Marion, lay aside your scruples for this

Pouring a brimming beaker, they held it with tempting smiles towards Marion. She was state very pale, though more composed; and her hands shook not, as smiling back, she greatly accepted scarcely had she done so, when every hand was ar rested by her piercing exclamation of "oh! how terrible!"
"What is it?" cried one and all, thronging to

And in their midst lies a manly form—but his cheek how deathly, his eve wild with the fire of fever. One friend stands beside him -nay, I should say kneels; for see, he is pillowing that poor head upon his breast.

Genius in ruins—oh! the high, holy-looking brow why should death mark it, and he so young? Look how he throws back the damp curls! see him clasp his bands! hear his thrilling shricks for life! mark how he clutches at the form of his compan ion, imploring to be saved. Oh! hear him call piteously his father's name—see him twine his fingers together as he shricks for his sister—his only his distant native laud. " See !" she exclaimed, while the bridal party

The friend beside him is weeping awe-stricken, the dark men move silently weeping awe-stricken, the dark men move silently away, and leave the living and the dying together."

There was a hush in that princely parlor, broken only by what seemed a smoshered sob from some manly bosom. The bride stood yet upright, with quivering lip, and tears stealing to the outward edge of her lashes. Her' beautiful arm had lost its tension, and the glass, with its little troubled red waves come slowly towards the roaps of her

The True Digestive Fluid or Gastric Juice

The True Digestive Fluid or Gastric Juice

PREPARED from Rennet, or the fourth Stomach of the Ox, a fier directions of Baron Liesue;
the great Physiological Chemist, by J. S. Hough; ton, M. D., Philadelphia, Pa.

This is a truly wonderful remedy for Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Jaundice, Liver Complaint, Constipation, and Debility, curing after Nature's own method, by Nature's own Agent, the Gastric Juice.

Half a teaspoonful of Pepsin, infused in water, will digest or dissolve, Five, Pounds of Roast Beef
in about two hours, out of the stomach.

Principle of the Gastric Juice—the solvent of the food, the purifying, preserving and sumulating agent of the stomach and intestines. It is extracted from the digestive stomach of the Ox, thus formagent of the stomach and intestifies. It is extracted from the digestive stomach of the Ox, thus ferming an Artificial Digestive Fluid, precisely like the natural Gastric Juice in its chemical powers, and furnishing a complete and perfect substitute for it By the aid of this preparation, the pains and evils of Indigestion and Dyspepsia are removed, just as they would be by a healthy stomach. It is doing wonders for dyspeptics, curing cases of Debility, Emaciation, Nervous Decline, and Dyspeptic Consumption, supposed to be on the verge of the grave The scientific evidence upon which it is based, is in the highest degree curious and remarkable.

n the highest degree curious and remarkable. SCIENTIFIC EVIDENCE!
Baron Liebig in his celebrated work on Anima hemistry, says: "An artificial Digestive Fluid, nalogous to the Gastric Juice, may be readily prepared from the mucous membrane of the ston ch of the calf, in which various articles of food. as men and eggs, will be softened, changed, and digested, just in the same manner as they would be in the human stomach.

digested, just in the same manner as they would be in the human stomach."

"Dr. Pereira, in his lamous treatise on "Food and Diet," published by Fowler & Wells, New York, page 35, states the same great fact, and describes the method of preparation. There are few higher authorities than Dr. Pereira.

Dr. Combe, in his valuable writings on the "Physiology of Digestion," observes that "a dimination of the due quantity of the Gastric Junce is a prominent and all-prevailing cause of Dyspepsia," and he states that "a distinguished prolessor of medicine in Loudon, who was severely afflicted with this complaint, finding everything else to fail, had recourse to the Gastric Juice, obtained from the stomach of living animals, which proved completely successfull."

Dr. Graham, author of the famous works on "Vegetable Diet," says: "It is a remarkable fact in physiology, that the stomachs of animals, macerated in water, impart to the fluid the property of dissolving va. ous articles of food, and of effecting a kind of artificial digestion of them in nowies diffreent mro the natural digestive process."
